EDITOR LIKES FARMING.

Ransom Metcalfe Formerly of Duluth and Virginia Raising Fruit.

Virginia, Minn., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The life of a farmer in the North Yakima, Washington, valley, appeals to Ransom Metcalfe, formerly connected with Duluth and Virginia newspapers, according to a letter received by his father, Robert Metcalfe. The son says that he is very favorably impressed with the far Western country. He likes the people, the country and the climate and regrets very much that he did not take the advice of Horace Greely and go West years ago.

Mr. Metcalfe is doing well in his Western home and hopes within a few years to rank with the big fruit growers of that section. He has started in a modest way, but if energy and good hard work counts for anything Mr. Metcalfe will make a winning.

The many Virginians, who are located in the Yakima valley are all doing well he writes, and the prospect for a big crop this year appears to be encouraging.

The deceased was about 40 years of age, an Italian, and was employed at the Troy mine, and resided near Eveleth in the Italian colony on the Ely lake road. Bradda was well known in this vicinity and is an old range resident. He is survived by his wife and three small children.

INCENDIARY FIRE DESTROYS CAMPS

Forty Men Sleeping in Quarters at Marble Lose Everything.

Marble, Minn., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fire broke out at 1 a. m., Sunday, at Mike Milanovich's camp here completely destroying it and a vacant camp adjoining. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary origin, it began in the vacant building in the interior among some bedding, which had been stored there, and before the inmates of the occupied camp were conscious of the fire the whole camp was aflame.

It contained about forty men and several of them lost considerable money they had stored in trunks. Nothing was saved. The loss of the buildings amounts to about $1,200, with no insurance. This is the second fire of its nature among the Austrian camps this spring and the guilty parties, if located, will be dealt with accordingly.

DRUNKEN MINER MURDERS FRIEND

Vito Vitatiswitch Is Fatally Wounded By Grandawa Hopiwitch Near Gilbert.

Eveleth, Minn., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The body of Vito Vitatiswitch lies at Gleason's morgue here, he having died last night from a 44-caliber bullet wound believed to have been fired by Grandawa Hpoliwitch, about 5 o'clock last night, as the two were coming from a Gilbert resort to town. Both had been drinking and according to the stories Hopiwitch, who was apparently a friend of the murdered man, suddenly drew his weapon and fired, then fled. He is still at large, although officers are making strenuous efforts to locate him.

Leaves Dying Man.

Vitatiswitch was left on the ground by Hopiwitch, who hurriedly left the scene of the shooting. Vitatiswitch was found by passersby and the Gilbert police immediately notified, Officer Joe Janiswitch and Dr. Barrett, both of Gilbert, answering the call, and found Vitatiswitch lying in a hollow by the road in a very serious condition, but no signs whatever of his assailant.

Vitatiswitch was taken into the Murphy residence in a dying condition. The bullet that entered his right breast, had lodged in his ribs, close to the skin, and was easily removed, but little time could be spent upon that detail by the attending physician. Several hours afterwards he died.

Searching for the Murderer.

Strenuous efforts are being made by the police of Gilbert and Sparta to locate Hopiwitch. He is described as about 5½ feet tall, very poorly dressed, a Montenegro, and about 35 years of age. At about 8:30 last evening, he was seen in the vicinity of the old Sparta dump, but immediately took to the woods and is believed to be hiding in the woods near Gilbert and Sparta. The police of all the range towns have been notified of the crime, and the escape of the murderer will be difficult.

Both men are employed as miners, Hopiwitch having worked at the Gilbert mine for about a year, while Vitatiswitch has been employed at the Genoa mine for some time past. The two men resided in the Montenegro camps near Sparta, and are believed to have been good friends, but that their hilarious time at the Gilbert resort accounted for a quarrel and subsequent fatality. Vitatiswitch is about 35 years of age. The two men came to this vicinity about a year ago.

band's elbow, listening, suggesting, encouraging and hoping.

Sure Notes Were Stolen.

Prosecutor Virgil Conkling is satisfied that the grand jury notes which Dr. Hyde's counsel produced in court last Wednesday were stolen from Ruby B. Garrett, an assistant prosecutor. The notes, he said, were taken from the pocket of Mr. Garrett on April 16, while he was riding on a street car.

Judge Latshaw said he intended to leave to the prosecutor the whole investigation of the loss of the notes.

The subject of the hypodermic injection which was given Margaret Swope by Dr. Hyde was among the first touched on in the cross-examination of Miss Houlihan today.

"Is it not true," asked Mr. Walsh, "that a hypodermic injection of ten causes a hard lump to raise on the arm?"

"Sometimes," Miss Houlihan answered.

Q.—"Margaret's arm was sensitive to these injections, and you had been ordered to cease giving them to her. I believe?"

A.—"The arm was sensitive."

Q.—"You gave her four injections Monday, under the direction of Dr. Twyman?"

A.—"I can't remember."

Q.—"Her heart action was weak, intermittent?"

A.—"It was weak."

The nurse told of a visit she made to Dr. Hyde's room in the Swope house one night when the patient's temperature began to fall rapidly from 102 to 98.

"I told him this. He did not rise; but told me he had done all he could do."

Typhoid Victim a Witness.

Miss Margaret Swope took the witness stand at 11:45 o'clock. The girl had not fully recovered from the effects of typhoid fever. She is 21 years old.

When Miss Swope took the stand, Dr. Hyde and his wife leaned forward, and listened intently to her testimony.

Referring to the report that Dr. Hyde once took bottled water to the Swope house for the use of himself and his wife, the witness said:

"Before Col. Hunton's death Dr. Hyde used to drink cistern water at our house. But when they came there on the Sunday before Thanksgiving, Dr. Hyde brought bottled water for the use of himself and Mrs. Hyde. The rest of the family drank cistern water.

There was nothing harmful about the strychnine tonic which Col. Swope was accustomed to taking, testified O. H. Gentry, and Independence, Mo., druggist, in the trial today. This druggist filled the prescription for James Moss Hunton for many years. Hunton induced Col. Swope to take the medicine.

"This tonic," said Mr. Gentry, "is a general one for building up the system and adding red corpuscles to the blood. It contains a small amount of strychnine, but is harmless."

Drank Before the Jury.

As he talked he held in his hand a five-ounce bottle of the medicine. As proof that he had faith in his own goods occasionally he uncorked the bottle and took a drink of its contents.

Besides compounding the tonic, Mr. Gentry said he sold Mr. Hunton many other kinds of medicine which went into the Swope house. None of them contained cyanide of potassium or other poison in dangerous quantities, he said. Dr. Hyde wrote some of these prescriptions. On Dec. 9, however, said the druggist, he sold to some of the Swope family two tubes of hypodermic strychnine.

The defense by this means expected to explain the alleged presence of strychnine in Col. Swope's body.

Dr. Hyde faced the first of his alleged victims shortly before noon today, when Miss Margaret Swope took the stand.

The physician is indicted on three counts, charging him with poisoning her.

No witness that has been before the jury has appeared to interest Dr. Hyde and his wife so much as this girl. Both followed the witness' testimony closely and watched her carefully.

Miss Swope had just begun to discuss her illness when court adjourned for the noon recess.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

That Al W. Martin's production of Uncle Tom's Cabin is considered an instructive teacher has been demonstrated by the number of holidays granted school children, that they might attend the extra matinees which have been given in most of the large cities. "The Prince of Tonight."

Plenty of pretty girls, handsomely gowned, and funny comedians are promised at the Lyceum very soon, when Henry Woodruff is seen in "The Prince of Tonight." Mort H. She, however, does not love him until, through the aid of an old gardener, a miracle is performed, when a century plant blooms. After many complications, everything turns out happily. The book and lyrics are by Adams and Hough, and the music by Joseph E. Howard. Among some of the song hits are: "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now," "Follow the Rainbow Trail," "I Fell in Love on Monday," "Tonight Will Never Come Again" and "You're a Dear Old World After All." A company, numbering over sixty people, is carried.

Boat Club Opera.

Cass Lake, Minn., April 25.—The good news that the secretary of interior had given notice that the Indian lands in the vicinity of Cass Lake and Deer River would be opened to settlement immediately brought great joy to the many who have been eagerly waiting for such action of the interior department. Shortly after the news arrived it seemed that it was known from one end of the state to the other, as men and women could be seen hurrying in all directions with all possible speed getting ready to settle on some particular piece of Uncle Sam's domain. It is possible and quite probable that within a few days the land office doors will be crowded with men waiting for the day of filing to arrive.

As soon as the glad tidings arrived the flag was raised at full mast over the Times office building wherein are the offices of Judge Ives, M. N. Koll and P. M. Larsen, three men who have fought hard and valiently for a number of years for what has at last been realized. These public spirited citizens felt that it was a great day for Northern Minnesota and in observance of it the old star spangled banner was raised.

There is in the neighborhood of 30,000 acres of this land in the vicinity of Cass Lake.

Supervisor Marshall of the forestry department has a large crew of men at work digging up the 5,000 seedlings which will be shipped to the Michigan supervisor for re-planting.

For Aged People

Old Folks Should Be Careful in Their Selection of Regulative Medicine.

With advanced age comes inactive bowel movement and sluggish liver. Nature is unable to perform her proper functions and requires assistance. Otherwise, there is constant suffering from constipation and attendant evils. Old folks should never use physic that is harsh and irritating.

We have a safe, dependable and altogether ideal remedy that is particularly adapted to the requirements of aged persons and people of weak constitution who suffer from constipation or other bowel disorder. We are so certain that it will completely relieve those complaints and give absolute satisfaction in every particular that we offer them with our personal guarantee that they shall cost the user nothing if the fail to substantiate our claims. This remedy is called Rexall Orderlies.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy. They have a soothing, healing, strengthening, tonic and regulative action upon the dry mucous lining and the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel. They produce a natural, successive contraction and relaxation of the muscular fibres of the bowel walls, generating a wavelike motion which forces their contents onward and outward; thus stimulating nature in perfect bowel movement. They tone up and strengthen the nerves and muscles and restore the bowels and associate organs to more vigorous and healthy activity. They may be taken at any time without inconvenience; do not cause any griping, nausea, diarrhoea, excessive looseness, flatulence or other disagreeable effect. Try Rexall Orderlies on our guarantee: 36 tablets 25 cents, and 12 tablets 10 cents. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Duluth only at our store—The Rexall Store—E. M. NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

WAITING FOR NEW BISHOP

Crookston Catholics Looking Forward With Interest to Bishop Corbett's Coming.

Installation of Duluthian Early in June Will Be Most Notable Event.

Crookston, Minn., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Rev. Father J. Wurn, who arrived from his former parish at Aitkin last week to assume charge of St. Mary's parish in this city, preached his first sermon yesterday morning. It was more in the line of a heart to heart talk than a sermon in which he explained fully what his mission was, what might be expected of him and what he would expect of his parishoners. His talk was a most interesting one and indications point to a most hearty co-operation on the part of his parishoners to further his efforts in building up the parish, adding to the membership and elevating the spiritual plane of the parish in every way.

The near approach of the coming of Bishop Timothy Corbett and his impressive installation as the bishop of the Crookston diocese following his confirmation as one of the six new bishops at St. Paul on May 19, has aroused widespread interest throughout the territory to be included in the new see of Crookston.

Be Installed In June.

The date for the installation has not been set, but will probably be about a month after the confirmation, or the middle or latter part of June. The coming of the new bishop means a great deal to this section of the state. A cathedral, a bishop's residence, and a school will all have to be erected. The plans regarding this work will not be known until after the arrival of Bishop Corbett.

The parishioners of Sacred Heart cathedral of Duluth have presented Bishop Corbett with vestments and other accessories of a priest and bishop to the value of $5,000; and, at a recent gathering of the same parishioners, resolutions were passed to present him with a check upon his arrival in Crookston for a sum not less than $15,000, to be expended in the erection of the new buildings necessary to Crookston. This is very encouraging to the Catholics in the diocese of Crookston, which includes a large territory, and where, also, a very large expenditure will be necessary.

Archbishop to Install.

The installation will be a most impressive affair. It will be under the personal direction of Archbishop John Ireland. The Knights of Columbus of Duluth will attend the ceremonies in a body; and many church dignitaries from other points will be present, together with practically every priest in the new diocese, together with prominent Catholics and Knights of Columbus from Grand Forks, East Grand Forks, Moorhead, Fargo, St. Cloud and the large membership from all sections in Northwestern Minnesota, who belong to the Crookston branch of the order.

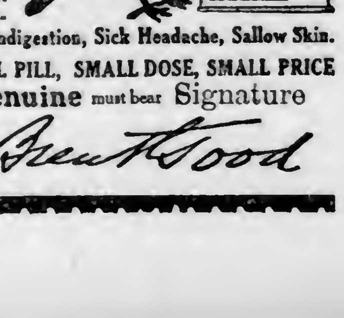
The installation will be the most remarkable religious gathering ever held in Northwestern Minnesota, and from this time forward the preparations for the gathering will progress rapidly.

RUSHING THE SOO TO COMPLETION

New North Dakota Feeder Is to Be Ready Early Next Winter.

Thief River Falls, Minn., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Soo line of railway is rushing the work of surveying and grading several branch lines to connect with the Wheatline in North Dakota, with all dispatch. This line runs directly west from Thief River Falls 300 miles, to Kenmare, N. D. Surveys have been completed in the vicinity of Drake, N. D., and near that point grading was begun last week. A large crew of surveyors is at work some distance east of Devils Lake, while other crews are running lines and grades at various other places. At Medford, where the new southwest branch will connect with the Wheatline, seven surveys have been run to determine the most level route into Medford. The contracts for grading these branches all contain a clause requiring the completion of the work by Dec. 1 next, so as to insure the road for the fall movement of grain to Duluth.

The Soo draftsmen last week completed the survey and specifications for the new roundhouse that will be constructed here this summer. It will not be an addition to the old roundhouse, as was at first thought likely, but will be a fifteen-stall house. A pumping station will be relocated and additional yard room will be prepared for the increase of business incident to the completion of the Thief River Falls-Duluth short line. A new depot in this city will also be erected this summer.



Duluthian on a Visit.

Rush City, Minn., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hans Kirschner of Duluth visited at home over Sunday, while on his way to Chicago. He will return in a few months to open the new Holland hotel at Duluth, which will be completed by that time.

IS MANGLED BY BREAKING PLOW

Shocking Fate of Farmhand While Working in North Dakota.

Napoleon, N. D., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—A horrible death was met by Ole Aszeldson, aged 21 years, near Wishek, McIntosh county. He was engaged as a general utility man about a steam breaking plow operating on farms in this county. While walking beside the engine to protect himself from cold winds, he stumbled, falling under one of the big drive wheels. No intimation of the terrible affair was given any of the other men about the engine till they discovered his mangled remains in the plows. So heavy was the engine that his body had been crushed almost flat. Aszeldson was a Scandinavian who had been in this country only a few months.

BRIGHT HOOSIER LAWYER A WRECK

Sad Case of Attorney Edwards of Anderson, Ind., Who Loses His Mind.

Carrington, N. D., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Continual worry over domestic and financial affairs, combined with ill health, caused the mind of Frank Edwards, once a bright and leading attorney of Anderson, Ind., to give way, and on Saturday he was committed by the board of commissioners of Foster county to the North Dakota Hospital for the Insane. Edwards came to this county a year ago, believing that the change in climate and the doing away of the old associations would benefit him, but he has steadily grown worse. He was a leading member of the Elks lodge of his home city.

Voluntarily Starts for Asylum.

Probably one of the most peculiar cases of insanity that has ever developed in this state came to light when Edward Duffield of Bottineau was picked up by local officials. He says that he was en route to the state asylum at Jamestown for treatment, knowing that his mind was giving away. Duffield declares that financial matters have been the cause of his troubles, and, when a week ago, he felt his mental powers were at the breaking point he started for Jamestown, but only got to Carrington.

Another case of supposed insanity, but in which the commission released the person examined, was that of Mrs. Mary Fraunfelter of Johnson township. Complaint was lodged against her by several neighbors, but was not upheld at the examination.

DROWNS IN A TUB.

Tragic Fate of 11-Months-Old North Dakota Infant.

Linton, N. D., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Death by drowning in a tub of water on the kitchen floor was the fate of the 11-months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Van Soest, residing near here. The child was one of twins and was seated in a high chair when the mother had occasion to leave the house for a few minutes. When she returned the chair had been tipped over and the baby was lying in the tub of water, face down, and life almost extinct. Death occurred a few minutes later.

BISMARCK MAY LOSE DIOCESE HEADQUARTERS.

Richardton, N. D., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Efforts are being made by Father Vincent Wehrle, the newly appointed bishop of the Bismarck diocese, to bring the diocese headquarters to Richardton, instead of to Bismarck. The fact that the Catholics of this section have built up a monastery that far excels anything of the kind in this state, will be the principal argument favoring the change. It is claimed, also, that better work could be done from Richardton than from Bismarck.

Father Wehrle was beautifully honored by the citizens of Richardton in recognition of his appointment. On his return to the city from a trip to Glen Ullin, he was met at the depot by a great procession, which led by 100 girls robed in white, proceeded to the abbey where several addresses of congratulation were made, and where a purse of $500 was presented the newly named bishop.

POLK COUNTY DIVISION ADVOCATES AGAIN BUSY.

East Grand Forks, Minn., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—County division talk is again rife in Polk county and the probabilities are that the old fight will again be opened soon. It is the belief of the supporters of division that the proposition would recieve more general support now than it has in previous years, and for that reason they propose to bring it to a vote again if possible.

Division in such a manner that East Grand Forks will have an opportunity of becoming the seat of government of the new county is the hope of local residents.

Suing For $50,000.

Crookston, Minn., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Great Northern railroad is made defendant in three personal injury suits, aggregating $50,000, started here. A wreck at the "Y" at Casselton, N. D., on New Year's day was the cause of two of the suits, and an accident in the Crookston yards was the basis of the third.

The largest demands are made by Harry Quesnel, a 22-year-old brakeman, acting in the capacity of switchman in the Great Northern yards at Redland, near Crookston. He asks $30,000.

Anthony L. Trost was the fireman on the freight engine at Casselton and he asks for $15,000.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Galena, Kans.—"A year ago last March I fell, and a few days after there was soreness in my right side. In a short time a bunch came and it bothered me so much at night I could not sleep. It kept growing larger and by fall it was as large as a hen's egg. I could not go to bed without a hot water bottle applied to that side. I had one of the best doctors in Kansas and he told my husband that I would have to be operated on as it was something like a tumor caused by a rupture. I wrote to you for advice and you told me not to get discouraged but to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did take it and soon the lump in my side broke and passed away."—Mrs. R. R. Huey, 713 Mineral Ave., Galena, Kans.

FUNDS FOR THE WHITE PLAGUE FIGHT.

In its short existence the organized fight in Duluth against consumption has accomplished uncalculated good.

It has been a center from which the education which arms society and the individual for the fight against tuberculosis has spread.

It has employed a visiting nurse who has visited the sick, ministered to their needs, taught them how to get well, and instructed their associates in self-protection against contagion.

This work must be continued. Until it began, there was no organized fight in Duluth against the insidious plague which saps the vitality of communities and the nation. The good it has done already is a sufficient assurance of the good it will do in the future.

To keep this work going money is needed. The finance committee of the local organization issued a call through The Herald Saturday for $3,000, the modest amount needed to prolong its work another year. That call should be heeded. Those who respond will know that their contributions are going for an excellent purpose, and that they will be expended wisely and effectively.

Those who wish to help in this work may send their contributions to any member of the finance committee, which is composed of P. S. Anneke, G. G. Hartley, B. G. Segog, W. D. Underhill and John G. Williams, or to C. L. Rakowsky, general secretary of the organization. All contributions will be acknowledged through The Herald.

MAKE THE CENSUS COMPLETE.

This is the last week of the census in Duluth. It must be closed by Saturday, and those who are not enumerated by that time will go uncounted.

Every citizen of Duluth wishes the count to be complete, so that his home city may make as good a showing as possible in comparison with other cities. Therefore it is the duty of every citizen to help make the count complete.

He can do this by answering the enumerator's questions promptly, fully and cheerfully.

He can do this by studying the list of questions, which is published in The Herald every evening, and by getting his answers ready so that the enumerator will not be delayed, but can pass on quickly to those whose prejudice or stupidity sometimes make his work difficult.

He can do this by making sure that he is counted, and that everybody he knows is counted.

If you have been overlooked, call up the Commercial club and tell about it.

If you know anybody who is out of town, but who ought to be counted as a citizen of Duluth, call up the Commercial club and tell about that.

Do what you can to make the count complete. It is your duty as a citizen, and it is to your interest as a citizen.

THE REMEDY—CITY DOCKS.

Duluth, somewhat behind-hand but still, perhaps, in time to accomplish something, is beginning to wake up to the need of providing water-front facilities that will redeem lake traffic from the oppression of railroad monopoly.

A little ground has been found which the city can claim as its own and it may be that if it looks more carefully it will find more.

Not long ago it was stated in The Herald that property along the bay front across the canal was being bought up by speculative and enterprising individuals who look forward to the time when the property will be needed for docks. It was suggested by The Herald at that time, that the city ought to take steps to get for itself, as dock property, the equivalent of the area set apart for streets in this bay front section. It seemed feasible, since the property-owners, by agreeing to such a course, could make their holdings more compact and more useful for dock property with the platted streets vacated. We have not heard that anything has been done along this line.

The need of public docks grows more pressingly apparent every day. The situation was brought out very clearly by the interstate commerce commission in the recent Jennison case, relating to lake and rail rate on flour from Minneapolis to the Atlantic.

Package freight is carried almost exclusively in vessels owned by the railroads. By this ownership, the railroads are enabled to throttle the competition of cheap lake navigation, keeping lake rates up to a point where they do not offer serious competition to the railroads.

Why, then, do not independent vessels step in and take the business? Because the railroads also own the docks and warehouses.

If Duluth is to keep the advantage of cheap water navigation, it must see to it that independent vessels can find independent docks and warehouses, even if it has to build them itself. At any rate, it should possess ample dock property, to be improved by itself or leased to others who will improve it under restrictions preventing monopoly.

Said the interstate commerce commission in the Jennison case: "Independent boats that were originally built and fitted to engage in package freight business are unable to engage in that business because defendants (the boat lines owned by the railroads) control the terminals and refuse to permit independent boats to load or unload thereat, and refuse to receive packages from independent boats." The operation of monopoly never was set forth more clearly than in these words from an official source.

The remedy is quite as clear as the disease: the city must protect itself by breaking up the dock-monopoly, and by providing terminals which independent operators can use. Then the railroads will no longer be able to juggle lake freights so as to deprive the people of the benefits of cheap waterway navigation. This cheap waterway navigation has been secured at great expense to the government, and it is unthinkable that the benefits that flow out of it shall be dammed at their source by railroad monopolists.

SYSTEM IN PARK WORK.

That was very good advice indeed which Theodore Wirth, superintendent of the Minneapolis park system, gave to Duluth in an interview with The Herald last week.

First, he said, must come a comprehensive system; and that system should be big enough and broad enough to take care of the needs of the Ultimate Duluth—not the Duluth of today or tomorrow, but the Duluth that every citizen looks to see in the not very distant future.

"The laying out of a comprehensive system to be followed out in all work," said Mr. Wirth, "even if it takes a thousand years to work out, is a most necessary start for a park system."

Next after having the system, is to get the land while it is cheap. "Get the land," said Mr. Wirth, "for it can be secured at less expense early in a city's history than it can be later. Then work out the system as rapidly as possible."

Clearly, better results will be attained from work toward the completion of a system than from work based on no particular system at all. It is the same with the parks as it is with county roads. If a system of county roads is provided, and all work is bent toward carrying out that system, better results will be secured with the same amount of money than can be secured when no particular system is followed.

"When there is a little money to spend," continued Mr. Wirth, "spend it where it will make the best showing. Don't scatter a few thousands of dollars all over a city, but spend it where the best results can be obtained. Do everything in the best way possible. When a road is built, let it be a good road, and the cost of maintenance will be less. Let the same be done with every other piece of work. If there is only a little money, spend it in one place, and get results with it. People seeing these results will want more of the same, and will provide the means."

Duluth has an excellent park board, and it needs no such advice as this. With the slender sums that have been provided, it has wrought exceedingly well. Yet it can do nothing without money, and money will not be forthcoming unless there is public interest in the parks.

The time will come very soon when Duluth will be sadly regretful that it didn't buy more land for parks when land was cheap. It will be sorry, too, that it did not create a comprehensive scheme of parkbuilding. It costs little to create the scheme, even though to carry it out might call for millions. Having the scheme, and working deftly toward its realization, the development of that system and the development of public interest to the point of yielding larger sums for park purposes will go hand in hand.

THE CRIME OF CARELESSNESS.

Under a new-made mound in a Duluth cemetery sleeps a beautiful little 4-year-old girl whose tragic death last week plunged a family in sorrow and a neighborhood in gloom. That child was one of many victims of a species of carelessness that is little short of criminal.

Recently a family moved out of a house in Duluth. In moving, the medicine closet was cleaned out, and a number of bottles, some empty, some partly filled, were thrown out in the back yard.

A few days later another family moved into that house. In the family was this little girl. Playing in the yard, she found this collection of bottles, and seeing that one of them contained an attractive powder, she ate some of it. A few hours later the child was dead.

Pure thoughtlessness was at the bottom of this tragedy, of course, but it is a kind of thoughtlessness so pregnant with peril that it comes pretty close to being criminal negligence.

Surely it requires no deep thought to make anybody aware of the necessity of keeping poisons out of the reach of children. Yet in many a household bottles containing deadly poisons will be found side by side with similar bottles containing harmless drugs of everyday use. That is one common type of carelessness. It is bad enough, but it is not so bad as sweeping bottles of poison out into a back yard where little children are almost sure to find them, with results like that described above.

The only gleam of hope in this peculiarly depressing story is that it may cause a few to consider, a little more carefully than is their habit, the probable consequences of their disposal of such articles as bottles of poison.

THE SENATORS AND THE BALL GAME.

Senator Elkins complains that he has been unable to bring the administration's railroad bill to a vote in the senate because so many of his colleagues have been slipping off to the ball game every afternoon that he fears he cannot muster votes enough to pass it unless his wandering colleagues summon up enough interest in the business of congress to neglect at least one ball game.

This is a hopeful sign. It shows that the statesmen at Washington are beginning to feel the influence of the spring, and that a proposal to adjourn at an early date will be thankfully received by statesmen who wish to attend the games without being bothered by thoughts of duties left behind. It is true that much must be done before the administration's program is carried out; but then that program was so ineffectual in the beginning, and has been made so much more so by the loving ministrations of the organization, that public interest in its prosperity has become greatly diluted. An adjournment at any time would be acclaimed with public thankfulness.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

THE AUTO OWNERS' SIDE OF THE CASE.

To the Editor of The Herald:

So much has been said lately against reckless automobile driving that I suppose I stand a chance of being mobbed when I take the other side and defend the driver, of course, to a certain extent only. We all agree that many autoists drive too fast. There is no doubt that the speed is in many instances above that allowed by law. The people who are the biggest kickers are always the ones who, without looking where they are going, step out into the street and directly in front of a moving machine. They have a close call, and for some days they talk of little else than of reckless auto driving. We all regret the accident of a few days ago, when an aged woman was killed. Let me say, however, that many people have plenty of sympathy for the man who was driving the car. In the modern age when all life moves faster than it did even five years ago, accidents are of daily occurrence, and they are the direct result of modern invention and the faster life. There are many laws governing automobiles and drivers as a rule live pretty well up to them, except in the matter of speed. There are few rules for the walkers. People cross the busy streets in the very center of the block without even glancing where they are going and you can toot the life out of the horn and no attention is paid whatever. Many take it for granted that the driver doesn't dare run over them and is bound to stop his car. Suppose, however, the driver loses his head, suppose the brake refuses to work, suppose a lot of other things and you have some idea what the autoist has to contend with. Why are people allowed to be careless in the matter of where they go when drivers are not allowed to be careless too?

The only place machines can be driven is on the streets. People have to cross streets. Don't you think, Mr. Editor, that instead of the antagonistic attitude people have, they, too, should be required to be careful and help make the risk less? Then, there is another sort of person. The first was merely careless, this second type is an absolute nuisance. He walks directly out in front of a moving car and will stand directly in the path, requiring the driver to stop the machine. Then he will laugh. Talk about prejudice, the auto driver gets it coming and going. Still any one of these people is glad to ride in a car and they are the ones who always want to see how fast the car is capable of going. We all violate laws to a greater or less extent. A letter that interested me greatly recently was written to one of the daily papers and signed by a well known Fourth street grocer. He told how the auto owners disregarded the laws. This same man blocks up a busy street about once each day for a period of several hours while his drivers roll barrels of flour into his establishment. People have to go out in the street to pass his place of business or else climb over his carriageway. Still he kicks about violation of the city ordinance. The people who own automobiles are a fairly respectable lot, and they are not running down and killing people for the pure love of the sport. The auto is here to stay and people will have to get over their attitude toward the gasoline propelled cars. People must be fair with those who drive cars and give them a chance. As long as they continue in their present attitude, so long will accidents and many of them, happen. I claim that people who walk are careless and court disaster by their very manner.

MAGNETO.

Duluth, April 25.

SHOULD SET AN EXAMPLE.

To the Editor of The Herald:

While the discussion relative to the enforcement of the speed laws is on, why wouldn't it be a good idea to call attention to the fact that the police themselves quite often fail to observe the laws in this respect. The auto patrol sometimes makes pretty good time across some of the crossings of Superior street when it might be well to exercise extreme care. I haven't heard of the patrol hitting anybody, but I mention it more because of the example than anything else. The touring car that the department owns often tears along at a pretty good clip, which should also be watched. This is not offered in the spirit of criticism, but as a suggestion which it might be well to notice.

The Shriners.

New Orleans Item: As the Shriners' convention draws to its close, we are glad to say that New Orleans and its guests have good cause to be mutually satisfied with each other.

On our part, we have thrown the town wide open and gladly taken the variegated assortments, nobles, potentates, patrols, Arabs, Turks, dromedaries and all, to our bosoms, figuratively speaking. We have slaughtered the fatted terrapin. We have broached the keg and let off the fizz-water. We have provided good weather. We have dug up the carnival from cold storage and delivered ourselves and the whole city to the jovial spirit of festivity which our friends brought with them.

As for the Shriners, we have never had in New Orleans a crowd that so thoroughly pervaded the whole place and at the same time diffused so much of the undiluted spirit of joy and good humor. The Shriners have captured the town and have made such good use of their capture that we would be ready to begin all over again if that were possible.

It does not often happen that the little gods of perversity who delight to mar the well-laid plans of mortals let such an occasion pass without a few tricks; but happily there has been nothing to interfer with anybody's pleasure, and the Shriners will take away and the city will keep only pleasant memories.

New Orleans has never entertained a body of people whom it was a greater pleasure to entertain. It was an easy matter to do our best for such guests. The Shriners made their own welcome by the spirit which they brought with them. We hope they are as well satisfied with us and with New Orleans as we are with them, and that we will all meet again as gladly when New Orleans holds the Panama exposition in 1915, if not before.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: It's funny how long it takes arithmetic to get a child when the measles can grab him in a minute.

Most of us forget that how a man parts his principles is much more important than how he parts his hair.

Money is a good thing to teach a man to wish he hadn't spent it the way he did without teaching him not to do it again.

Every time a girl takes a walk in the woods she expects to meet a fairy prince who will carry her off in a golden chariot.

Where a woman can get fooled on a man is thinking that because she can make his brains work wrong she can also make them work right.

Where Water Transportation Thrives.

J. J. Hill in April World's Work: The growth and the cheapness of traffic on the Great Lakes are due in no small degree to the effectiveness of terminal machinery at their head. Duluth and Superior handled more tons in 1907 than any other seaport, and it was all carried into or taken out of the port by a few railways. These cities have less than 200 miles of terminal track, as against 2,000 miles at Buffalo. But at Duluth-Superior a cargo of 12,000 tons of ore can be loaded in an hour and a half. So much better are terminal facilities at the Head of the Lakes than elsewhere that they handle in seven and a half months of open navigation more business than any other port in the world handles in twelve, and do it more satisfactorily.

TRUTH AND FICTION.

Dayton News: This from an editor who has had a good deal of trouble with young reporters:

"No reporter ever imagined a story that was as interesting as the real story, no matter how trival it may have been. No inventive detail carries the human intrest of simple truth to attract and enthrall the reading public."

Therein may be found the answer to all critics who claim that the newspapers do not tell the truth. Every editor of experience realizes the importance of the above quotation, and tries with all his might to hold the reporters under him to the details of every story, and as soon as a reporter has had a few years' experience, he also comes to understand that truth is stronger than fiction for details in reporting an event.

As a matter of fact, however, there is probably no such thing as fiction. It is true that one may credit to an individual remarks which he did not make. He may write details of a certain fire that did not pertain to that particular fire. He may "draw upon his imagination," as stated, in order to pad out his report of an occurrance and attribute to one event things which took place at another time—but all fiction is, of course, founded on fact that existed somewhere at some time. In other words, it is doubtful if any one can imagine anything which never took place.

The only trouble with fiction writers—if there is any trouble with them—is that they do not show the reader the objective at a correct perspective, believing, as they evidently do, that they can be more entertaining by "imagining" details than by recording actual occurrances.

No writer of fiction has ever been able to describe the imaginary burning of a building, for instance, one-half as entertainingly as might be described the actual burning of a sawmill. The falling to earth of a single snow flake is more enchanting if properly described, than is the imaginary falling of a sun. The heart throbs of a little child in trouble is more appealing if correctly told than is all of the "novels" that ever came from the brain of man. There is a better love story in the daily affairs of every young woman than can be found in the books upon the library shelf. Greater miracles are to be seen in a bursting peach bud than could be "imagined" by any human being. So that it is only the unskilled writer who attempts to dig into his mind for details with which to hold the reader.

This is a wonderful old world. There is nothing under it nor above it so far as we are concerned, that is more interesting. The misty dreams of man, like a smoky wreath, only obscure the azure of the skies; the vain imaginings of a would-be entertainer, but becloud a sercner picture than he would paint with his idle words. The longings for the unreal carry one across sublime landscapes of bejeweled reality, and he who seeks to find his entertainment without the fold of human endeavor, loses harmony of beauty that would repay for every effort.

The Difference.

Berton Braley in Puck: In the newspaper columns the manager said.

"There's nothing can keep us from forging ahead. We're signed young Adair of the Tarrytown team, a pitcher of wonderful power and steam, of perfect control and of changeable speed, a peach, a phenom, and a marvel indeed!"

But here's how he spoke to young Johnny Adair:

"Get busy, you moke! Quitcher fannin' the air! You ain't in no game on the old village lot; this ain't no peaceful an' pastoral spot where the sweet little maidens say, 'Ain't he grand!' when you come to the plat with the stick in yer hand.

"Who said you could pitch? Say, who taught you to throw! Don't stand there an' twitch—ain't there nuthin' you know? To think that I paid out good money to buy a mud-headed lube with an arm like a fly!"

In the newspaper columns the manager said:

"The days of the baiting of umpires are fled. My men have offended, it's true, in the past, but now we have struck a new era at last. The umpire shall never be baited again; at least I can promise you none of my men will ever be heard with a rowdyish vim to curse at the umpire or quarrel with him."

But here's how he spoke in a subsequent game:

"Go' wan, you big bloke, that decision's a frame! Ye're rotten, ye're fierce, ye're a boob, ye're a lime; to make you an ump was a sin an' a crime! You talk like an oyster, you act like a yap; I've a good mind to wallop you one on the trap. You robber! You yeagman! Ye're fearful, ye're rank, yer proper profession is robbin' a bank!"

In the newspaper columns the manager said:

"The ructions that racked us aforetime are dead. The team and the people, the owner and I, are working together with purposes high. Our fights are forgotten, and people can see that what we've achieved is a close harmony. The failures and quarrels that balked us are done, we're after the pennant—it's got to be won!"

But here's how he spoke to a comrade of his:

"Me heart is fair broke and I'm put on the frit! The owner keeps buttin' in day after day. The players are askin' for twice as much pay, the captain's a scream with a brain like a ham, the outfit does nothin' but knock me kerslam! The pitcher can't pitch an' the catcher's a mutt, the fielders are better than usual—BUT:—The ticket men graft and the treasurer steals; I'm worn to a frazzle, I can't eat my meals. It's nothing but jangle and wrangle and yell—did some one say 'Harmony'? Harmony—Hell!"

Throwing Over Ballast.

Chicago Daily Socialist: Washington dispatches are having much to say about the intentions of Aldrich, Cannon and Hale. It is generally agreed that this great triumvirate are to abdicate with this session of congress. Cannon will no longer be speaker. The others have announced their intention to withdraw from the senate at the end of their present terms.

At this sight a mighty shout of triumph is going up from those congressmen who call themselves radical, progressive or insurgent. The chorus of rejoicing is spreading in far wider circles. We are told that this means the political downfall of the great monopolists.

It is well to stop right now, before the excitement gets any greater, and recognize that it means nothing of the kind. It simply means that the great trusts have decided to use another set of puppets. The tremendous industrial powers behind the political throne have discovered that the Cannon cigar and the Aldrich swagger have begun to tire the patient people. The trust magnates are not particular on these points. They are willing to change the style of their dummies.

So Aldrich and Cannon are to be dethroned. The dear people are to be flattered into believing that they did it with their own little agitation and muck-raking. Then another Aldrich and another Cannon, with different clothes and cigars and methods of ruling, will take their place.

To be sure, it will mean some little gain to have even compelled a change in the style of rulers.

So long as the system remains upon which these rulers feed, they will continue to sprout and grow until they bestride our society.

The Socialist does not ask for a change in rulers. He insists that the workers rule themselves.

Then there will be no Aldriches to overthrow, no Cannons to depose, no successors to take their places.

"O, Lassie, Say You'll Wed Wi' Me!"

O, lassie say you'll wed wi' me,
An' dinna bid me wait!
The Lord our strength an' stay shall be
An' blithe we'll gang our gaet.

We twa hae kenned ane'nither lang,
Hae we na kenned fu' well?
Sae sweet my love is grown an' strong,
Nae art hae I to tell.

Nae wealth hae I o' lan's or gold,
Na muckle learnin' ken;
A heart I hae, baith true an' bold—
Oh, dinna break it then!

But gie your lover true ae kiss,
An' gie your heart alang—
His fondest wish an' earthly bliss—
Then we to kirk maun gang.

O, lassie, say you'll wed wi' me,
An' dinna bid me wait!
The Lord our strength an' stay shall be
An' blithe we'll gang our gaet.

DULUTH AND THE HERALD.

"A Consistent Booster."

Wabasha Herald: The Duluth Herald on Saturday started out on the twenty-eighth year of its existence. The Herald is a splendid all-around paper, bright, newsy and enterprising. Its editorial utterances are second to none in the state. It's a consistent booster for Duluth, the northern section, and Minnesota in general. May it be with us for many years of usefulness.

They Are Welcome.

Hutchinson Leader: The Duluth Evening Herald is a great paper in many ways, one of which is its generosity in allowing its competitors to enjoy all the glory of sending out comic supplements.

Men Don't Need Adornment, Eh?

Warrond Comeonwealth: The Duluth Evening Herald the other day spoiled a very good editorial on adornmen in dress by reiterating that men need it more than women do. We do not know what The Herald's idea is, but we cannot reconcile its position with anything we have read on the subject of sociology as applied to the sexes, or any hypothesis that we can think of. We are aware that it agrees with a notion that prevails in a sentimental way, and which everybody affects to accept, while aware of its error.

You Are Right, Sir.

Warroad Plaindealer: Duluth appears to be waking up to the possibilities contained in the timber and agricultural country along the north border. And anything Duluth may see fit to do for the development of this section will be duly appreciated, and reciprocated. No city can become great without a good, strong agricultural district to draw from. When it lacks this the cost of living becomes so high that the city cannot compete with other cities. This is the natural district from which Duluth may hope to draw its supplies, and the development of this district is almost as important to Duluth as it is to those who are already located here.

Thanks!

Aitkin Republican: The Duluth Herald started its twenty-eighth year a few days ago. The Herald is one of the best papers in the Northwest, and the growth of the city of Duluth is well typified in the growth of The Herald.

Material for Lively Times.

Stillwater Gazette: Looks very much as if lively times were expected up in the Duluth district this year. About twenty-six carloads of revolvers and ammunition are being conveyed there on a boat. That amount should give them a great blowout on July 4.

Like the Ives Family.

Cass Lake Times: The Duluth Evening Herald boasts of growing old and seems to take delight in the thought. In general, age impairs the faculties and dulls the perceptions, but The Herald is not in that category and grows better and more entertaining as the years increase.

Chicago's Dream.

This is the "Plan of Chicago," obtained from high sources and told by William Bayard Hale in the April World's Work, which will transform a city of inelegance and unsightliness into one of Parisian splendor and fairness.

"Chicago will be opened up as Haussman opened up Paris, with great avenues stretching diagonally across its present checker-board plan and connecting quarter with quarter in the shortest direct lines. The freight stations and railroad yards will be banished from the center of the city, and a great area thus restored to business where it is most needed. Car lines will be rearranged. Plazas and star-places will break up the monotony of rectangular streets. The ragged sky line of individual fronts will give way to uniform blocks, lining like palaces the tree-bordered thoroughfares.

"The banks of the rivers will be converted into boulevards, and the streams crossed by monumental bridges. The entire stretch of lake front will be appropriated for an immense park, lagoons will break into it, artificial islands shelter it and form harbors for pleasure yachts.

"The only really fine street that Chicago now possesses, Michigan avenue, on the lake front, will be widened and extended northward as an elevated boulevard, crossing east and west streets on viaducts, leaping the river on a double-deck bridge, and forming the chief thoroughfare between the North and South sides.

"East and West sides will be brought together by an avenue 300 feet wide. Where this avenue, now Congress street, starts from Michigan avenue on the lake front, there will rise a group of buildings devoted to the arts and sciences.

"From this center of culture the eye will travel down the new Congress avenue two miles to Halstead street (now a slovenly shanty-town road, but destined to be a splendid boulevard), where there will lift itself to domination of the whole city and of miles of outstretching prairie, the great dome and the clustering towers of a civic center.

"Finally, around all will stretch a forest preserve, in a green crescent of 100 miles, its tips on the lake shore. Through this forest will break highways into the country, and in particular a speedway, following the lake shore from Indiana to Wisconsin."

The Accommodating Night Clerk.

Success Magazine: Up to the night clerk's desk goes Abe Perlmutter, a Chicago traveling man. "I wonder," he says, "could you find me somebody to play a game of pinochle for an hour or two tonight?"

"Why," says the clerk, "I guess so," and he runs his eye over the register. "Boy," he calls, "page Mr. Gutwillig." Before long Mr. Gutwillig is found and introduced to the pinochle-hungry Perlmutter, and a game is arranged. "How did you know I played pinochle?" Mr. Gutwillig asks the clerk. "Oh, I——," begins the clerk. Just then emerges from the bar, a young man, triple-piled with wine. He staggers up to the desk, and says: "Shay, I wanna fight! D'ye hear? I'm lookin' f'r a scrap!"

Thus the clerk: "Boy, page Mr. Kelly and Mr. O'Brien."

Good Fishing.

Walker's Pilot: The Pilot got a fish hook by mail Wednesday on which was dangling a dollar bill and a card attached bearing the words: "How's this for a catch, Joe Mounts, Independence, Mo." Joe has to be original in what he undertakes, even to paying his subscription to the Pilot.

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Chicago Record-Herald: "You ought to have a burglar alarm system in your house," said the electrical supply agent, "so that you will be awakened if a burglar raises one of the windows or opens a door at night."

"No burglar can get in here while we are peacefully sleeping," replied Mr. Newpop. "We are weaning our baby."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: The chorus girl regarded the gilded youth thoughtfully. "Let us hie away and be married at once, Tottie!" he cried.

She shook her peroxide frizzes.

"No, Freddie, not yet awhile," she answered. "Not until mother can find out whether your papa is one of th' Knox kind or not."

Chicago Tribune: Daniel had emerged from the lion's den. "Although I was in no danger of catching any African fever from them," he said, "I am sure Prof. Starr will feel much easier to mind on account of my coming out unharmed." For the professor, it will be remembered, had not predicted that anything would happen to Daniel.

Puck: Messeger Boy—I hear yer boss done a little shoppin' yesterday?

Wall Street Office Boy—Pooh! Nothin' to speak of—he only bought an insurance company, a couple er good, serviceable banks an' a steel plant, an' he had a railroad sent up on appertation.

Boston Transcript: Miss Bright—I love dancing. What is your favorite dance, Mr. Boniface?

Boniface—The menu-et, dear lady.

Princeton Tiger: Ferdinand—Funny, isn't it, that most girls close their eyes when they are kissed?

Ernestine—Well, do you blame them?

Pointed Paragraphs.

Chicago News: Many a headstrong man is weak-minded.

Flytime is responsible for a good many elopements.

Doesn't a chicken fight come under the head of fowl play?

A man always tries to conceal his vices under his virtues.

Women is a thing of beauty and an expensive joy forever.

He's a poor house painter who is unable to put on a good front.

Make your own footprints instead of following in the other fellow's.

Money is about the only thing that can get tight without taking a drink.

Some men seem to have a grudge against themselves, and we don't blame them.

We feel sorry for a man who hasn't sense enough to make use of his good judgment.

Every time a man makes a serious mistake it lessens his confidence in himself—and others.

Why does a woman always hold a screen door open when talking to some one on the outside?

When you hear a woman say she detests compliments it's a safe bet that they do not come her way.

Don't spend half your time telling what you are going to do and the other half in explaining why you didn't do it.

Receding Chins.

London Spectator: The minority who have square chins and big lower jaws say that we of the receding chins have neither will nor strength of character, which is absurd, as any one may know who remembers that Gen. Wolfe and Mr. Pitt had practically no shins at all, to say nothing of living soldiers and statesmen. To judge a man by his chin is no less foolish than to judge him by the bumps of his skull.

INJURIES ARE FATAL

Workman Hit By Northern Pacific Train Dies in Hospital.

Lives More Than a Week With a Fractured Skull.

Matt Mattson, laborer, 60 years old, died last night at St. Mary's hospital from a fractured skull, sustained in an accident Friday afternoon, April 15, when he was struck in the head by a train at Sixty-third avenue west.

Mattson was employed at the blast furnace of the Zenith Furnace company as a common laborer and lived with his son, Charles, at 128 North Sixty-first avenue west. He is also survived by a wife residing in Finland and two daughters, Mrs. Andrew Stolman of 130 North Sixty-first avenue west and Mrs. John Haglund of South Sixty-first avenue west.

While crossing the tracks at Sixty-third avenue west Mattson was struck in the head by a boxcar. The train was backing up at the time and although the switching crew, which is employed by the Zenith Furnace company, saw the man, they say that he stopped before he crossed the track. When the cars approached nearer, he stepped directly in front of them.

Mattson was hurled to one side and was picked up by the furnace switchman and taken to the St. Marys hospital, where Dr Payette found his injuries to consist of a number of bad bruises and a fractured skull. Although aged, the man had a strong constitution and lived over a week.

Members of the train crew state that the man was hard of hearing and was short sighted. This statement is confirmed by relatives and friends of the dead man. It is thought that he did not see the closely approaching train, but instinctively stopped for a moment by the track before he attempted to cross over.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Andrew Stollman, of 130 North Sixty-first avenue west. Burial will be at Oneota cemetery.

IS SHUNNED BY HIS FRIENDS

Careful Tuberculosis Patient Is Not Encouraged in His Course.

It is a sorry reward that is being paid one of the tubercular patients of the city for his efforts to be cleanly and prevent the spread of the dreaded white plague, against which he is battling for life.

Instead of being helped he is being shunned by some of his friends and ecquaintances as though he were a leper. Instead of assisting him they are discouraging him until he almost feels as though the world is against him.

The only reason is that he is endeavoring to be sanitary. He carries what is known as a "spitting cup." He expectorates into the cup instead of the street, where the sputum would dry and be blown to the four winds to invade other healthy constitutions.

He told a friend who has been assisting him that standing on the rear platform of the street car he used the cup. Several men glanced at him with looks which were easily interpreted. Some of them stepped to the other side while others went into the car.

Another time he was walking with a friend of many years' standing who knew that he was a consumptive. When he used the cup the man gradually edged away. He kept on in the same direction but remained at a distance of about ten feet. Driven almost to desperation, the unfortunate man turned to his "friend" and told him to get on the other side of the street, adding that he didn't ever want him to even speak to him again.

Other incidents of a like nature have made him desperate. Realizing his condition and not wishing to expose others to it, he gets the "cold shoulder" at every turn. No names are mentioned in the above statement, but the facts are true and can be substantiated. The identity of the man is concealed because it would only add to his embarrassment.

LAST OF STORM YET TO BE SEEN

Weather Bureau Makes Analysis of Conditions Through the Country.

Washington, April 25.—The last of the wave of frost and storm which has been sweeping eastward, leaving destruction of crops and fruit in its wake, has not yet spent itself, the observers in the weather bureau believe. Tonight, the indications are there will be heavy frosts, or even freezing temperatures, in the Ohio Valley, the interior of the East Gulf and South Atlantic states. Snow is not improbable that a light frost may be felt in Northern Florida.

"A moderate secondary disturbance" in the official designation of the weather conditions. It was over the Northwestern Mississippi valley early yesterday, when it suddenly shifted east. That allowed the colder air of the north to push southward, with the result that there was a half inch of snow on the streets of Atlanta this morning, and snow was falling as far south as Montgomery, Ala.

Snow meanwhile continues over the lake region and showers are likely over the eastern section of the country.

Rain tonight in the Atlantic states, and rain or snow in the lake region, is predicted and will probably continue tomorrow. The weather in the interior will probably be fair, but will be accompanied by the frosts forecasted.

ARE LIVING IN AN OLD BARN

Little Home of Aged Couple Swept Away By the Flames.

One of the most pitiful cases of destitution to come to the surface in Duluth in a long time, developed today. In an old barn on their lot at Twenty-ninth avenue west and Ninth street, Valenty Mesciak, aged 66 yares, and his aged wife, are living.

They had a little house on the lot, but it burned down last Tuesday. There was no insurance, the old man is ill, worn-out and incapable of working steadily. They have no money, but the barn gives them shelter and kind friends have provided them with food when the slight earnings of the old man have failed to do so. A section foreman on one of the railroads gives the old man work about two days a week, for he cannot work any more than three days in succession in his enfeebled condition.

Mesiak applied to A. P. Cook, superintendent of the poor today, and he promised temporary relief. Friends of the old couple are trying to raise money, however, to rebuild the little house and give the couple, at least, shelter for their old age.

HORSE'S THREE MILE SWIM.

London Daily Mail: A horse belonging to a Bournemouth firm was having a bath in the sea at Alum Chine when it suddenly plunged out further from the land, swimming rapidly. Seeing the animal's danger spectators set out in pursuit in boats, but did not overtake the animal until it had swam out a mile and a half.

It was very distressed, but the rescuers succeeded in turning its head landward, when it struck out with renewed vigor, reaching the shore not much the worse for its three-mile swim.

THE LATEST METHOD OF CLEANING THE STREETS OF A CITY

THE SCYMANSKI CLEANER.

Vienna, April 23.—A civil engineer of Vienna, Arthur Scymanski, has invented a novel street cleaning machine, which does not raise the dust and simplifies the work of keeping the streets clean. It consists of an automobile with a revolving brush, which sweeps up the dust and throws it into a large funnel, from which it is sucked up by a ventilator and deposited in large metal boxes. The dust is neither left on the street to be collected later, nor can the wind distribute it. The boxes can be removed when full and can be replaced by empty ones. The wagon is driven by a 28x32-horse power motor and can sweep at the rate of eleven miles an hour.

THE EMPEROR'S BROTHER IS IN AMERICA

PRINCE TSAI-TAO.

Washington, April 23.—His imperial highness, Prince Tsai-Tao, and party of sixteen, who arrived in San Francisco yesterday, are expected to reach Chicago Tuesday and to arrive in Washington next Thursday to remain until Saturday. The prince, who is a brother of the young emperor of China and head of the Chinese military commission, which is on a tour of the world, will be the special guest of the government while here. The party will be accompanied by Col. Schuyler, who has been designated by the president to act as their personal escort, while in the United States. Twenty-two people are included in the visiting party.

Saturday morning the visitors will inspect the United States navy yard here and later will visit the congressional library and the capitol. It is expected that the prince will take the night express for Niagara Falls and Buffalo on Saturday, proceeding to New York Sunday night.

He will sail for Europe May 5 on the steamship George Washington.

IRON AND STEEL REVIEW

New York, April 25.—Blast furnace interests in the East as well as in other sections have been moking a quiet but energetic canvass of pig iron consumers, being stimulated to secure orders by the downward tendency of prices, although the volume has been light, numerous small orders for various deliveries have been taken at lower prices, the decline in the last two weeks ranging from 50 cents to $1 per ton in Eastern Pennsylvania and New England. No. 2-X foundry has ranged from $16 to $17 at furnaces in the Lehigh and Schuylkill valleys.

The opening of the canal navigation from the lakes allows Buffalo iron to come to New York harbor at $1 per ton freight and to water points in Connecticut at $1.50 per ton. Alabama foundry iron can be delivered at tidewater at $16.25 per ton with 50 cents lighterage charges at New York. No. 2 foundry iron has been sold and delivered in New England at $18.25 and $18, and even less. Virginia furnaces have also been competing. Pipe works bought only 10,000 to 15,000 tons of Alabama iron on the basis of $12 for No. 2, and $10.50 to $11 for gray forge. Action has been taken to reduce output 10 to 15 per cent in the East.

In the finished products the principal new business has been constructural and fabricated steel. New orders for buildings and bridges aggregated a little over 30,000 tons, although specifications were only 15,000 tons. Railroad bridge orders requiring 25,000 tons of steel cars are expected to be closed this week. Railroads placed contracts for only eighty-four locomotives and 35,000 tons of rails. Car orders were insignificant.

MARK TWAIN LAID TO FINAL REST

Body of Famous Writer Laid Near Those of His Wife and Children.

Elmira, N. Y., April 25.—Under a tent on the grassy slope of the Langdon plot in Woodlawn cemetery, with rain beating fiercely against the canvas cover, a little group of mourners silently watched yesterday as the body of Samuel L. Clemens was lowered into an evergreen-lined grave beside the bodies of his wife and children. Rev. Samuel F. Eastman, pastor of Park church and a close friend of the late writer, conducted a brief and simple service, and Mark Twain's final pilgrimage was at an end. Today he lies sleeping under a grave piled high with flowers, the tributes of friends from far and near.

There were present at the grave only members of the family party who came from New York with the body, a former governess of the Clemens family, the sexton and a half a dozen newspaper men.

Services had previously been held at the residence of Gen. Charles J. Langdon, where, forty years ago Mark Twain married the general's sister. In keeping with Mr. Clemens' wish the ceremony was simple. There was no music, no honorary pall bearers—just the brief address and prayer by Dr. Eastman.

Old Friends Present.

The body lay in state in the very parlor where the marriage of forty years ago was held, and some of those who attended the wedding were there to look for the last time upon the face of their friend.

Among the floral gifts was a beautiful wreath bearing the inscription:

"From 500 boys of the Louisville male high school in remembrance of Mr. Clemens who has brightened their lives with innocent laughter and taught them squareness and grit and compassion for the weak."

Residents of Elmira cherished fond memories of Mark Twain. With Mrs. Clemens and the children he had spent many happy summers at Quarry Farm, on East Hill, overlooking the city, the home of Mrs. Susan L. Crane, Mrs. Clemens' sister, who was one of those who mourned today. A path from the Crane house winds through the wooded grounds to the summer lodge which was Mark Twain's workshop. Here he wrote "Roughing It," "A Tramp Abroad," and other works.

TUBERCULOSIS SUNDAY.

New York Churches Join in Recognition of the Day.

New York, April 25.—Many churches in New York, in common with those throughout the country, joined yesterday in making the day Tuberculosis Sunday. The movement has the support of President Taft, the governors of nine states and the ministers of hundreds of cities.

Rev. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity, said all men and women calling themselves Christians are pledged to service in the movement. He and all the other pastors emphasized the fact that tuberculosis is not only preventable, but curable, and recommended plenty of fresh air and sunlight as the best physicians.

"If I could only teach that," said Rev. Dr. C. F. Aked, at the Fifth avenue Baptist church, "I should be sure to go down in history as a benefactor of mankind."

Dr. G. S. Pratt of All Souls Episcopal church said that one-seventh of all the deaths in the country may be charged to tuberculosis.

"The United States," he added, spends millions for the health of hogs and cattle, but not one penny for tuberculosis. Why should animals and crops receive first consideration over humanity?"

POSTAL BANK BILL IN THE AIR

Democrats Are Not Suited With Senate Plan---Deposit Guarantee Wanted.

Washington, April 25.—In view of Republican division and dissension on the subject of postal savings bank legislation, the attitude of the Democratic minority of the house on the subject has become of interest. Representative Champ Clark, leader of the minority, was asked what the Democratic position would be.

"We can't canvass the situation thoroughly yet," said Mr. Clark, "but there is one thing certain—the Democrats of the house will never stand for the senate postal savings bank bill. It looks also as if the Republicans were not going to stand for it either.

"Postal savings banks were favored in the Democratic national platform, but only in the event that guarantee of bank deposits by the government was found possible to accomplish. When we find out what sort of a bill the Republicans on this side are going to bring in, we shall then be able to determine what our attitude will be regarding it.

"It is one of the most important pieces of legislation in congress and it will have to be given very thorough consideration."

Big Fight Expected.

From the statements of Mr. Clark and others, it is said that the Democrats are likely to offer the proposition of government guarantee of bank deposits as a substitute for the Republican postal savings bank bill, and failing to get favorable action on that will attempt to amend the bill in accordance with their ideas.

One of the big fights of the session is expected on this legislation when it is finally presented in concrete shape for action.

HALTS JEWISH EXPULSION.

Russian Premier Holds Up Order to Permit Investigations.

St. Petersburg, April 25.—The government order for the wholesale expulsion of Jews residing illegally in Kiev and elsewhere outside the pale, which was to have taken effect on April 28, has been suspended by Premier Stolypin to permit a further examination of the matter. Meantime local commissioners are being formed to revise the lists of those marked for expulsion with the expected result that a large proportion of the latter will be allowed to remain where they now reside.

The order of expulsion was issued as a result of agitation which began in the duma. In Kiev alone 2,700 Jews are affected by the order.

SAYS YERKES HIMSELF WROTE ART CATALOGUE.

New York, April 25.—The late Charles T. Yerkes himself wrote the catalogue describing the works in his art collection, the recent auction sale of which here broke many art sale records. This information was made public today by Thomas E. Kirby, who conducted the sale, in answering foreign questions as to the genuineness of some of the works in the collection. Any criticisms of genuineness must have applied to paintings in the old Chicago collection made by Mr. Yerkes, according to Mr. Kirby, who added:

"Much of the Chicago collection has been sold or traded for the works which composed the New York gathering."

WANTS TO GO BACK TO NAVY

Deserter Gives Himself Up When Sweetheart Turns Him Down.

William Howard Gleason, disappointed in love and turned down by the fair maiden for whom he deserted from Uncle Sam's navy April 10, gave himself up to Sergeant Al Weber on Superior street yesterday.

Gleason states that he enlisted about a year ago as a fireman and that he likes the sea, but was lured away by a pair of pretty eyes and a dainty face on the Pacific coast. Cupid pierced him with his dart, but the woman of his heart froze him like an April blizzard, when he went to her to ask for her hand.

Now Gleason states that he wants to get back to his ship. He declares that he wants to get back as soon as possible, for the sooner he goes, the less will be the penalty for his breach of discipline. It is expected that some arrangement will be made to turn him over to the naval authorities on the coast.

TAFT SIGNS FORESTRY PROCLAMATION.

Washington, April 25.—President Taft has signed the first of the proclamations providing a reclassification of the lands in the national forests, which will throw 4,000 acres out of the forest reserve and make them available for homestead entry. At the same time some lands not arable will be added to the forests. The proclamations are President Taft's first for the forest service.

WANT ANTI-SPITTING ORDINANCES ENFORCED.

The Duluth anti-tuberculosis committee will assist in a crusade on the part of the national association to secure enforcement of the anti-spitting ordinances, which nearly all the cities in the United States have on their books. A bulletin just issued by the national association says that the anti-spitting ordinances in many cities are flagrantly violated and attempts to enforce them are so feeble that the violation is becoming more general. Activity on the part of the local committees in securing enforcement of the law in their own districts is urged, as spitting in public places is pointed out as one of the most dangerous practices for the spread of tuberculosis.

FIGHTER HAS BUSY SUNDAY

Critical Crowd Sees Physical Culture Exhibition By Jeffries.

Boxes Three Rounds and Does Other Strenuous Training Stunts.

Ben Lomond, Cal., April 25.—In the presence of a crowd of critical fight-followers at Jeffries' training camp yesterday, the fighter gave a physical culture exhibition that more than satisfied the visitors. His condition now compared with when he began training shows a remarkable improvement, and for the first time yesterday he frolicked around the gymnasium with his old-time exuberance of spirits.

The morning's workout consisted of a session with the chest weights, followed by a fast mix-up with the medicine balls and the punching-bag. Jeffries led up to the boxing bout by a preliminary exhibition of shadow boxing, finishing with three fast rounds with Bob Armstrong and two more rounds of roughing it with Farmer Burns. The boxing, of course, was the special event of the workout, and took place in the handball court, which was hotter than a Turkish bath. After the boxing, in which Jeffries showed more speed and more accuracy than heretofore, perspiration rolled off him in streams.

Tex Rickard reached camp in time to witness the boxing and the set-to with Burns, and expressed surprise at the fighter's marked improvement.

After his work out the "boiler maker" frisked about like a young hippopotamus, not in the least fatigued by his gymnasium work and his ten-mile run on the road in the early morning. Clarence Berry, a friend of Jeffries, was so well pleased he declared he was willing to increase his bets on the battle of July 4 to $25,000.

Berger has not hesitated to say that in the past Jeffries' work lacked fire and ginger, but yesterday declared he was satisfied for the first time.

"We could not have possibly hoped for anything better," said Berger. "Jim is in great form. About all he needs is plenty of boxing, and you may depend upon it I will see he gets it."

Rickard requested Berger to go to San Francisco next Sunday, when the promoter proposes to post an additional $30,000 of the purse money. Rickard will then have posted $50,000 of the purse. The remaining $51,000 will not be due until forty-eight hours before the contest.

KLING IN CHICAGO; WILL REPORT TO CUBS.

Chicago, April 25.—John Kling, former member of the Chicago Nationals, arrived in Chicago yesterday from Kansas City and held a conference with President Murphy at the West Side ball park. Manager Chance of the Chicago team, however, said that Kling had not officially reported to the club and that he could not do so until he had paid the $700 fine against him. It is said this matter will be attended to today.

BOWLING SCORES

Last night on the Central alleys, the Minneapolis bowlers defeated the Duluth bowling five, taking two games out of three and thereby taking a full measure of revenge for the defeat administered by the local players Saturday evening.

JOHANSEN DEFEATS CROWLEY EASILY.

New York, April 25.—Thure Johansen of Sweden defeated James J. Crowley in a professional match race yesterday over the full Marathon distance. The Swede won by a little over two miles in 2:29:42 4-5, which was splendid time considering the stiff wind that blew. The contest took place at Celtic Park, L. I., and attracted about 10,000 spectators. Johansen led for the first four miles, but from the fifth to the seventeenth mile, the men alternated in making the pace.

Johansen then cut loose and gained lap after lap, winning by nearly nine laps, the track being four laps to the mile.

(BY BRUCE.)

Is He Protected?

The calling off of the Lehto-Person match adds confirmation to a belief that has been prevalent in these parts for some time—namely, that Lehto is an overrated wrestler.

It is very unfortunate for the wrestling game that the manager of the Finn should have seen fit to call off the match. It will serve to point the finger of suspicion to a game that in these parts has been kept clean. It will also serve to create the strong impression that Karl Lehto, or his manager, was afraid to meet Person in a match where there was no understanding.

All of the matches Lehto has taken part in have been carefully made. Person has been dogging his footsteps for several months. The match is finally made and then at the last moment called off. It looks very suspicious. The manager of the Finn will have some very elaborate explaining to do.

The writer met Henry Ordemann in Minneapolis Saturday. He declared emphatically that the Finn was afraid to meet him. According to Ordemann, a match was tentatively made and then the representatives of Lehto decided that they wanted none of the Norwegian's game.

In many ways the boosting of the Lehto person has been very coarse. Person has been used as means of boosting this wrestler, about whom there is little known. The simple fact that the Pole, Zbyszko, stated that Lehto was a better man than Person, has been sent all over the country, by those papers that would take it, by the men behind the Finn.

Yet at the last moment the match with Person is called off. It looks very much as if the Finn wants none of the game of the Duluth man.

It further creates the impression, an impression well grounded here, that Lehto is not the man he has been represented as being, and that he can't beat Chris Person, or, in fact, Ed Adamson.

As for Ordemann, it would look as if there was no chance for the great grappler from Minneapolis to get on with the man who has made so great a name in the Copper country.

Not That Bad.

Down in La Crosse they are laboring under the opinion that the suggestion of the fitness of A. W. Kuehnow as a candidate for the presidency of the league, at the next annual meeting, was the direct result of the muss stirred up by the paper across the bay. There was no such animus behind the mention of Mr. Kuehnow's name.

It seems hardly likely that John A. Elliott will take the presidency of the Minnesota-Wisconsin league another term. In that case, it was suggested that Mr. Kuehnow would be a man eminently qualified to step into the Elliott sandals.

It is very well known here that Mr. Kuehnow is a very firm friend of Mr. Elliott. If Elliott wants the presidency there will be no objection from Duluth; if he decides to step down at the next election of officers, and Mr. Kuehnow could be persuaded to take the office, there would be no candidate more deserving of the place than the secretary and treasurer of the local club.

Samuel's Seeming Sadness.

When it comes to the big bunco game, the man behind the little table with the green pea and the shells, the holdup man with the heavy hand of greed, all fade into the background and Sam Berger can step forward and hog all the limelight.

The greed of the man supposed to be the manager of Jeffries has been the last step in the transition of prize fighting from a sport to a business.

Not content with getting the immense amount of money that will come to both men, win or lose, from both the division of the purse and the picture money, Berger has sought to sell exclusive interviews to those newspapers that would pay highest for the sake of getting a few stereotyped words from the venerable lips of Jeffries.

He also sought to sell special picture privileges. Very few of the papers throughout the country hopped to the idea, and it has therefore been abandoned.

Many of the methods of this Berger bounder have disgusted the followers of what is supposed to be a sport. His attitude has cast suspicion upon the whole affair, from Berger's side of the business, and has made the public wonder if the whole fact of bringing Jeffries from the comparative quietness of Los Angeles was not a bold attempt to get the money and get it fast.

They do say that Jeff, too, has become inoculated with the money-getting germ. If he is to be associated with Berger any length of time he is very liable to get it.

It is too bad that suspicion should be created and disgust engendered by a near pugilist, who ought to be back in the haberdashery business, where he went after lumbering Al. Kaufmann took all the fight out of him.

Pittsburg and Chicago.

Though the National league race is young as yet, Horace, already it appears as if the two teams to make the running are Pittsburg and Chicago. The American league race looks different at the present angle. There are two or three teams in the younger major organization that look very capable of giving the Tigers a tussle.

In the National, the New York Giants do not look capable of giving either Pittsburg or Chicago a hard race for the leadership honors. Philadelphia is another team that does not look classy enough to shake the two teams down from the top of the pennant perch. Cincinnati is an in-and-out team, or has been in the past, and it is very difficult to figure this team at all.

But the race from the present angle looks all to the two teams that fought it out last season, the fact being unfortunate for the interest of the race in the parent organization.

CORNER LOT GAMES

Yesterday afternoon the Oak Hall clothing company baseball team defeated the Duluth Heights team by the score of 6 to 4. The game was played on the Heights and was witnessed by a large crowd. Scholtz and Banack were in the points for the Oak Halls, while Danielson and Harwood were the battery for the Duluth Heights.

The Oak Halls wore their new suits for the first time the present season.

MINNY LEAGUE NOTES

From his playing so far the present season, it would appear as if La Crosse had a find in Kuehn, the young infielder who is trying out with the team. The youngster has been covering all sorts of ground in the preliminary practice games. His stick work has been somewhat weak, but Safford is of the opinion that it is too early in the season for the recruit to have developed his batting eye.

Safford has a number of youngsters, trying out for the team. He has Ludwick and Thomas trying for the backstop position, while Kroner, Nelson, Allen and Gibbons are new men trying for the infield. McQuay, Berens and Dietzler are also youngsters, who are being given a trial for the outfield.

Safford has a number of youngsters, and, from the showing they have made so far, he is of the opinion that he has several very promising players in the squad.

Kline, Greggory, Wolford, Watson and the rest of the veterans have reported, but are permitting the youngsters to do the bulk of the work.

Winona believes that it has unearthed a find in the person of Harry McKee, a pitcher who hails from Dixon, Ill. The Winona papers hint that the big fellow is a possible big leaguer. He is said to have speed, control and that amount of mental machinery necessary to a general on the hurling hill.

The early season "phenom" has heretofore worked with semi-professional teams. He came under the eagle eye of Uncle Joe Killian, and his work to date has borne out the predictions made of his great playing. The youngster is under 20, but is large and powerful of build. Down in the river town they are saying that McKee has already won a place on the staff of the Killian clan.

C. McNutt, an outfielder from Bay City, Mich., and Conners, a pitcher from Fond du Lac, Wis., who has the ear marks of a comer, are two more men who look pretty good to Father Killian.

The Winona squad has been out morning and afternoon, and some of the men have begun to show rapid improvement.

The following from the La Crosse Leader-Press may hold the somewhat petulant scribe on the sheet across the bay:

The ridiculous rantings of the kid scribe on the Superior daily paper are growing more ridiculous each day, and in a final effort to stir up animosity for the league president among the fans in the city by the lake he uses a whole column to say nothing, but by means of which he further exposes his ignorance of the subject on which he attempts to write. The kid has finally been compelled to confess that his demands that the league executive take a hand in the Koepping controversy were but the idle prattlings from swaddling's clothes and now attempts to defend his actions by saying that President Elliott made promises to the Superior club last season which he did not fulfill. The promises, it appears, were to the effect that the Minny head would use his influence to help the Drillers get some good players after the Superior manager had failed dismally to get anything like a team with which to start the season. The president of the league did use his influence to get some good players for the Superior team and sent men to Drill whom several of the Minny managers were anxious to get strings on. Drill, in desperation, and trying to suit every critic in the home city, released man after man without giving anyone a real tryout and then gave the impression to the fans at home that President Elliott was to blame for the club being at the bottom. The Superior kid caps the climax by referring to the Bruce Noel incident, the inside of which he might learn something about by asking ex-Manager Drill, the only man to blame because Noel was not annexed to the Superior staff. President Elliott tried hard to get Drill to send transportation from La Crosse to Winona for Noel, because he believed the pitcher would be a good man for the Superior club, but the transportation did not come, and Noel was sold to Oshkosh. Then Drill wanted the man and began to kick—one of the tactics employed by Drill all through the season. The Superior kid's baby talk may go in Superior, a town, by the way, that never could support a baseball team until it became a member of the league which John A. Elliott made, but it doesn't take in any other town in the Minny organization.

Connell, a third baseman secured from Indianapolis, looks the goods for La Crosse. The player has made a strong showing in the early practice workouts.

La Crosse has thirty-one men in the squad.

It is expected that the weeding out process of the La Crosse squad will start today, when some of the youngsters who were expected to burn up the league will be given their notice of official decapitation. Some of the players will in all probability get back to the farm in time to help repair the damage the storm did to the crops.

The Rochester team is due to report today at Faribault. The park at Rochester is not completed as yet, and for that reason Happy Jack Corrigan has decided to take his recruits to the Minnesota town for a thorough workout. There are something like twenty-five men in the surgeon squad.

PERSON MAKES UGLY CHARGES

Duluth Wrestler Says He Agreed to "Lie Down" for Lehto.

Calumet, Mich., April 25.—The calling off of the wrestling match scheduled for Saturday night between Chris Person of Duluth and Karl Lehto of Calumet, followed by sensational charges by the Duluth wrestler, furnished a topic for conversation Saturday and Sunday for the entire Copper country, which was intensely excited over the prospective bout.

Person states that he will institute suit for $1,000 damages, at which figure he estimates his share of the gate receipts, 45 per cent of the net, to which he adds his expenses in training and for transportation. He alleges as a reason for the sudden action of Dr. H. H. Rounavaara, Lehto's manager, who was instrumental in promoting the bout and later calling it off, that he (Person) had agreed to "lie down" to Lehto, giving him two straight falls, and that Dr. Rounavaara, as the time for the match drew near, began to be suspicious that Person's part of the agreement was not going to be carried out and called the match off only a few hours before it was billed to take place. It was not until 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon that there was an intimation that the bout was to be called off and it was some time later before the report was confirmed.

The betting on the match had been brisk and there was considerable Person money in sight in spite of the fact that he had been in only two matches here previously, in one of which he drew with William Demetral and in the other of which he won from Gronlund and Wirtanin under a handicap arrangement.

Lehto wrestled in two remarkable matches here this winter. Although he had been an obscure wrestler until within the last year he held Stanislaus Zbyszko, Gotch's challenger, without a fall in a handicap bout of an hour and later held the Pole off for over an hour and a half in a straight match. His showing surprised the whole wrestling fraternity.

FORT WAYNE DEFEATS SOX

Kosier's Error Enables Central Leaguers to Grab First Game.

Fort Wayne, Ind., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Fort Wayne Central League team defeated Duluth yesterday by the score of 3 to 2. The weather was cold and raw and fast playing was almost impossible.

The hitting was light as a consequence of the good work done by Kenney of Duluth and the three local pitchers, Nelson, Whittaker and Huffman. Fort Wayne gathered only four hits while the visitors were able to gather but two more singles from the slants of the local slabmen.

Kosier, playing first for Duluth, permitted the winning run to be scored. He let a thrown ball get away from him and the third run scored by the locals in the sixth inning, came across the plate.

The work of the entire Duluth team was good. Sweeney played a great game at third. The work of Taylor in the outfield was also a feature of the game.

O'Brien is figuring for a catcher from the local club. If Fort Wayne comes to the terms of the Duluth manager, the man O'Brien is after will be taken with the Duluth team. The score: R. H. E.

According to his letter, Schober will rest up for a while and then will begin a gradual training to get into shape. He claims he was not in the best of shape when he was in Duluth.

SPECIAL TRAINS FROM NEW YORK TO FIGHT.

New York, April 25.—Wall street in large part is making its vacation plans, with Oakland, Cal., on July 4 as the principal stopping place. The street has the fight bug to an unprecedented extent, and today it was roughly estimated that of 1,000 reservations of berths for the Pacific coast expected to be made within the next three weeks at least a third would be taken by men in the financial district who plan to see the Jeffries-Johnson battle.

Many clubs are arranging for special cars to take delegations of their members West while larger organizations are planning to charter whole trains to take big parties to the scene of the big mill.

Takes Cargo of Ore for First Trip Down the Lakes.

The fine new Pittsburg boat, the William P. Schiller, arrived at the Head of the Lakes on her malden trip today. As usual with a freight boat, no unusual or formal demonstration marked the arrival of the big vessel at the harbor of Duluth, which is her home port.

The Schiller is 600 feet in length, being of the same type as fifteen other of the Pittsburg boats. She has made several short trips prior to coming to the Head of the Lakes, but the trip here is the first long trip the big boat has made.

There were no unusual or untoward incidents of the first trip of the Pittsburg freighter. She was held at the Soo, because of the blockage at the American Soo, as were many other boats that left the lower lake ports at the same time as the Schiller.

The Schiller came here light for ore, leaving from Cleveland. The big boat will be ushered into the ore carrying trade with the loading that is expected to take place today.

The William E. Corey, named after the president of the United States Steel company, and one of the fastest of the Pittsburg boats, also came up the Lakes today. Like the newest of the Pittsburg boats, the W. E. Corey came here light for ore.

NORTHERN KING WAS IN SHELTER

Mutual Line Boat in No Danger During Storm on Lake.

While the Mutual line steamer Northern King lay safely in shelter at Portage Entry, busy newspaper correspondents were sending out alarming stories of fears being entertained that the boat had met with trouble in the storm of Friday night and Saturday.

Agent Winslip received a message from the captain of the Northern King yesterday to the effect that the boat had been safe during the storm and had pulled into Houghton yesterday. She has freight for Portage lake points and Duluth.

The storm attained considerable intensity near Keweenaw Point Saturday, the wind velocity varying from fifty to sixty miles an hour, an almost unprecedented condition in that part of the lake.

MANY CONTRACTS AT HEAD OF LAKES.

F. R. McQueen of Minneapolis, who is with the Barnett & Record company, was at the St. Louis today. He said that his company has more contracts at the Head of the Lakes than ever before although the aggregate cost is not as large as in some years in the past. The company has contracts for the Great Northern's new ore dock at Allouez, the foundation of the Pittsburg Coal company's dock at West Duluth, the extension of the Zenith Furnace company's dock, the extension of the Berwind Coal company's dock at Superior, the foundation for the Hanna Coal company's dock, heavy repairs to the property of the Northwestern Coal & Dock company, and the dock for the Alger-Smith people at Knife River.

OCTORORA ON TRIAL TRIP

New Anchor Line Steamer Behaves Well During Test.

Word was received here today that the Octorora, the big new steamer of the Anchor line, the boat that is expected at the Head of the Lakes on its first trip some time in June, made its trial trip last Saturday morning. The steamer went out of the Detroit port into a high sea and was given a trial that served to test the seaworthiness of the big boat.

The new Anchor line boat was built by the Detroit Shipbuilding company and will be one of the very finest boats on the Great Lakes. Upon the occasion of the first trip of the new liner to Duluth a formal reception will be given here.

LUMBER SCHOONERS HAVE ROUGH TRIP.

Chicago, April 25.—Two lumber schooners, Grace M. Siler and Arundel, arrived late last night after three days' flight with the elements and both had lost a portion of their cargoes. All the lumber above the decks had been swept away.

Seven lumber boats left the harbor last night for Port Huron, but all turned back after going out a few miles on account of the wind and heavy seas.

NO MOVE TO RAISE DOCK WORKERS' WAGES.

Reports have reached here of the decision of the dock companies at the lower end of the lakes to increase the wages of the dock laborers, but there has been no such action made of any movement to increase the wages of the dock laborers in this port. It was stated here today that nothing was known of any movement in this direction.

CORNER ON EGG SUPPLY

Packing Companies Said to Be Buying Heavily at Prevailing Prices.

Purchases for Storage Keep Market Price at 21 to 22 Cents.

Many may have wondered why the wholesale price of eggs is holding firm around 21@22 cents. Some commission men attribute the high prices of eggs to the meat trust, declaring that the packing companies are endeavoring to corner the egg supply.

Through the Central West the meat combine has been paying 21@22 cents a dozen for eggs. These are graded and delivered to storage houses at a cost of 22½@23½ cents. The eggs are carried until the season of short production, which usually begins in September or October, and will then cost out of storage 24½@25½ cents. Most of the storage eggs are consumed in the East, principally by the poorer classes. Eggs which cost 25 cents out of storage in the Central West are laid down at the Atlantic seaboard for 26 cents. When candled in the fall, the average loss is one dozen eggs to a case. The expense of candling, the loss and the profit of the wholesale merchant will require the Eastern retailers to pay 29@30 cents in the fall and early winter for eggs. The retailer generally tacks on a profit of 20 per cent, which means that the poorer classes who cannot afford fresh eggs must pay 35@40 cents a dozen for an inferior article.

The beef combine apparently believes that if eggs are sold freely this summer, the meat business will go out of existence. A corner in eggs would force an artificial price for at least twelve months after the corner had become effective.

Yet when eggs were selling at 20 cents this time last year, speculators picked up large stocks. Last winter was a disastrous season for the speculators so that the consumer may get some satisfaction out of the thought that if the speculators failed to make money last year, after buying eggs cheaper than the commodity is selling now, the efforts to swing a corner on this year's production at higher buying prices may prove a boomerang to the manipulators.

Madrid Discarding Autos.

Poor old Dobbin is returning to his own in Spain, and once more the horse drawn carriage is preponderant on the avenues of Madrid. Many people are selling their machines very cheaply to get rid of them, while the carriage and horse trade on the other hand, is looking up. Every household should have a life preserver such as Golden Grain Belt beer. It gives vigor to the tired body and strengthens the weak. ARE STRIKING GAS IN NORTH DAKOTA

Both Lansford and Max, N. D., Reports Good Flows Being Struck.

Lansford, N. D., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Success has rewarded the efforts of the Lansford gas interests in their search for another well, a splendid flow of natural gas being struck on the Elliot farm, several miles north of the first well, which is now supplying Lansford. The flow of gas in the new well is strong, but the work has not yet been completed as there is a large boulder which must be broken up before the best results can be obtained.

Evidences of gas and oils have been seen in that vicinity for years on the waters of the small creek flowing through that section. When the big well was found near Lansford it was decided to try boring operations on the Elliot farm, and with their successful completion this section is assured a natural supply of gas for years to come.

Strike Gas Near Max.

Max, N. D., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—A pocket of gas of unknown proportions was struck by well borers on the John Maximenko farm near this place, this being the first discovery of the kind in McLean county. As yet no satisfactory test has been made of the gas that has been found, but there is every indication tending to show that it is a very good one.

It was when the well had been sunk to a depth of about ninety feet that the find was made. Water, to a depth of about ten feet, is in the well, and the gas flowing through this creates a remarkable roar that can be heard for some distance. Thorough tests of the gas find are to be made this week.

BRAINERD'S LIGHT PLANT DESTROYED

Fire of Unknown Origin Puts City Into Temporary Darkness.

Brainerd, Minn., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The city electric light plant at the dam burned to the ground at 9 o'clock Saturday night. J. B. Lanonotte, electric light engineer, was the only man on the shift at the time. The loss is $40,000, partly covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown. The building rests on a stone and cement foundation and is situated on the east side of the dam and near one of the two large wooden piers of the dam. The fire spread from the building to the piers and soon these were a blazing mass. The city fire department could do nothing, as this territory is out of the fire district.

Pulp Mill Threatened.

For a time it looked as if the fire would spread to the Northwestern Pears company's pulp mill, which occupies the west bank of the dam. It was reported that a pile of coal near the electric light plant, at the east foundation of the dam, was on fire, but later reports discredit this, as no coal was stored near the dam. The electric light plant and building are covered by sufficient insurance to cover financial loss on machinery and building. The water and light board of the city will meet the emergency by installing a steam or gasoline plant and provide service in a week or ten days. The wheel pit of the dam is safe, the cogs being burned out. The stage of water in the river is a little over normal.

Naples, April 25.—The finding of the body of a beautiful woman on the beach here has given rise to the suspicion of murder. Apparently the woman died about three days ago. The body was scantily clothed, and this has led the authorities to believe that probably she was the victim of crime.

He claims his parents and grandparents all lived to a ripe old age and some of them passed the century mark.

Take a teaspoonful of this mixture before each meal and at bed time. Shake the bottle before using." This is not new in this city as many of the worst cases of chronic and acute rheumatism and back-ache have been cured by it. Good results come the first day. Any druggist has these ingredients on hand or will quickly get them from his wholesale house.

IT'S UP TO ST. PAUL

To Raise Money to Entertain National Conservation Congress.

St. Paul, Minn., April 25.—Ralph W. Wheelock, private secretary to Governor Eberhart, returned Saturday from Washington with an option on the meeting of the National Conservation congress tucked under his arm.

This option presupposes the disposition on the part of St. Paul to take care of the financial side of the matter. Just what the meeting would cost to arrange and carry through is unknown. The state conservation congress, held in March, cost about $6,000. It was estimated by Mr. Wheelock that the national meeting would cost twice that amount.

Nowak was 45 years of age, married, and is survived by a wife and eight children. He resided at Newtown. Arrangements for the funeral will be completed today.

SAY FUNDS ARE WASTED

Farmers Protest Against System of Work on Munger Road.

Say Results Are Not Obtained for Money Expended By County.

A delegation of farmers from the towns of Solway and Herman, headed by C. H. Holt and J. Miller, both of Solway, came to Duluth today to protest against the manner in which county funds are being expended on road work in their district. They registered their protest with the Commercial club and asked that the public affairs committee of the club take some steps to secure a better system of making expenditures.

The farmers complained particularly that county road money is wasted on the Munger road and that results are not obtained from the money expended. They say that men have been paid without working; that men on the county payroll even received money while they were at the state fair at St. Paul; and that teams have been paid by the county while they were doing private work.

Last fall, the farmers registered a similar protest and even started proceedings against one man, whom they claimed was carried on the county payroll, though he did no work. The man was afterwards killed at Proctor and the prosecution was dropped.

The district, from which the delegation came, is represented on the county board by Albert Overton. There are about sixty farmers in the towns of Solway and Herman and the delegation in Duluth today said that they all join in the protest.

ELOPERS WILL BE DEPORTED

Albert Harmon and Mrs. Hollins Must Return to Canada.

A United States immigration inspector will leave Wednesday evening for Winnipeg with Albert L. Harman and Mrs. Rose Minnie Hollins, who eloped to the United States together in March, and who were arrested at the Kinney mine, where Harmon was employed by the Republic Iron & Steel company. The woman had deserted her husband at Rainy River, Ont., to elope with Harmon.

The man and woman have been held at the county jail since March 27, awaiting the action of the United States authorities, who were investigating the case.

Mrs. Hollins is a comely young woman of more than average intelligence. She shows little regret for her escapade and is more chagrined that her dream of bliss with Harmon was interrupted. Mr. Hollins has written the immigration authorities that he is anxious and willing to receive his wife again and he will be waiting for her in Winnipeg.

RIOTING GROWING LESS IN CHANGSHA

Foreigners Are Quartered on Houseboats Anchored in the River.

Changsha, China, April 25.—The city is quiet tonight and the rioting at the inland towns throughout the province of Hunan appears to be subsiding. Nevertheless, as a measure of precaution, practically all of the foreigners have left the capital and gone to Hankow.

The new governor, Yang Wen Ting, has arrived and taken charge of affairs. He was accompanied here by four gunboats. The foreigners, representing missionaries and the Standard Oil company and the Anglo-American Tobacco company, are quartered on houseboats anchored in the river and will so remain until the governor gives them absolute assurance of protection.

The cause of the riots was the corner in rice, created in Hunan province, where rice is plentiful, while it is scarce in Hupeh province, which sent large numbers of paupers to Hunan.

WATER AND POWER NEEDED

Completion of Power Plant at Steel Plant Now Chief Aim.

Work on the steel plant at New Duluth is progressing satisfactorily, according to officials of the Minnesota Steel company. Just now the power plant is the most important factor in the situation. Power is needed to carry on the work of construction and until the power plant is in working order, progress will necessarily be comparatively slow. When power is readily available the growth of what is to be Duluth's greatest single industry will be very rapid.

Water supply also must be provided and when the power and the water are at hand there will be no cause for delay in the work. As a matter of fact, there is no actual delay now, but the outward evidences of constructive work are not strikingly apparent.

The cement block shop is completed and material from which the great buildings of the plant will be made is being turned out regularly.

BULLS AND BEARS IN THE MARKET

Wide Interest Shown, But Values Decline at the Close.

The copper market was active today, both the bulls and bears being in the market. Values scored upturns early in the day, but toward the close the selling pressure overcame the resistance and values declined to levels which at the close were lower in most instances than at the opening.

The heavy estimate of crop damage in the West had considerable influence on the market as favorable crop conditions have been one of the strong bull arguments. The reports may be exaggerated, but for the present they are exercising a bearish influence on the market.

Reports as to earnings of the United States Steel corporation will be published tomorrow. The meeting of directors will be held at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Estimates of the quarterly earnings run from $39,000,000 to $42,000,000. Reports of unfilled orders will have a potent effect on the stock market.

Sentiment is still bearish and support has been perfunctory. The short interest has increased, but it is not unwieldy, and prices are liable to work lower. At prevailing levels investment issues have not been as attractive in several weeks, and many conservative investors are picking up scattered lots.

Trading here was light and specialized, almost half of the number of shares traded in being in a low priced issue.

Butte Alex Scott, part paid, sold at $3; Denn at $2.50; Sed Warrior at $2.06¼; Shattuck at $26; Superior & Pittsburg at $1.37½; Butte & Superior at $1.81¼ and $1.87½; Calumet & Montana at $1.37½, $1.43¾ and $1.31¼; Calumet & Corbin at 80 and 81 cents; North American at $2.68¾, $2.75 and back to the opening. Zenith Lead & Zinc paid a dividend of five cents today, the regular quarterly dividend of 10 cents being cut in two.

Amalgamated sold at $73 to $74.25 and down to $72.12½; Butte Coalition at $21.50 to $21.75; Greene at $9.12½ to $9; North Butte at $33.50 to $34.75 to $33.50; Steel common at $83 to $82.87½ to $83.25 and down to $81.25, closing with sales at $81.62½. Calumet & Arizona sold at $65; Giroux at $8 to $8.12½, and back to $8; Lake at $51 to $50.12½ to $5; and then to $50.75. Superior & Pittsburg sold at $13.50.

Gordon R. Campbell secretary of Calumet & Arizona and Superior & Pittsburg, has returned to the main office in Calumet, after spending several weeks inspecting the mines at Bisbee. The Irish Mag shaft of the Calumet & Arizona is said to be revealing good ore between the 400 and 500-foot levels. Fifty feet of 10 per cent of oxide ore has been cut in a 50-foot drift on the 500-foot level. t the 1,450-foot level of the Oliver shaft the formation is identically the same as that at the 1,350-foot level, encountered previously entering the sulphide ore body. This ground is iron pyrites containing 1 per cent copper. At the Courtland property of Calumet & Arizona, native ore copper has been encountered. This ore has been cut for forty feet and averages 15 per cent copper. Last month's shipments from the Cleveland property yielded 250,000 pounds of copper.

The eighth report of the Black Mountain Mining company admits that "every effort on the part of the directors looking toward private subscriptions to carry the prospective work far enough to show that our prospect is worthy of complete development has failed."

Work at the mine will cease, it is said, about May 1. The proceeds from the broken ore now being milled will probably liquidate the company's indebtedness except, perhaps, the interest on the bonds and the bonded indebtedness.

The directors, for the second time in the mine's history, are appealing to stockholders to come to the aid of the company. The second payment of money to the company by stockholders will not be compulsory, however. The directors have agreed that "if by or before the time $100,000 to $125,000 of the subscription money is expended, the values which we believe to exist have not, in the opinion of the directors, been reasonably proved as to quantity and quality and probably extraction, then at the discretion of the directors the subscriptions hereto shall be cancelled as to the second payment of 25 cents a share."

If the stockholders fail to come forth with necessary money, and it is impossible to pay the interest on the bonds which is payable May 15, the trustees probably will advertise the property for sale for the benefit of the creditors.

Since April, 1906, the company has treated 800,000 tons of ore. For the first two years of operation the values ranged from $4.60 to $4 a ton, dropping to $2 a ton in 1909. Gold values now amount to less than $2 a ton and about 2.60 ounces of silver, about one-fifth of which is saved. The directors say a vein can be traced about three miles, and that they believe it contains a large tonnage of merchantable gold ore.

The second plan to finance the company's developments is the sale of $87,214.50 of 7 per cent collateral gold bonds which remain from the allotment authorized for in March, 1909.

The president of the company, W. Z. Stuart, who formerly held one of the most important executive positions in the paper trust, has accepted a position of like quality, it is said, with the Backus-Brooks company, which is erecting the largest paper mill in the United States at International Falls, Minn.

Hayden, Stone & Co. discuss the North Butte as follows:

"Advance extracts from the North Butte report sent out brokers down the backs of many stockholders, causing heavy liquidation. We take it that this was due, not so much to the decreased earnings, which were to have been expected from the statements regarding the ore tonnage. By the general manager of the mine, these were estimated at 882,200 tons, and by an independent engineer at 1,000,000.

"It was quite natural to draw a comparison between these figures and the scores of millions of tons developed in the last few years by the porphyry mines, and basing one's judgment upon the result, to sell North Butte.

"When the later reports came in, however, it appeared that there were other offsetting developments, and we think that, taking the report as a whole, there is a good deal to be said for North Butte on the bull side, considering the price at which it is now selling.

"In the first place, it is simply impossible, in the matter of ore reserves, to argue from a vein to a porphyry mine. Of course, it is a great satisfaction to be able to prove the existence of a sufficient quantity of ore to last for years to come, and therein undoubtedly lies a great advantage for the porphyry mines, one, in fact, of the several marked advantages that have led us to become identified with this type of mine. But the mere fact that the North Butte has but two years' supply in measurable ore reserves does not, for a moment, indicate, as people have apparently come to think, that the mine, at the end of that period, is going out of business. In fact, for Butte, where the veins are comparatively narrow, a two years' supply is quite a good one.

"We doubt if there is a vein mine in the country today that can show more than five years' supply in measurable ore.

"The only really unfavorable feature in the report, as we read it, is that the lowest levels of the Edith May and of the Jessie so far as developed, are poor. Even this, however, is somewhat offset by the unexpected development of rich ore in two other veins, and it is not at all improbable that, with greater depth, the Edith May and the Jessie, the two main veins, will again become productive.

"It is exceedingly important to remember that, although Butte is the second oldest of the large copper-mining camps of this country, there is not a single instance, so far as we know, of a Butte mine which has ever amounted to anything, played out.

"With respect to the payment of current unearned dividends, we cannot help saying, as frankly as we know how, that this is a bad practice, and one which should be disapproved by everybody. We see nothing whatever to justify these payments in excess of current earnings, and particularly as the North Butte company has exhausted all its cash on hand, it seems that a very serious error of judgment has been made by the managers. We do not question the nature of the motives of the directors in paying dividends as they have; we have no doubt that they have felt they were doing what would be most pleasing to shareholders, and probably with the hope that in some or other earnings would justify their action. This is a feature of the North Butte situation which is not dealt with as much as it should be, and in some respects it is more important even than the question of ore reserves.

"Last year's profits, however, which very likely marked the low point in this company's earnings, were sufficient to maintain the present reduced dividend rate of $2 a share.

"The difference between 13 and 20-cent copper is enormous to a high grade mine like North Butte, and it is quite possible that this company may already have witnessed the largest earnings in its history, but, as a mining proposition, we do not at all believe that it is near the point of exhaustion, or even that it is rapidly deteriorating."

Walker's copper leatter in Saturday's Boston Commercial said:

"The copper market has been more active, but prices are again fractionally lower. Lake is selling at 13¼ cents and electrolytic at 12⅝ cents per pound. It is understood that two or three large sales have been effected this week at about these prices. Foreign trading sentiment has turned very bearish, and the persistent decline in London metal market prices represents the liquidation at a loss of speculative holdings. Consumers are buying no more copper than their immediate requirements call for, and practically all of the existing surplus not owned by the producers is carried in two or three large speculative accounts. Many of the best informed producing interests assert that there has been a distinct improvement in the statistical position of the metal, and that consumption now slightly exceeds production the world over. They do not feel that the surplus is sufficiently large to cause alarm. As soon as sentiment changes sufficiently to cause all of the world's heavy consumers to come into the market and purchase their full requirements for three months in advance, the existing surplus will disappear in a single week.

"It is reported from New York that the Copper Producers' association will soon discontinue the publication of monly figures of output and deliveries. I have not yet confirmed this report, but it is said that Amalgamated interests are the principal objectors to this plan of publicity. It seems to me that the discontinuance of these quotations at this time would be very unwise, as it would tend to increase the apprehension now felt by consumers.

"The fact that consumption has at last overtaken production is certainly cause for encouragement. This condition has not been brought about by any reduction in output, as the tentative agreement to curtail, said to have been entered into by the leading producers, appears not to have been observed by any of them. The metal situation, in my opinion, should be left to work itself out by natural process, precisely as it always has in the past. Curtailment of production would bring about a fictitious advance in prices. I believe that prices will advance soon as a natural result of increase in demand. I shall not be surprised to see copper sell at 20 cents again within two or three years."

CHANGES RULES ON MAILED GERMS

Hitchcock Modifies Regulation on Sending of Infectious Matter.

Washington, April 25.—Postmaster General Hitchcock has amended that section of the postal regulations relating to the transmission of infectious matter in the mails. The change in the regulations will permit the use of a less expensive but amply secure mailing case for specimens of disease, also that such material may be sent to private laboratories approved by the postoffice department as well as to government, state and municipal laboratories. The changes meet with the approval of the bureau of public health and marine hospital service.

ARE SWARMING UPON THE LAND

Prospective Settlers Flocking to Lands Soon to Be Opened.

Cass Lake, Minn., April 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ever since the news of the land opening spread men have been arriving from all points and hurriedly making for claims, all-night-long travel has kept up. This morning when daylight broke houses were under construction on practically all the land within one or two miles. It looked as if every jack pine tree has a notice tacked on it, as they were so thick.

Today men are arriving on every train and, hiring teams, are speedily making for the jack pines. The opening has caused more excitement than any yet in the history of this section. Seven parties apparently ignorant of the "squatting" law have come along and tacked notices over that of others while others have tacked above or below. No one has as yet lined up in front of the land office, but they will likely do so before long to make sure of first filing.

LECTURES AT THE HIGH SCHOOL.

Saturday morning at 9 o'clock and at 8 o'clock in the evening Miss Cora Mel Patton will lecture at the high school auditorium.

Miss Patton spoke to the students some time ago and a large number are anxious to hear her again.

SAYS COMET'S TAIL IS 15,000,000 MILES LONG.

Pasadena, Cal., April 25.—Prof. Adams, who has charge of the observations of Halley's comet at the Carnegie observatory on Mount Wilson, said today that the comet became visible at 3:50 o'clock in the morning and passed out of sight about 4:30. The head of the comet is quite large and the tail appears to be 15,000,000 miles long.

DECLINE IS FRACTIONAL

Wheat Weak at the Opening, But Rallies Later in Session.

Little Trading in Flax, But Price Advances a Point.

Duluth Board of Trade, April 25.—In a stubborn and active market today May wheat declined from $1.10 bid at the opening to $1.09⅝, a loss of ⅛c from Saturday. July declined ⅛c from Saturday. September lost ¼c. The market opened strong and slumped when the bears opposed a further advance. The market declined about 1¼c and toward the close values firmed. May opened at $1.10 bid, sold ⅜c lower and then at $1.09½, $1.09¼, $1.08¾, $1.09, $1.08⅝, $1.09⅝ and at the close, $1.09⅝ asked. July opened at $1.10¾, lost 1c and then sold at $1.09¾, $1.10, $1.09⅝, $1.09½, $1.09¾, $1.09¼, $1.09⅞, $1.09⅝-¾, $1.10¼-⅜ and closed at that figure. September opened at $1.02, lost ⅞c and sold up to $1.01½ and closed with bids at that figure.

Flax was dull. May was $2.40b, sold 1c higher and closed with offers at $2.41. July was $2.35n. September sold at $1.83, $1.82 and closed $1.83. October was $1.73n, the September option was the most active.

Oats closed ⅛c up on buying to reports that the growing plant has been badly damaged by cold weather. It is not too late however, to reseed the ground that may be plowed up. The Northwest has a large supply of cash oats and it is inclined to make lower prices than Chicago.

Barley and rye were unchanged and durum closed ⅛c off.

After about a 4-cent advance, the bears today began to fight a further upturn and values declined. For several days the bears watched prices advance without presenting any opposition. They were willing to witness a moderate increase in values, so they could reinstate lines closed out at bottom levels of the last slump. They believed that the upturn which culminated in Saturday's high prices was sufficient, and their assault on values today caused a sharp descent in values at the opening. The market displayed some opposition around mid-day, but there was not much support, and the strength of the bears was not tested. The market was listless in the middle hours, and without interest.

With freezing temperatures in the winter wheat belt over Sunday there was some apprehension about the growing plant, but the trade generally accepts as fact the statements that the growing plant was not injured. Jointed wheat is generally believed to be more suspective of injury than the early plant, and in some portions of the wheat belt the wheat is reported to have jointed. In other years, however, jointed wheat has weathered a severe freeze, and the bears dispute the contention that the bulls have succeeded in killing the growing crop or that the injury to the plant has been such as to outweigh the prospects for a bumper harvest of the spring planted wheat.

Cold weather in the Northwest caused reports to be sent out that wheat that had germinated would have to be ploughed up and the land reseeded. Telegrams from the North Dakota and Minnesota state agricultural schools to The Herald today said that the cold weather had not hurt the seed nor the plant which in Southern Minnesota and South Dakota is above ground. The Northwest which bought wheat Saturday on weather conditions was disposed to sell it today. The long interest at Saturday's close was larger than for some time and the market seemed to be top heavy. Some wheat that had been purchased on the recent upturn was fed out on the decline today. Most of the longs are content with moderate profits.

Weather prospects are favorable. The government predicts fair and warmer weather for Kansas and Nebraska and the entire wheat belt for tomorrow. Frost is liable to materialize in Eastern Kansas and Nebraska tonight.

Statistics today were mixed. World's shipments fell off from 12,448,000 bu last week to 10,232,000 bu this week. Wheat on passage decreased 616,000 bu. The visible supply increased 293,000 bu. The total visible now is 29,782,000 bu. Last year it was 31,139,000 bu.

Foreign markets were stronger. Shorts covered and Russian offerings were not as liberal although the prospects are for large shipments. Advices from Italy point to favorable crop indications.

The cash wheat market continues dull but the flour demand has improved slightly.

An increase of about 1,500,000 acres spring wheat in Minnesota and the Dakotas is hown by reports compiled by the Minneapolis Market Record. The increase in Minnesota is 6.6 per cent, in North Dakota, 16.8 per cent, and in South Dakota, 11.3 per cnt. Oats increased 16.4 per cent in Minnesota, 7.5 per cent in South Dakota, and decreased 1.3 per cent in North Dakota. In rye there was a decrease of 2.6 per cent in Minnesota and 1.6 per cent in South Dakota, while North Dakota is unchanged. Barley increased 1.7 to 3.8 per cent in the three states, flax increased 24.9 per cent in North Dakota, 6.3 per cent in Minnesota and 2.4 per cent in South Dakota. The percentage of durum wheat seeded was 24.8 per cent in North Dakota, 41.5 per cent in South Dakota and 19.2 per cent in Minnesota. In velvet chaff there was 27.6 per cent in Minnesota, 9.7 per cent in North Dakota and 35.3 per cent in South Dakota. The acreage seeded to April 15 compares as follows:

	Minn	S. D.	N. D.
Wheat	88.1	82.6	46.1
Oats	80.7	70.9	31.7
Rye	95.5	78.7	52.7
Barley	36.0	63.3	36.0
Flax	79.1	59.9	57.5

Farm reserves of grain April 10 in the three Northwestern states as compiled by the Minneapolis Market Record were 15 per cent of wheat, 20 per cent of oats 13 per cent of rye, 14 per cent of barley and 10 per cent of flax. The details by the state follow:

	Minn	S. D.	N. D.
Wheat	15.9	15.8	13.0
Oats	20.5	17.7	22.7
Rye	11.0	16.0	11.4
Barley	12.9	14.5	14.6
Flax	9.9	12.2	8.0

These figures were loosely compiled and not much faith is placed in them by local traders. That South Dakota, for instance, has 12.2 per cent of flax in reserve cannot be believed. Minnesota is credited with 9.9 per cent and North Dakota with 8 per cent. Other figures are disjointed and they are presented simply as an item of gossip.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool—"The market at the opening was affected by firmness in American cables and less favorable American crop reports and values were ⅜d to ½d higher. Following opening the market showed a very firm undertone, with an additional advance of ½d. Russian shipments were smaller than expected. while shipments to the United Kingdom nearly a million bu less than last week. Toward mid-day there was some little pressure, as the market became dull and prices lost part of the morning advance, selling was promtped by continued favorable Russian crop reports, good harvest reports from India and the fact that cargoes in distant positions are being offered freely. At mid-day the undertone was firm with prices ½d to ⅞d higher, with the principal strength in October. Corn was dull and nominally unchanged. India—Harvest reports are favorable, although there has been some rain during the past few days. Weekly world's shipments wheat this week, 10,732,000; last week, 12,448,000; last year, 8,240,800. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Cold Weather Gives Firm Tone to Early Wheat Trading.

Chicago, April 25.—Cold weather throughout the greater part of the wheat belt gave a firm tone to the early trading in the wheat pit and prices advanced at the outset from ⅛@¾c. A slight advance in Liverpool prices also helped the bullish sentiment. In the first hour a rush of offerings took the edge off the early advance and quotations fell off more than the initial gain. May sank from $1.10⅝ to $1.09⅝; July went down from $1.03¾ to $1.03@1.03⅛, while September dropped from $1.02 to $1.01@1.01¼. The market steadied on the lower levels.

Opening prices were: May, ⅜@¾c higher at $1.10¼@1.10⅝; July, ¼@½c up at $1.03½@1.03¾, and September ⅛@⅜c higher at $1.01¾@1.02.

A rush of buyers to the corn pit started prices up at the outset, the futures gaining about ½c all around. Later in the session larger offerings caused the market to sag somewhat, July and September falling about ½c. A reaction came later in the day, influenced by additional crop damage reports, and the losses were recovered. The close was strong all around, with May ⅛c up at $1.10, July ½c higher at $1.03¾ and September ⅛c up at $1.01¾.

Longs invaded the pit at the high points and loaded the byers with offerings, causing figures to shrink. On the upturn May advanced to 59¼c and later sank to 58⅝c, other futures imitating its performance. In the first hour quotations were resting on the low point. May opened at 59@59⅛c, ¼@⅜c to ⅜@½c higher, the other futures making slightly smaller gains.

The market dragged through much of the session, but rallied in the final hour on reports of bad weather conditions which induced covering by shorts. May went up to 60⅛c, the other futures climbing with it. Close was strong all around, with May ¼@⅜c up at 60c.

Oats duplicated the course of corn and wheat, starting at an advance on front damage fears and declining under heavy selling pressure. May sold between 43c and 42c, other options showing similar variations. At the start May was unchanged to ¼c up at 42¾@43c.

Provisions were generally lower at the outset, May pork declining 22½c, and other products varying from 15c down to 12½c higher. The weakening grain market was a drag on the provisions pit and prices sagged in the first hour. Opening prices for the May products were: Pork, 22½c off, at $21.80; lard, 10@12½c lower, at $12.35@12.37½; and ribs, 7½c down, at $12.27½.

There were also said to be covering as a result of the recent spot house failure, but the main factor was believed to be the wintry conditions prevailing over a large area in the belt and many private wires claiming that extensive replanting would be necessary.

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

Prices Sharply Depressed By Opening Sales, Which Are Heavy.

Buying Orders Cause Good Rally, But Another Decline Occurs.

New York, April 25.—Prices of stocks were sharply depressed by the opening sales which were in large volume especially for the grangers. Chesapeake & Ohio and Illinois Central 1½, Northern Pacific and Atchison 1⅜, United States Steel 1¼ and Great Northern Ore certificates, American Smelting, Amalgamated Copper, Rock Island, Reading, St. Paul, Great Northern preferred, Republic Steel and Sloss-Sheffield Steel 1.

Support was withheld from the market until losses reaching a point had been made in a dozen or more stocks. When the buying orders began to take effect, Union Pacific and United States Steel rallied a point and all of the other active stocks a good fraction. The market became very dull on the rise.

The morning sale of stocks was heavy, prompted by the crop damage reports and by the heavy gold engagement for export. The cleaning up of selling orders opened the way to recoveries which placed some of the market leaders before noon above last week's closing prices.

The trading was listless at the higher prices. Federal Mining preferred rose 3 and American Sugar 1. Central Railroad of New Jersey sold at a decline of 18 and Lackawanna 10. Bonds were irregular.

The market closed weak and excited. Prices ran off again in the final hour. Renewed strength in wheat revived anxiety over crop conditions. Selling of United States Steel in spite of positive predictions that the dividend would be increased tomorrow, had an unfavorable effect on speculative sentiment. Consolidated Gas and Reading were forced 3½ under Saturday, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Deleware & Hudson, Chesapeake & Ohio, Louisville & Nashville and American Smelting 2 to 3, St. Paul, Rock Island, Northern Pacific, United States Steel, Atchison, Broklyn Rapid Transit and others 1¾ or more.

MORE THAN A MATCH.

Manchester Guardian: Dwellers in the suburbs who possess a three-yard by two grass lawn have lately been receiving the attentions of an artist in bluff. The operator sets to work boldly on the grass with shears, and after mowing with much show of industry comes respectfully to the door and announces that "the job's done, and it's ninepence." Much concern is expressed when it is pointed out by the owner of the lawn that the "job" was done without invitation or request. "Wusn't you the gentleman as met me yustd'y an tole me to do it?" Generally the ninepence is paid, especially if the work really wanted doing.

One artist, however, was momentarily scared when the tenant with a realistic simulation of horror exclaimed: "What? You've cut my grass! Now just go and put it back again!"

BEWARE OF THE TRUSTEE.

H. K. Adair, the Western detective, was on the trail of an absconding trustee.

"The rascal," said Mr. Adair bitterly, "had charge of $500,000 belonging to two old maids. Now, I'm afraid, the old maids will have to go to work. Moral, beware of the trustee.

"A good many of us, if we are mixed up with trustees, have something like Annie Johnson's experience.

"Annie's uncle left all his money to his son on condition that the young man married Annie. If he didn't marry her, then the money went to Annie herself.

"The son didn't marry her. He eloped with a much prettier girl. Annie, well enough pleased on the whole, then called on the trustee.

"'I've called for my money,' she said.

"'What money?' the trustee demanded in surprise.

"'Uncle's money that you're in charge of,' said she. 'It was to go to me if Tom didn't marry me—and he didn't. So it's mine. Please hand it over.'

"'Tut, tut,' said the trustee. 'Not so fast. You don't understand a trustee's duties. Patience, patience. It's true Tom hasn't married you so far, but he may bury or divorce a dozen wives, and still come back to you in the end.'"

JUDGE IN HYDE CASE TRACES PAPERS THAT DEFENSE SECURED

Suggests Arrests as Result of Incident of the Grand Jury Notes.

Puts Further Action Up to Decision of State's Attorney.

Two Nurses Testify on Same Lines Others Have Done in Trial.

Kansas City, Mo., April 26.—If Judge Ralph Latshaw had known last week as much about the disappearance of the grand jury notes which fell into the hands of Dr. Hyde's counsel last Wednesday, as he does now, three persons would have been ordered arrested by him, he announced today.

Furthermore, he said, if he had been notified of the loss of the papers as soon as they were missed, he believed they never would have got into the hands of the defendant's attorneys. He added he would put it up to Prosecutor Virgil Conkling to take some action.

"I have told all I know about the case to the prosecutor. He can do whatever he likes," said the judge.

Asks Bar Association's Aid.

In the meantime Prosecutor Conkling is still investigating. He has asked the local bar association to help

SENTENCED TO DIE FOR KILLING MATE

Yeggman Who Shot Pal for Turning State's Evidence Is Doomed.

New York, April 26.—Thomas Barnes, alias "Bangor Billy," who killed his fellow "yegg," William Leonard, for "squealing," has been sentenced to die in Sing Sing prison during the week beginning June 6.

Barnes was one of six men who robbed the postoffice at Raleigh, N. C., a year ago. The other five were all arrested and convicted, but Leonard, one of them, was pardoned by the president at the request of postoffice inspectors who found they could use him to get information.

Barnes suspected Leonard and traced him to Brooklyn, where he shot him in his own doorway, before his wife.

PEACE MEN LAUD TEDDY

French Arbitration Group Calls on Him at Embassy.

Ex-President Is Given New Expressions of Appreciation of His Work.

Paris, April 26.—This afternoon, at the American embassy, Mr. Roosevelt received a deputation from the French parliamentary group for international arbitration, headed by Former Premier Leon Bourgeois and Baron d'Estournelles de Constant. The baron, who shared last year's Nobel peace prize with M. Beernaert of Belgium, expressed to the former president regret that parliament was not in session, as the group had planned a great demonstatiron in his honor. Nevertheless, he said, the group desired again to show its gratitude, many times expressed, for Mr. Roosevelt's decisive interventions in favor of conciliation, justice and international peace.

"To our gratitude for the past is added our confidence in the benevolent influence that you will continue to exercise in the future. This confidence is all the greater because your conception of peace conforms with our own. Peace for you, as for us, is not peace at any price, but justice. Our propaganda is a continual fight for the right, despite skeptics who are your enemies and ours. We will not stop the good fight so glorious for democracy against the abuse of force, which is the negation of all morality, human dignity, liberty and civilization.

Late this afternoon, Mr. Roosevelt will go to Issy-les-Moulineaux, where, as the guest of the Academy of Sports, he will witness some aeroplane flights. Tonight a dinner in his honor, followed by a reception, will be given at the American embassy by Ambassador and Mrs. Bacon.

IS THE MOST COURTED WOMAN IN AMERICA

MRS. WILLIAM B. LEEDS.

New York, April 26.—Mrs. William B. Leeds, the charming young widow of the Tin Plate magnate, is known as "the most courted woman in America." She recently sailed for Europe on the same ship as Lady Paget. It is said to be the dearest wish of Lady Paget that Mrs. Leeds marry her eldest son, Capt. Albert Paget. This alliance would add millions to the Paget fortune and a mots attractive bride to the family.

Saved by Clouds.

Atlanta, Ga., April 26.—Cloudy weather last night saved Georgia from the killing frost that had been predicted and which would have undoubtedly completed the destruction of the fruit and vegetables by the cold wave which has already damaged the crops in this state to the amount of thousands of dollars. The weather continues cold, around 40 degs.

Consistory Will Be Held at Rome Then---Americans May Be Named.

Rome, April 26.—It was unexpectedly reported today that it was quite probable a consistory would be held in the middle of June, when some twelve cardinals would be created.

American Chances Slim.

Washington, April 26.—When the news of the probability of holding a consistory at Rome in June reached there high in Catholic circles in Washington today there was much speculation as to the likelihood of an American prelate being appointed. The general opinion, however, was that no American would be selected but that the places would be filled by workers whose activity has been notable in the church at Rome.

END OF GOLD EXPORT MOVEMENT IN SIGHT.

New York, April 26.—The end of the gold export movement is close at hand, news reaching here today that the Bank of England has reduced its offer for American gold to 76 shillings 5 pence.

CLASHES AT THE HEARING

Angry Repartee Marks House Investigation Into Ship Subsidy Charges.

Steenerson's Letter Regarded By Penton as Public Document.

Washington, April 26.—A little color now and then has been given the proceedings of the house committee which is investigating the charges reflecting on representatives in connection with the ship-subsidy legislation. Aside from the evidence introduced in which counsel for the prosecuting witness, Representative Steenerson, is trying to weave a web around Secretary Penton of the Merchant Marine league, and others, there have been occasional good natured clashes between counsel, angry interjections from aggrieved members, and repartee on all sides.

Penton, who resumed the witness stand today for further examination, particularly regarding the books of the league, on which Treasurer Sullivan also will be called to testify, con-

PRESSMEN HAVE UNION DISPUTE

Change of Crews on Chicago Papers Results From Strike.

Chicago, April 25.—Local No. 7 of the Chicago Web Pressmen's union struck on the Chicago daily newspapers today, but places of the strikers were promptly filled from other sources by President George L. Berry of the international union.

The trouble started a fortnight ago in the pressroom of the Inter Ocean as a result of a dispute between unions as to jurisdiction. Local No. 7 may lose its charter in the international organization as a result. The dispute is over the appointment of Charles H. Rogers as foreman of the pressroom of the Inter Ocean.

According to a statement issued by the publishers of this paper, Rogers was previously foreman of the Robert O. Law Printing company's plant. He was formerly a web pressman, but of recent years has been in charge of a flat bed establishment. He had been for eighteen years a member of the Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3, a member of the International Pressmen's and Assistant's Union of North America and has always been in good standing.

Refused to Accept Card.

Mr. Rogers went through the necessary formalities in changing from one union to another, but Union No. 7 refused to accept his card. President Berry nevertheless ordered that Rogers assume his duties as foreman of the Inter Ocean pressroom which he did, other members of the union thereupon walking out. Members employed on the remaining newspapers followed today.

BOOM IS ON FOR BURKE

North Dakota Democrats Would Nominate Him for Vice President.

Figure That Presidential Candidate Will Come From the East.

Fago, N. D., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—North Dakota Democrats will try to land the vice presidential nomination in 1912 for Governor Burke. That is the quiet tip that is going the rounds. It is asserted the movement was inaugurated during the two recent addresses of the executive in the Twin Cities, and Minnesota, Iowa and North and South Dakota Democrats are willing to back the movement.

The friends of Governor Burke do not hesitate to announce their position. They insist there is no show for either Bryan or any other far-Western man to head the Democratic ticket in the next campaign. They figure Gaynor of New York or some other Easterner will be the nominee. If their view is correct, some Western man or candidate from the Northwest will stand the best show for vice president, and co-operation at this stage will insure the support of Eastern states for Burke.

Of course Governor Burke must be elected again this fall to insure the possibility of the vice presidential move. The supporters of the North Dakotan insist that he is already a national figure, now that he has been twice elected as a Democrat in a state which once gave the Republican candidate for the preidency a majority in every county. They claim that if he is elected a third time in a normally Republican stronghold the national Democratic organization cannot ignore him.

SOME MINERS BACK AT WORK

Eight Operators Sign Wage Agreements in Pittsburg District.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 26.—Individual wage agreements have been signed in the Pittsburg district between the United Mine Workers of America and eight independent coal operators employing 6,000 men, allowing the resumption of work in a number of mines today.

The scales were signed upon the basis of the Cincinnati convention resolution.

NEGRO GANG ROUNDED UP

New Orleans Officers Have Running Fight With Two of Them.

Street Car Robberies Are Laid to Blacks Disguised as Whites.

New Orleans, April 26.—After successfully holding up and robbing the crews and passengers of street cars on several occasions, a gang of negroes, disguised as white men, were rounded up by the New Orleans police on the outskirts of the city early today. In a running battle with the officers one of the negroes was fatally wounded.

In a running fight, shortly before daylight, between Alfred and Ollie Smith, brothers, and two patrolmen, immediately after the negroes had held up a car on the Peters avenue line, both negroes were captured, Alfred Smith being fatally shot.

This capture resulted in the rounding up of several others, alleged to be members of the gang, and the finding of a trunk filled with valuables taken from passengers.

Foreigners at Pressed Steel Car Plant Give Up Their Fight.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 26.—One thousand foreigners—all that remained from the 5,000 who struck for increased wages and shorter hours at the plant of the Pressed Steel Car company in Schoenville—returned to work today at the old wage scale and ended the strike which has crippled the plant's operation for the past ten days.

MAY SUE BANKS ON THIS SIDE

English Cotton Firms Foresee Complications From Southern Failure.

Liverpool, April 26.—The question of the responsibility for local losses incurred through the failure of the Alabama cotton firm of Knight, Yancey & Co. will lead, it is expected, to litigation with American banks.

Liverpool cotton firms incline to the opinion that American exchange buyers are responsible to the acceptors of bills of lading in England because in many cases they acted as principals and not as agents. The bankers of Liverpool have refused to agree to the suggestion of the losing firms that they should dishonor the acceptances.

MUCH TALK OVER HUGHES

Appointment to Supreme Bench Starts Political Gossip at Albany.

Republicans Will Miss Him as State Leader in Coming Election.

Albany, N. Y., April 26.—Messages in generous numbers poured into the executive chamber today, bearing congratulations to Governor Hughes upon his nomination to a place upon the United States supreme court. They came from friends both in and out of the state and were varied and interesting.

Governor Hughes' determination to accept the offer of President Taft to name him for judgship was the subject of much speculation at the capital today as to effect it would have upon pending legislation and the coming campaign. Friends and supporters of the governor were plainly downcast at the prospect of losing so valued a leader. Those who, in the past, have opposed his policies, had little to say other than to express their gratifica-

STEAMER AND CREW OF 187 GO DOWN

Fate of British Sealing Vessel Is Reported at St. John's.

St. John's, Nfld., April 26.—The probable loss of the British sealing steamer Aurora, with her crew of 187 men, was reported here today by the sealing steamer Beothic.

The Aurora has been missing since April 1. No more definite news is expected until the next arrival from the fishing grounds.

Those on board the Beothic and Erik reported that a number of seals killed by the Aurora's crew and "panned" upon the ice had drifted ashore.

The Aurora is owned by C. T. Bowering & Co., Ltd., of Liverpool. She is a wooden steamer with a tonnage of 580 gross and 366 net. She is 165 feet long, 30 feet beam and was built at Dundee in 1876. She has been sealing from this port every year since 1877.

CIRCUS TENT IS BLOWN DOWN

One Man Killed and Another Sustains Fatal Injuries in Storm.

New York, April 26.—During a heavy thunder storm which struck New York and vicinity this morning, the big tent sheltering the menagerie of a circus in Jersey City was blown down, killing one man, fatally injuring another and badly injuring a third, and knocking the animal cages helter-skelter about the tent.

The larger animals had not been brought into the tent from the winter quarters of the circus, which was just about to begin a road tour. The cages holding the animals were strong ones, and none of the wild creatures escaped.

The fatality was caused by the overturning of a circus wagon on which three employes were sleeping.

GETS PASTORS TO WITHHOLD VOTE

Athletic Supporter Describes Football Game to Ministers.

Los Angeles Cal., April 26.—Dr. H. W. Peck of Fresno, in forceful language, protested yesterday against the Los Angeles Ministerial union adopting a resolution condemning football. The resolution was introduced by Dr. Schenck.

Dr. Peck was immediately on his feet and in a vivid word picture soon had the pastors at a nothing-to-nothing game, with two teams struggling and the co-eds cheering.

"I value my football experience nearly equally with my degree" said Dr. Peck.

The resolution was laid on the table.

TOM TAGGART COHORTS WIN

Score Overwhelming Victory in Primaries in Marion County.

Indiana Democrats May Not Pick Senate Candidate at Convention.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 26.—The overwhelming victory won by Thomas Taggart and his friends last night in the primaries in this city and Marion county for the selection of delegates to the Democratic state convention, which opens tomorrow night, added strength today to the movement proposed by Taggart for a state-wide primary to choose a candidate for the United States senate. The 183 delegates from Marion county will vote as a unit in the convention for a state-wide primary.

Some of the candidates for United States senator oppose the primary election plan on the ground that it would cost about $50,000 and this, divided among the candidates, would fall heavily on a few men.

Many of the candidates for places on the state ticket today decried the plan of Governor Marshal to have the convention indorse a candidate for the senate, fearing that it would cause such a fight in the convention that the success of the ticket would be endangered at the November election.

COMRADES TO BURY HIM

Civil War Veteran Will Be Given a Military Funeral.

Through Ignorance He Was Allowed to Die at Poor Farm.

Funeral services will be held over the remains of August Stroebel, 69 years of age, a veteran who served through most of the Civil war, Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the undertaking rooms of J. L. Crawford on Second avenue west.

Members of the Spanish American War Veterans will act as the pall bearers and the firing squad will be from the Sons of Veterans. Willis A. Gorman post will be in charge of the exercises. Interment will be at Soldiers' Rest, at Forest Hill cemetery.

The veterans of the city are sadly shocked that Mr. Stroebel, who has been one of them for years should have died last month at the poor farm, unattended by a single comrade or relative. They were making arrangements to have him removed, when he passed away. They learned of his predicament only the day before.

How he got to the institution is a mystery to the members of the G. A. R. posts of the city. It is supposed that he was taken ill in the central part of the city and was sent out by some kind-hearted stranger who called the attention of A. P. Cook, poor commissioner, to his predicament.

Stroebel lived alone in a shanty at the far end of Minnesota Point. The records show that the number of his abode was 2300 Minnesota avenue. He had no one to assist him at any time and was generally much by himself. It seemed impossible for any one to get much of his past history from him. He has two sons living in La Crosse and a daughter in Milwaukee, but no replies were received to the letters sent them by Asa Dailey, in charge of Memorial hall at the new court house.

Mr. Stroebel entered the army Aug 3, 1862, as a private of Company B, Twenty-eighth New York infantry. He was given an honorable discharge as drum major Sept 25, 1865. By occupation he was a painter and some time before his death did odd jobs about the city.

Gordon was 40 and had no relatives as far as is known.

HIS WONDERFUL INTUITION.

—From the Chicago Daily News.

IS ON TRIAL FOR HIS LIFE

George Booker Faces Jury for Alleged Murder of Stepfather.

Entire Day Given Over to the Selection of a Jury.

George Booker is on trial today before Judge Dibell of the district court.

Booker is charged with the murder of his stepfather, Charles Clark. The alleged murder took place on the road between Duluth and French river last December.

The evidence in the case presented by the state will be almost wholly circumstantial. No one was present but the two men, one of whom never left the spot alive.

Assistant County Attorney Warren E. Greene is representing the state and Judge S. F. White appears for the defendent.

The entire day was spent in getting jurymen and it is probable that it will be late Wednesday before twelve men to try the case will be secured. Many do not favor the penalty in this state for first degree murder, and others do not pin much faith in circumstantial evidence. Some of them insist that they would require that the state present a man who could swear that he had seen the fatal blow struck.

Booker was indicted on the first degree murder charge by the March grand jury. His trial has been postponed from time to time. The grand jury did not state in its indictment how Charles Clark had been killed, but the jurors merely indicated that it was their opinion that he had been murdered by the stepson, George Booker.

Booker has told at least two different stories of the death of Clark. He first said, it is claimed, that the only time there was any indication that Clark had been hurt was when he fell over the campfire. At the inquest later he told the story in detail. He said that he was taking a load of supplies to a lumber camp on French river, and that Mr. Clark went with him. Booker said that the roads were bad and that the wagon got stuck several times. There were a number of hills, and in one instance he gave the horses a start, so that they might more easily make the hill on the other side. He said that he was about half way, when he looked back, to see Clark just raising himself off the ground. Booker asked what had happened, and Clark replied that one of the wheels had ahit him. Booker asked if he was hurt, and Clark is said to have answered no. The next that happened was when Clark fell over the fire. Then he admitted that he was hurt, and Booker put him in the wagon and brought him to the city. On the way he died.

The stories told were unusual, and the marks on the body were numerous and of such a character as to arouse suspicion. Booker was arrested and held to await the action of the grand jury. Three of Clark's ribs were broken, his face was cut and there were numerous marks on the body.

The police claim that both men had been drinking, and, that after some trouble of which they are ignorant, Booker deliberately kicked Clark to death.

Clean-shaven, wearing a black shirt, a neat black suit and thoroughly at ease, Booker sat in court this morning and whispered instructions to his attorney. His wife and little child were also present. It is expected that the trial will last out the week.

ATTACK THREE SAFES IN SPARTA

Burglars Are Getting Bold in Depredations in Wisconsin City.

Sparta, Wis., April 26.—Burglars last night made three attempts to rob safes here, one of which was successful. In each instance the men escaped.

The safe of the John D. Young Lumber company was demolished and a small amount of money taken. The safes in two hardware stores withstood the efforts of the men to gain access.

A week ago the safe of another store was blown open and a few dollars taken.

Two weeks ago robbers made an unsuccessful attempt to hold up the Pioneer Limited train of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway near here.

The rough country adjoining is believed to be the rendezvous of the robbers.

UNABLE TO SELL BONDS

City Council Will Probably Raise Rate on Small Issue.

Water and Light Department Has Not Disposed of Recent Issue.

Unable to get satisfactory bids on the $50,000 worth of improvement bonds, which the city has been endeavoring to sell at 4 per cent, has caused the council to take steps to raise the interest to 4½ per cent.

An ordinance to that effect was introduced at the council meeting last evening by Alderman Getchell, chairman of the finance committee. At the present condition of the bond market it has been found impossible to get satisfactory bids on 4 per cent bonds, and it is expected that there will be little improvement the next few months. The city is sadly in need of the money, which will be turned into the permanent improvement revolving fund. Unless it is secured many greatly needed improvements will be delayed at least another year, and the city is now so far behind that this necessity would be very unfortunate.

The ordinance raising the interest rate had its first reading last night and will probably be passed at the meeting next Monday. Up to date the water and light board has not been able to sell the $250,000 worth of bonds authorized at the last election. A deal is under way and the commissioners are hoping it will be successful in a short time. The bonds pay interest at 4 per cent and the conditions under which they were authorized make it impossible to raise the rate.

So urgent is the need for the money to make necessary extensions that it is believed the water and light board will make some sacrifice in order to realize on the bonds. At the present time they wish to sell $200,000 worth, with the $50,000 reserved for the proposed extension to the steel plant.

WOMEN ARE ENTHUSIASTIC

Good Spirit Shown By Those Who Will Work on "Tag Day."

The meeting yesterday of the women who will work for the success of the "tag day" for the benefit of St. Mary's hospital next Saturday, was an enthusiastic one.

The force of literature is even larger than the committee in charge of the tag day had hoped. There is a spirit of willingness to work shown on every hand and numerically and in measure of enthusiasm the force of workers for the hospital will be one that should make a great success of the venture.

The "taggers" will be on the street from 6 o'clock in the morning until 7 o'clock in the evening next Saturday and will tag everybody. The hospital needs money for its addition and for carrying on its work of charity: the workers are enthusiastic for the cause in which they are deeply interested, and they are hoping that the public will show the spirit of generosity and charity the cause merits.

SUN DIAL MOTTOES.

Very curious inscriptions appear on many sun dials, such as the one on Paper Buildings, in the Temple, says the Gentlewoman, which bids one abruptly "Begone about your business;" and again in Pump Court we are told that "shadows we are, and like shadows depart."

Others on various sun dials are: "The day will come," "Everywhere the same," "Behold we fly," "I show by the kindness and splendor of the sun," "This is the day," "Learn to value time," "I fly while you behold me," "Enjoy the present hour," "The shadow moves though I am at rest," "I set to rise," "Days make years," "I stay for no man," "The day flies," "Such is life," "Man is but a shadow," "Redeem the time," "Lying does not belong to me," "The brightest day has its shades," "You pursue a shadow," "The sun causes the shadow," "You may waste, but cannot stop me," "Life is fleeting as the shadow," "Let not the sun go down on thy wrath."

Vertical sun dials could be placed on a south wall with but little trouble and less material, for it only required a dial to cast a shadow on radiating incised lines marked on the wall. These often appeared on churches and were generally near the southwestern angle.

Sometimes sun dials even appeared in stained glass windows. These are still to be seen in Lambeth palace, and at one time there was another in the Church of All Hallows staining, Mark lane.

Another kind of dial was of a portable description known as the "ring" type, to be worn on the finger, the light finding its way through a tiny hole. Of these the rarest sort known was furnished with a combination of projections for throwing the shadow of the sun. Cardinal Wolsey had one made in brass gilt on which were engraved his arms. Other portable ones were a sort of combination of dial and compass, and folded up.

Then there was the pillar sun dial, with which we are familiar. Of this kind the baluster shaped pillar is most frequently seen, though of course there are many variations, some taking the form of columns more or less carved and decorated.

In more recent years sun dials of growing shrubs have been made as ornaments to lawns, such as the one at Broughton castle, near Banbury. The hours are made of growing box or yew enibedded in minute fragments of smashed marble; the upright dial, also growing, is of yew and is cut and trimmed into shape. Around the whole is written in letters of yew, "Memory lives, but the hour flies."

CHOICE MESABA IRON RANGE PROPERTY SOON TO BE DEVELOPED

Iron Mountain Mining company of this city is arranging to continue the development of its property in section 20-58-19, adjoining the townsite of Buhl. This property has been leased to the company by August Fitger, P. S. Anneke and John Q. A. Crosby, who are the fee owners.

Mining men of the range say that the property will develop into a big mine, for the reason that it is surrounded by Frantz, Culver and Sharon mines, and drilling on the property has demonstrated that it contains the same formation as the mines adjoining which are big producers.

The company is capitalized at $300,000 and there are 300,000 shares at the par value of $1.00 each. Only so much of the treasury stock will be sold as will be necessary to develop the properties held by the company. Every dollar derived from the sale of the treasury stock will be used wholly and entirely to the development of the properties and its kindred purposes. The company has no paid officers and is free from all debts.

ONLY FOUR DAYS MORE

For Taking the United States Census in Duluth.

HAVE YOU BEEN COUNTED?

With only the remainder of this week to complete the taking of the census in Duluth, the government forces engaged in the work here are going at top speed to complete it.

Assistant Supervisor J. W. Allen was getting relief forces into action today. It has been found that some of the districts assigned to the enumerators were too large or too thickly populated for one person to take the census in the time given, and those who have finished the work in their own districts have been sent out as an auxiliary force.

Every precaution will be taken to insure a complete census. If there is any doubt in the mind of the supervisor of the ability of an enumerator to complete the work in his district by Saturday evening, no chances will be taken. Another enumerator will be sent into the district and between them they will certainly get over it. The supervisor here is working on the plan that it is better for a district to be covered before Saturday than not completed at all, and he will not arrange the work on too narrow a margin.

The work is going along smoothly enough in Duluth. No trouble has been experienced with foreigners, for interpreters of every language have been available. In most families it has been found that children of school age are able to assist the enumerators in securing the desired information, so that the delay incident to calling interpreters are avoided.

Many people have taken advantage of the advance information given by the list of questions published in The Herald. At many homes the enumerators found the questions all answered and ready for them without any delay and the people who have followed the plan have greatly facilitated the work.

FAIR

Yesterday was a beautiful spring day and today is almost a duplicate. The threatened freeze didn't come last night, for the lowest temperature was 36 deg. The highest temperature yesterday was 48 deg., but it was comfortable as a contrast to the conditions that prevailed for a few days. Continued fair weather is promised with probably frost tonight.

Clear, cold weather prevailed a year ago today.

The sun rose this morning at 5 o'clock and it will set at 7:11, giving fourteen hours and eleven minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"The Eastern disturbance remained about stationery over Lake Erie during the past twenty-four hours. In the meantime further rain or snow resulted in the lake region, Ohio and Middle Mississippi valleys and Atlantic states. The Northwestern high pressure extends from the Dakotas southward to Texas and eastward through the Gulf region to and including South Carolina and Florida, causing a continuance of chilly weather in the Middle West and Southern states. Frosts occurred this morning in Kansas, Arkansas and Louisiana. Temperatures have moderated somewhat in the Northwest attending a decrease in barometric pressure.

"Frost may be expected at the Head of the Lakes tonight with lowest temperatures close to 32 degs."

tion of the appointment, which will remove him from the field of active politics. All agree, however, that the governor's services in behalf of the Republican party will be greatly missed in the coming campaign.

Little Effect in Legislation.

The legislative program will not be materially affected by the governor's action, in the opinion of the leaders. With the exception of the question of direct nominations, which is soon to be threshed out, the most important of the governor's recommendations are slated for passage. The resolution calling for a thorough investigation of corrupt practices has practically been adopted. The bill placing telephone and telegraph companies under the jurisdiction of the public service commission is about ready for legislative approval.

The anti-oral book-making bills have passed the assembly, as have the bills enlarging the powers of the public service commission. The assembly has voted against the federal income tax plan, as recommended by the governor in a special message on the opening day of the session. Other legislation favored by the governor is progressing.

solve the mystery, and offered to resign if it can be shown that he is in any way to blame for the loss of the papers.

Two Nurses Testify.

Miss Rose Churchill and Miss Elizabeth Gordon were the only two witnesses before the court during the morning session. Both went to the Swope house on Dec. 4 and remained during the typhoid epidemic. Their evidence was similar to that of the other nurses who have testified.

The state resumed its examination of Miss Elizabeth Gordon, a nurse, who worked in the Swope home, at the opening of the Hyde trial today. Miss Gordon was on the stand about an hour at the close of court yesterday. Her statement that she saw Dr. Hyde use dirty water in giving Chrisman Swope a hypodermic injection came as a surprise to both the state and the defense, as the nurse had never spoken of the alleged occurrence before.

Court was convened promptly at 9 o'clock this morning in keeping with the longer session system announced by Judge Latshaw yesterday. Hereafter at least seven and a half hours of court will be held every day.

The smallest crowd present since the trial opened, about 100 persons, was in the courtroom this morning. Special Prosecutor Reed first took the witness through a long series of questions regarding her charts and then took up the illness of Margaret Swope. Until a few minutes before Miss Swope was seized with a convulsion on Dec. 18, she said, the girl was bright and cheerful.

State Wins Big Point.

The state attempted to get into the evidence the orders that were given by Dr. Twyman regarding the administration of medicine at the house during the typhoid epidemic. Strenuous objection by the defense caused the court to send the jury to its room while the point was argued.

The court held that the testimony might be introduced and Miss Gordon said Dr. Twyman ordered that no more of the medicine then in the house be given to the patients. All the medicine in the house was destroyed on Dec. 18 and new medicine purchased, testified the witness.

"Did Dr. Hyde leave the house on Dec. 18?" asked Mr. Reed.

"He did."

Recovered After Hyde Left.

"How did the patients progress after his departure?"

"They got well."

Mr. Brewster began a cross-examination of the witness. He drew from her the admission that Margaret Swope and Miss Nora Bell Dickson were ill in the same room.

Miss Gordon had insisted each nurse should have had but one patient to look after and be on duty twenty-four hours a day. Mr. Brewster called attention that if this had been done there would have been four people sleeping at the same time in one room.

Asked why she did not speak to Dr. Hyde when she saw him using dirty water in making a hypodermic, Miss Gordon replied:

"There is an iron-bound rule that a nurse shall never criticise the attending physician. I merely looked at Dr. Hyde."

MEANS DEMOCRAT WILL BE GOVERNOR

Roger Sullivan Comments on Hughes' Going to Supreme Bench.

Chicago, April 26.—"It means a Democratic governor for New York at the next election," was the comment today of Roger C. Sullivan, Democratic national committeeman of Illinois, on the appointment of Governor Hughes to the supreme court bench. Mr. Sullivan added:

"The appointment also removes a likely candidate for the Republican nomination for president two years hence. In New York, Hughes was the only man who had even a slight chance to lead the Republicans of that state to victory. With the governor out of the way, I regard Democratic success in the Empire state as a certainty."

The True Secret of Removing Wrinkles

"Gentleness is the important requirement for proper massaging," says Madame Mainee, the well-known Parisian beauty expert. "The famous wrinkle-removing strokes are simple upward and outward touches on the face with the balls of the fingers. For forehead wrinkles the same light sweeping movement should be used, always crossing wrinkles, never in the same direction with them. For 'crows' feet' gently pat the skin with the balls of the fingers.

"Better than any face or massage cream is the home-made disappearing cerol paste. To make this, bring a pint of water to a boil, remove from the fire, add one tablespoonful of glycerine and stir in three ounces of powdered cerol crystals, stirring constantly until cold; then set aside for several hours until it thickens to the consistency of ordinary face cream.

"Use this for massaging and wrinkles will disappear, pimples and blackheads will vanish, the skin will be soft and satiny, and the complexion fresh and youthful."

Grand Rapids, Minn., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Miss Burlingame of the high school faculty has purchased of Frank Sauve a thirteen-acre farm just outside of the village limits, lying east of the road south from Leland avenue. This tract has all of the buildings, and some seven acres cleared. The consideration was $500. Miss Burlingame intends to develop the place, and in time put in green houses and raise greenhouse truck for the early markets. Mr. Sauve will remain on the place for the coming year and make some improvements, among other things starting some asparagus seedlings for about an acre of ground.

FOUR ACCUSED MEN REFUSING TO TALK

Little Can Be Learned of the Dastardly Attack on Oliver Iron Mine Guard.

Virginia, Minn., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—four of the men alleged to be implicated in the murderous assault upon Harry Wilcox, the Oliver policeman, Sunday night, are held at the city jail. They gave their names as Pete Javanavich, Steve Baravitch, Tom Starchvitch and Vird Wrklan. Javanivitch and Baravitch have admitted that they were present when the assault took place, but deny that they had any hand in it, stating that another man did the cutting, but that they did not know his name. They are unable or unwilling to divulge anything which will aid the officers in the search for the other three men who were mixed up in the affair.

Starchvitch and Wrklan claim that they know nothing of the assault, but as they answer the description furnished the police and are unable thus far to account for their whereabouts at the time of the assault, they are being held for investigation.

Thorough Search Made.

All day yesterday a thorough search of the city was made by the local and Oliver police for the other men implicated. Chief Walsh of the local force and Chief Foley of the Oliver force continued the search last night, making several of the nearby towns, but without result. It is thought that the men are either in hiding at some of the nearby locations, or have gone to other towns and found refuge in the homes of their fellow countrymen.

Another version of the assault has been given out to the effect that when the seven men reached Wilcox at the top of the hill, three of them were on one side of him and four on the other. The four started to go on to the mine and when Wilcox started forward to stop them one of the men behind him picked up a rock and struck him on the back of the head with such force that he fell to the ground in a dazed condition.

Pounced Upon Him With Knives.

It was then, it is said, that the men pounced upon him and slashed him unmercifully with knives. An artery in the wrist was cut, the muscles of the right arm cut and slashed to the bone, the right shoulder received several severe jabs, a long gash on the forehead and numerous other cuts about the head and body were the extent of the wounds inflicted upon Wilcox by the murderous outfit. The wounded man has been in such serious condition that a clean statement of the assault could not be obtained from him. At present his condition is much improved.

GRAND RAPIDS FAVORS ENLARGING HIGH SCHOOL.

Grand Rapids, Minn., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—There is no question about the sentiment of local taxpayers favoring giving the school board authority to enlarge the high school, which is inadequate, as the mass meeting held last night to discuss the subject voted to call a special election May 10 to vote on the proposition of issuing the necessary bonds to make the improvement or to increase the levy for that purpose.

Director Reusswig of the school board said that he had employed a Duluth architect to look over the building to see what could be done, and he found the south wing foundations strong enough to bear another story.

Plans will be prepared for the addition of four classrooms and an enlargement of the auditorium. There are now two classrooms, which are inadequate for the present needs, and while the auditorium seats 115, there are 117 enrolled in the high school alone, while there are 42 in the Eighth grade, which is also in the building. The enrollment of the high school has increased from 43 in 1904, when the building was constructed, to 117 at the present time.

WORRIED OVER TYPHOID.

Two Harbors Council Proposes to Extend Intake Water Pipe.

Two Harbors, Minn., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The prevalence of typhoid fever in this city has assumed rather alarming stages, and at the council meeting last night Mayor Knauff suggested that the intake pipe ought to be extended into the lake to about 1,000 feet. It is now 600 feet out, the object being to preclude the possibility of any extraneous matter from the harbor getting into the pipe. The members of the council expressed willingness to do anything they could to improve conditions.

The council adjourned to meet Wednesday evening, when the plans and specifications for the grading and macadamizing of Poplar and Cedar streets will be presented for consideration.

HENDRICKSON TOOK HIS LIFE

Death of Young Finlander at Hibbing Result of Drinking Poison.

Hibbing, Minn., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Four camps located near the offices of the Hull-Rust mine burned to the ground Monday. A telephone call was sent in about an hour after the fire had started, and had gained considerable headway before the chemical engine and hose wagon could reach the scene. It has not yet been discovered how the fire started.

A young man by the name of Otto Hendrickson, a Finlander, recently from Finland, was found dead in his room over 206 Pine street. It was at first thought the man had died of heart trouble, but later it was discovered by Deputy Coroner Butchart that he had committed suicide by taking carbolic acid. The body will probably be buried today, as no relatives have as yet been found. Hendrickson was 26 years old.

A number of the members of Company M will make a trip to Sherwood this week, where they will place new targets on their range there. If the weather permits, work will also be started on the new clubhouse. Company M expects to hold weekly sports at Sherwood during the summer.

Court Resumes at Grand Rapids With Judge Wright on Bench.

Grand Rapids, Minn., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—District court reopened this morning after an adjournment of five days. Judge Wright of Park Rapids replaces Judge McClenahan, who has been presiding since the opening of the term on March 22.

The case of the State vs. E. H. and Ray Phelps on a charge of arson was taken up and a motion was made by Spear & Stone, attorneys for the defendants, for a continuance which is being considered by the court. The case is the outcome of the fire at the Winnibigoshish dam in May, 1908, in which Joseph Wegge, a son-in-law of E. H. Phelps lost his life. The fire is alleged to have been set to collect the insurance as the building had been ordered moved by the government on whose land it was situated.

The La Rue mine is sending forward between 400 and 500 tons every twenty-four hours. The Pearson is shipping about the same amount as is the Crosby mine. It is expected that within the two weeks considerable more ore will be loaded from all the mines. Stripping off the overburden from the property of the Crosby mine by the Jones Brothers is going on steadily and as soon as the ore is uncovered men will be put to work mining it. The La Rue and Hawkins mines have considerable ore uncovered at their mines which will be mined by steam shovels within a short time.

tends that many of those who voted to defeat the ship-subsidy bill at the last session of congress acted honestly and that there would have been no criticism of Steenerson's action but for his "unwarranted attack on these gentlemen in Cleveland," made "on the letterhead of congress and sent in a franked envelope."

Claims It Was Public.

Penton disputes any idea that Steenerson's letter was private, arguing that Steenerson was a government official and replied under government frank.

"That seemed to us to be a public document," says Penton. "No other congressman that we ever know of or heard of did such a thing in the way he did it."

Attorney Ralston, for Steenerson, was reminding Penton that "you stated the other day that these attacks (on the leagues) had come so often that you determined to defend yourself by attacking Mr. Steenerson," when the chairman interjected:

"I think it was Mr. Maxwell."

"I didn't testify to any such thing and you know it, you know it!" interrupted Maxwell, angrily.

"I won't have any controversy with you," retorted Ralston.

In yesterday's session Mr. Penton was asked:

"You say Mr. Steenerson is dishonest and a menace?"

"I consider that such men are a constant menace to American progress, especially a member of congress who would say what Mr. Steenerson has said," he replied.

HEAVY FROST IN ALABAMA

parts of Louisiana and Mississippi indicate that caller estimates of the damage to the cotton crop as a result of Sunday night's unprecedented cold in this section were not exaggerated. With the cotton acreage damaged to an extent of not less than 50 per cent, including a total loss in many quarters, planters today turned their attention to replanting, only to be confronted with a lack of seed.

Not as Bad as Feared.

South Haven, Mich., April 26.—Unless the weather takes a sudden warmer turn, the damage to fruit from the cold wave will not be so heavy as at first was feared, the leading fruit growers of this section say. Continuing coolness will favor the recovery of buds. Joseph Kelly, president of the Pomological society, says there will be plenty of fruit at prices that will make the net income to the community fully as large as was expected before the cold came. Small fruits are hurt more than tree fruits, he says, but the young trees are not hurt.

orate and those of today were fully in keeping with them.

As participants in the program were the president of the United States, the secretary of the state, the Mexican ambassador, Cardinal Gibbons, Senator Elihu Root, Andrew Carnegie, Bishop Harding, Director John Barrett, members of the diplomatic corps of the supreme court and the cabinet, as well as senators and representatives, high army and naval officers and a long list of distinguished men and women. The celebration, the president declared, was the most important international event which Washington has witnessed in many years.

Knox, Chief Speaker.

An invocation was pronounced by Cardinal Gibbons. Senator Knox delivered the formal opening address, in his capacity of chairman of the governing board of the International Bureau of the American Republics. Director John Barrett made a statement descriptive of the building and the work of the bureau.

Senator Root, who was secretaary of state when Mr. Carnegie conceived the project of erecting this building, delivered an address, which was responded to by Senor Don Francisco Leon de la Barra, the Mexican ambassador, in behalf of the Latin-American diplomatic corps. Mr. Carnegie delivered a characteristic address. There were readings of cable messages from the presidents of the Latin-American republics, and then President Taft added his tribute in a speech of a half an hour in legnth.

Just preceding the benediction by Rt. Rev. Bishop Harding, which concluded the afternoon exercises, occurred one of the most unique and interesting features of the program—when President Taft and Mr. Carnegie jointly planted a "peace tree" in the patio, or court yard.

Brilliant Reception to Carnegie.

Tonight the governing board of the bureau and the director will give a reception in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie, which will be attended by the president, the diplomatic corps and officers of the army and navy in full uniform. Altogether it is expected to be one of the most brilliant functions of the social season. The music will be provided by the Marine band.

The new home of the bureau represents the expenditure of $1,000,000, of which sum Mr. Carnegie contributed $750,000, and the twenty-one American republics the remainder. It is described by the best critics of architecture and construction as one of the most artistic official buildings in the world.

It occupies one of the most commanding sites of the capital, overlooking the Potomac park and river, facing the open grounds below the White House, and near the Washington monument.

Bureau Doing Great Work.

It will afford a commodious home for the Bureau of American Republics, which has been developing with remarkable rapidity within the last few years and is doing much to strengthen the ties that bind together the American republics and to encourage commerce, friendship and peace. It makes the proud boast that it was directly responsible last year for $52,000,000 of new business in the exchange of trade among the American republics.

ALLEGED POISONER MAY BE SET FREE

County Dreads Expense of Jail Board and Second Trail.

Portland, Ind., April 26.—The alleged poisoner in the Jay county jail, Ira W. Porter, charged with murdering his wife, will probably be freed in a few days. Opinion in the neighboring county of Randolph, where the alleged murder was committed, is divided on the advisability of going to the expense of a second trial of his case.

Randolph county now is paying Porter's board and "keep" in the Jay county jail, citizens will argue before the county council at a special meeting this week, and if he is tried again this bill will be stretched indefinitely. Besides, a special appropriation is necessary. Porter is an old man and the evidence against him is circumstantial.

In the meantime Porter sits contentedly in his cell, reading, singing hymns and writing letters to his friends.

OBJECT TO LONG DELAYS

Citizens Want Traffic Regulations for Interstate Bridge Changed.

Col. Fitch to Recommend That Tender Be Given Discretionary Powers.

Col. Graham D. Fitch, United States government engineer for the Duluth district will either today, or in the very near future, make a recommendation in regard to the traffic regulation of the Interstate bridge and the Northern Pacific railroad bridge.

A number of Duluth and Superior citizens have protested over the holding up of traffic on the Interstate bridge, through the opening of the draw for the passage of steamers.

These citizens ask that there be certain specified times that the bridge be opened for the passage of boats. Their contention is that traffic is at times needlessly delayed, and that more regulations in the matter of opening the bridge at specified times would work no great hardship to the boats and would be a great saving of time for those who are obliged to use the bridge in traveling between the two cities.

Col. Fitch will recommend to the war department that the opening of the bridge be left to the discretion of the bridge tender. At the present time the draw tender is obliged to open the bridge immediately upon the approach whistle of any boat.

In the event of the war department approving the recommendation of Col. Fitch, it will be up to the bridge tender to use his intelligence in the matter of not delaying traffic too long.

It is expected that the answer of the war department will be received here in the not very distant future, and that it will be a long way toward quieting the protests against the delays.

Is Found By Watchman Who Went to Call Him.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Apr. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Capt. John McNeill, whose body arrived here late last night on the steamer Hemlock, which he had been sailing, died suddenly of heart failure while a fierce storm was raging on Lake Superior Saturday morning. The vessel had been obliged to leave her course and head for the north shore. Leaving orders to be called at a certain time, Capt. McNeill retired to his quarters. When the watchman went to call him he found the captain dead upon the floor. Capt. McNeill was 39 years of age. He was a Mason, a member of the Ship Masters' association and widely known over the lakes.

STRIKE ON LAKES HAS NOT ENDED

Seamen Say They Have Funds to Carry on Their Fight.

Judging by a bulletin issued recently by a press committee of the International Seamen's Union of America, the strike on the lakes has not yet ended. The bulletin is a vigorous denunciation of the "welfare" plan, and an expression of the optimism of the union men. According to the bulletin, funds have been raised for carrying on the strike this year, and the union men will not go back to work under the prevailing conditions.

The bulletin says:

"Driven to desperation by their inability to secure sufficient strike-breakers to take the places of the sailors, firemen and cooks now on the strike, the board of directors of the Lake Carriers' association was called into an unusual session during the week to devise some new move too serious to be handled by the executive committee, which usually governs that association.

"It is probable that some plan will be adopted whereby the employers will offer a bonus or extra pay to strike-breakers who will agree to work until the unions give up and the vicious passport system, against which the strike was called, is firmly fastened upon the men. The now notorious 'welfare plan,' or industrial passport scheme, of the Lake Carriers' association has so disgusted even the strike-breakers who were employed last season that very few of them are returning to the lakes this spring. No man who understands this system will work under it.

"Certain it is that the Lake Carriers will be compelled to make some change in their tactics. Their agents and shipping masters are openly confessing that they are finding it impossible to secure experienced seamen, because of the strike, and that even inexperienced laborers are hard to get.

"The union men are jubilant at the outlook. The International Seamen's Union of America has already arranged a strike fund to be used on the lakes, in addition to the funds already on hand in the treasuries of the lake district unions. The Sailors' Union of the Pacific has appropriated $20,000; another $20,000 has been appropriated by the Marine Firemen's Union of the Pacific; the Fishermen's Union of the Pacific has voted $5,000; and in addition to this a heavy assessment has been voted by the other unions of that district. The entire Atlantic district has also decided to assist financially in the lake strike by voting an assessment for this year. This now places at the disposal of the lake district unions a fund sufficient to carry on the struggle an entire year, without looking further for finances.

"It is absolutely certain that no matter what temporary inducements may be offered by the Lake Carriers, the seamen will not go back to work until the soul-degrading, liberty-destroying misnamed 'welfare plan' is entirely abolished. The Lake Carriers must give up their attempt to establish serfdom on the lakes. Until they do that the strike will continue."

ARE LOADING GRAIN CARGOES

Most Activity Since Opening of the Season of Navigation.

Today is witnessing the most activity in grain loading since the opening of the season. The Western Star, Sierra, Dalton, Rosemount, George L. Craig, Senora, Caldera and J. Crerar are loading. The George L. Craig has a large cargo of barley on board, while some of the other boats have oats in addition to grain. The heavy loading today is taken to indicate that the congestion in the East is somewhat broken.

$00 TUG BURNS.

Members of Crew Make Their Escape in Small Boats.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The tug Crate of the Granley tug line burned to the water's edge yesterday. The fire broke out while the boat was several miles up the river. The crew, which numbered only a few men, escaped in boats.

LOCK CATCHING UP.

There Are But Twenty-One Boats Left in Soo Blockade.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—But twenty-one boats remain in the blockade here. This is the smallest number of vessels at this port in two weeks. Only a few days ago there were more than fifty boats in waiting for their turn to pass through. The canal is gradually catching up, with the opening of the American lock, next week, the congestion will be relieved.

Boat Is Launched.

The C. W. Turner, a new vessel that was built at the Grignon shipyard, was launched yesterday. The new boat is 59 feet long and 11 feet 6 inches in beam. She will be of 45-horse power engines and is in every respect an up-to-date boat. The boat will be christened by Miss Amelia Matson of West Duluth.

Dock at Port Wing.

The new dock that is being built at Port Wing, is almost completed. It will be one of the largest docks between the Head of the Lakes and Chequamegon bay. The dock is being built by a recently organized fish company.

CENSUS ENUMERATORS ARE HAVING TROUBLE.

At the present time the census takers assigned to the boats are having their troubles. In some cases they have been told to keep off the boats. It is very probable that the members of the crews did not know what the census takers wanted.

There are a number of residents of this city who are employed on the boats. It is the business of the census takers to get the names of these men. Therefore the desire of the enumerators to climb aboard the boats when they dock.

Some of the men taking the census know very little about boats. They have been chasing around the shore in an effort to locate the boats and get the names of the Duluth residents. When the captains of the boat understand what the census enumerators want, they will probably permit them to go aboard.

He is instructing them and also endeavoring to get men for the vacancies that exist in several townships in this county. He announces he has vacancies in several other counties in his district.

OHIO BRIBERY PROBE BEGINS

Franklin County Grand Jury Is Investigating Telephone Bill Affair.

Columbus, Ohio, April 26.—The Franklin county grand jury today began an investigation of the charges of bribery in connection with the passage of the Elson Telephone bill through the legislature.

Subpoenas were issued today by the prosecutors office for the appearance of the following witnesses: Cyrus B. Winters, of Erie county, Howard W. Pears of Allen county, Joseph Gilligan of Hamilton county, William Didham, Jr., of Cuyohoga county, Lawrence W. Langdon of Warren county, William C. Schaefer and Asa W. Elson of Tuscara county.

Twenty-Three Years Ago and Today

TWENTY-THREE years of constant, conscientious effort has wrought great wonders in this store. As we look back over these years which have flown so quickly we're reminded of our humble beginning, in the little frame building on the corner of First Ave. W. and Superior St.

That store was but 25x65 feet, but the one floor we then occupied seemed large—for the community was small. Shopping Satisfaction was a hobby then as now. A dissatisfied customer was never permitted to leave the store. Honorable Commerce and Fair Dealing were the ties that bound purchaser and proprietor in those days even as now.

With every advance step in civilization, science and merchandising The Glass Block Store kept apace—as Duluth grew the store grew. As new needs arose the demand was supplied by us first. From the very beginning, utmost confidence was reposed in our upright merchandising methods, and this confidence has grown and multiplied until today pre-eminent above it's older competitors this house has builded a business, the volume of which is marvelous indeed.

This Anniversary Sale, held in substantial appreciation of the loyalty and patronage extended us for years, offers advantages Wednesday that you should take advantage of at once. A partial list is this:

INSPECTION AND DANCE

A Big Night in Naval Militia Circles, in Duluth.

"Five-Year-Men" Presented With Medals By the Mayor.

A drill, inspection, dress parade, presentation of medals significant of five years of service, and a dance formed a notable event in the history of the local naval militia at the Armory last night.

The militia boys wore nifty white uniforms and were the admired of all admirers. The last time the militia donned white was on a cold and stormy day. The boys were cruising on the noble ship, the Gopher, and the sun was shining brightly. Hardly had the militiamen put on their white uniforms when a northeaster, characteristic of Lake Superior, happened along and the only man on deck the remainder of the day was there on duty. He wore an overcoat over the splendid white raiment. But last night there was no northeaster and everybody wore his suit in a manner to gladden the eyes that beheld, especially those that peered down from under veiled and big hats in the gallery.

After the sailor boys passed in review before their commanding officer, Guy A. Eaton, Mayor Cullum and Former State Senator Spencer, the mayor said he was proud of them and so was Duluth. Dr. Cullum congratulated the militiamen on the success with which they drilled and their appearance. He felicitated them upon their devotion to the militia and the principles which it represents.

Mayor Cullum presented medals, indicative of five years of continuous service in the Minnesota Naval militia by the recipients, to the following: Commander Guy A. Eaton, Lieut. Com. B. F. Howard, Lieut. Com. N. F. Hugo, Lieut. Com. S. S. Williamson, Surgeon, F. J. Patton, Paymaster Alfred Engles, Lieut. E. G. Smith, Chief Boatswain's Mate A. A. Bruneau, Quartermaster H. B. Andrews, Chief Yooman G. M. Cruikshank, Gunner's Mate E. B. Neff, Master-at-Arms E. Petz, Bugler Lee Roe, Gunner's Mate A. W. Taylor, Machinist's Mate W. E. Wing and Former Lieutenants J. A. Wharton, J. T. Nelson and O. A. Anderson and Former Quartermaster P. Hemple.

Music was furnished by the Third Regiment band. A dance followed the drill and presentation of medals.

The Sound Sleep of Good Health.

The restorative power of sound sleep can not be over estimated and any ailment that prevents it is a menace to health. J. L. Southers, Eau Claire, Wis., says:—"For a long time I have been unable to sleep soundly nights, because of pains across my back and soreness of my kidneys. My appetite was very poor and my general condition was much run down. I have been taking Foley's Kidney Pills but a short time and now sleep as sound as a rock. I eat and enjoy my meals, and my general condition is greatly improved. I can honestly recommend Foley's Kidney Pills as I know they have cured me." For sale by all druggists.

PLEDGES MORE THAN DOUBLED

Big Increase in Mission Offerings as Result of Convention.

The following table shows the results that have been achieved by the laymen's missionary movement convention in Duluth, the figures indicating that sums pledged for the cause by the different churches this year as compared with last year's pledges:

Churches—	Last Year's Pledges	This Year's Pledges
Presbyterian	$2,907.11	$4,014.22
Meth. Epis	1,470.09	7,000.00
Lutheran	1,012.65	2,021.00
Ger. E. Syn.	60.00	180.00
Evan. As.	28.50	57.00
Swed. Mis.	119.93	239.00
Baptist	405.65	811.00
Christian	75.00	125.00
Congregational	1,096.00	2,912.00
Episcopal	670.25	1,340.50
Totals	$6,855.09	$17,892.72

These statistics are based on the action taken at the various denominational rallies and show that the convention was a complete success. They were made public at a final meeting of the co-operating committee held at the Y. M. C. A. building last evening.

"No one can estimate the actual definite results of the movement in this city and surrounding territory," said Executive Secretary Snell. "The incentive in foreign missionary giving in the churches is but a small part of it. Without question it has enlarged the vision of the people of this territory in the world's needs and a corresponding interest in their fellow creatures everywhere."

SPENT A FORTUNE ON SKIN TROUBLE

But Lost All Hope of Cure—Grew Worse and Worse in Spite of Many Doctors and Three Years of Hospital Treatment—Inflammation Made Her Almost Crazy with Pain.

CURED BY TWO SETS OF CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I began to have an itching over my whole body about seven years ago and this settled in my limb, from the knee to the toes. I went to see a great many physicians, a matter which cost me a fortune, and after I noticed that I did not get any relief that way, I went for three years to the hospital. But they were unable to help me there. I used all the medicines that I could see but became worse and worse. I had an inflammation which made me almost crazy with pain. When I showed my foot to my friends they would get really frightened. I did not know what to do. I was so sick and had become so nervous that I positively lost all hope.

"I had seen the advertisement of the Cuticura Remedies a great many times but could not make up my mind to buy them, for I had already used so many medicines. Finally I did decide to use the Cuticura Remedies and I tell you that I was never so pleased as when I noticed that, after having used two sets of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills, the entire inflammation had gone. I was completely cured. I should be only too glad if people with a similar disease would come to me and find out the truth. I would only recommend them to use Cuticura. Mrs. Bertha Sachs, 1621 Second Ave., New York, N. Y., Aug. 20, 1909."

"Mrs. Bertha Sachs is my sister-in-law and I know well how she suffered and was cured by the Cuticura Remedies after many other treatments failed. Morris Sachs, 321 E. 89th St., New York, N. Y., Secretary of Deutsch-Ostrowoer Unt.-Verein, Kempner Hebrew Benevolent Society, etc."

A single set of Cuticura Remedies, costing but one dollar, consisting of Soap to cleanse, Ointment to heal and Pills to purify, has frequently cured chronic cases of torturing, disfiguring humors of infants, children and adults when the best methods known to the profession had failed. Guaranteed absolutely pure.

Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., 135 Columbus Ave., Boston, Mass. Mailed Free, Cuticura Book, an Authority on Skin and Scalp Diseases.

Home-Made Tonic For Spring Disorders

("Madelaine" in Woman's Journal.)

I receive so many letters every spring from persons who complain of a tired feeling on arising every morning—of a sort of "all gone," "don't care" condition—that I am forced to believe that everybody needs a tonic in the spring to purify the blood, tone up the stomach and liver and restore the human body to proper condition after the inactivity of winter.

Spring usually finds the organs and blood clogged with impurities. The feeling of languor and dullness, lack of ambition and energy, poor appetite, sallow complexion, liver blotches, pimples and other skin eruptions—all these are symptoms of impure blood, deranged digestion or torpid liver.

You can make a full quart of good tonic at home at a small cost that will put your system in perfect condition and rid you of "Spring Fever" in all its phases. Get from your druggist one ounce of kardene, mix it with ½ cup sugar and add ½ pint of alcohol and 1½ pints of hot water. Take one tablespoonful five minutes before each meal and before retiring.

Kardene purifies the blood, arouses the liver, clears the skin, restores lost appetite and strengthens and builds up the entire system. There is no other blood medicine as good. If your druggist is out of kardene ask him to get it for you.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

The Norwegian Republican club last evening elected Thomas Bergeson vice president and took action looking to securing commodious permanent headquarters, J. J. Burke and Vice President Bergeson being named a committee to attend to this business.

Last night's meeting which was held in the Christie building, was an enthusiastic one, and the members entered into the discussion of plans to increase the effectiveness of the organization, with much interest. Meetings will be held twice a month.

At the next meeting there will be at least one address on a municipal subject.

The county option campaign in Minnesota has been launched in Minneapolis. Seaborn Wright of Georgia, being the speaker of the occasion. The anti-saloon league had charge of the Minneapolis meeting. Mr. Wright, in the course of his remarks, suggested Roosevelt for president and Joseph W. Folk for vice president, but in the main his talk was an argument for prohibition and an exposition and defense of conditions in the South brought about by restrictive liquor legislation. There were about 2,000 persons in the audience.

Walter J. Smith of Eveleth and his smile have made a distinct hit in Minnesota politics. The St. Paul Dispatch says:

"That tall, slim figure with the winning smile now occupying the center of the stage in the political limelight is Walter Smith, banker of Eveleth.

"He has come smiling into the glare of state publicity, and his friends say he will smile until after he has been nominated as state treasurer. Mr. Smith is the latest to claim a cinch on the treasurership nomination.

"He is in St. Paul today cheerfully clinching every nail. Charles L. Lewis, justice of the state supreme court, is looking on in mild-eyed wonder. Judge Lewis can't quite understand what the Eighth district means in hurrahing for Walter, and saying nothing about the justice.

"Smith has come blazing out of the unknown, much as C. C. Dinehart did in 1906. Before any one was aware that he was 'honest Injun' going after the place he had the Eighth district rooting for him like a bunch of law students at a Wisconsin football game.

"Mr. Smith is a banker. But when it comes to that it's a choice of evils, as every candidate for the treasurership is a banker. Peter Swarg is vice president of the bank at Clara City. A. Kaiser, Bagley, has an interest in more than one bank. George E. Hanscome is cashier of the Foley bank. John Sheehy is president of the New Prague bank.

"It was said at one time by long-headed followers of the game who frequently register at the Merchants' hotel that the fight was between Kaiser and Hanscome, with Carl going around with something up his sleeve besides his arm, but not much show for President John Sheehy or Vice President Peter Swarg. Now the wisest of 'em say they don't know where to get off. They all admit that the Eighth district is getting behind Smith with a unanimity that may make an irresistible force. 'If he comes sailing into the convention, on June 21, with the Eighth district as a propeller, who is to stop him?' ask the astonished ones.

"Kaiser can't have his district solid unless Bob Wells drops dead. Carl can't, Swarg can't, no one believes Sheehy can, and Hanscome has not yet eliminated 'you, Cassius,' in the Sixth."

With county option and reapportionment as his platform planks, Dr. W. T. Stone of Hubbard county has come forth as a candidate for the legislature. The county option convention at Wadena indorsed him for the place.

Representative Ole Peterson of Nicollet county has announced that he is a candidate for renomination and re-election. J. Q. Currier, who was mentioned as a possible contender, declares that he will not enter the field. He was a candidate for the nomination two years ago.

The Grand Rapids Herald-Review, discussing the probability that Senator D. M. Gunn will be a candidate for re-election, says that Northern Minnesota needs him there, and adds: "There has been some mention made by certain papers in favor of Supt. A. J. McGuire of the Northeast Experiment farm for the office, but when approached on the subject Mr. McGuire was undecided as to whether or not he would run, and did not wish to make any statement regarding the subject. In any event it is not anticipated that Senator Gunn will experience any difficulty in being re-elected, if he so desires."

Representative Henry Rines of Mora, who was an able and industrious member of the last legislature, will be opposed in the primaries by W. A. $21.00

HERE IS THE STORY:

I bought $25,000 worth of woolens from Cullen & Cullen, the Wall Street, New York, swell tailors, for thirty cents on the dollar, and had the goods shipped to Duluth by express, thinking that I would make a bunch of money out of my purchase. Since then the cold snap came on,, so I have to hurry to sell the goods, because this stock, in addition to my regular large stock, makes it too much goods, and the season is getting late. Therefore, I divided the entire stock into two lots and will take orders TOMORROW and all the week for $16.50 and $21, with a guarantee of perfect fit, satisfaction all around or no pay.

Cullen & Cullen were the swell tailors in New York. The goods are all new patterns—not one of the lot is worth less than $40, and from that up to $70 for a suit. You can pick your choice out of all the $40, $45 and $50 patterns for $16.50, and all the $55, $60 and $65 patterns for $21.00. It is the chance of a lifetime, so don't miss the opportunity. Come at once and pick the best pattern. These goods are all in single suit lengths. You needn't send for samples. COME RIGHT INTO MY STORE AT 123 WEST SUPERIOR STREET, and leave your measure. Your truly,

STATEMENT BY HACKETT

Actor Defends His Position in the Recent Divorce Case.

Breaks Silence He Has Maintained During Last Three Years.

To the Editor of The Herald:

You can readily understand that to a man like myself, who has been honored throughout the country by the warm and close friendship of hundreds of our best citizens, and who is so prominently before the public in a professional way, damaging statements, especially when they are totally untrue or misleading, would work not only a source of great injustice, but would do me incalculable harm in the estimation of those friends, and the public. I have consistently refused, at any time, for three years, to discuss for publication, in any way, the unfortunate breaking up of my home, but now that the decree has been made final, I have yielded to the pressure and argument of my friends, and hope, through your consideration, to secure the publication, verbatim, of the enclosed letter, either as such, or as an authorized statement from me.

You will see that the letter contains no discussion of the merits or demerits of the case, nor is, in any way, an attack. It is purely a defensive statement and is so intended.

There seems to have been a consistent and influential campaign waged against me from the inception of this affair, so far as the public prints are concerned. Everything of a derogatory nature has found easy space, and I shall appreciate it very keenly and deeply indeed, if you can give me space enough in your valuable paper for the enclosed.

JAMES K. HACKETT.

Montreal, April 23.

"So much of partial truth, and so much of total untruth, have found their way into public print during the last three years in regard to this unfortunate affair, that I feel in duty bound to myself and to my friends, to issue the following simple statement of facts:

"In June, 1907, I demanded through my then attorneys, Messrs. A. L. and S. F. Jacobs, a legal separation from my wife. I did not then, nor never have desired a divorce, because of the child.

"One year thereafter, in June, 1908, Mrs. Hackett commenced action for divorce. I filed my answer and for one year subsequent thereto the case remained deadlocked and in statu quo.

"In August, 1909, Mrs. Hackett withdrew her action for divorce. I withdrew my answer, and on Aug. 25 1909, the action was stricken from the calendar of the court by order of Judge E. D. Amend.

"Another action, which was not opposed by me, was then commenced, and it is upon this second and undefended action that the interlocutory decree made final yesterday, was granted. This decree provides for the custody of the child, pursuant to an agreement entered into between the parents over two years ago, by which the companionship and custody of the daughter is to be awarded to the mother during her tender years, the father to have access to the child at all reasonable time until the age of 7 shall be reached, after which the parents shall consult together regarding their daughter's education, custodians and general welfare, but in the event of their failure to agree the father's decision shall be final.

"No costs, counsel fees or alimony are granted by the decree, nor can they, under a stipulated agreement, be applied for at any time while the decree remains in force.

"The prohibition to remarry, as voiced in the decree is merely a legal form and technical point under the laws of New York state, and does not prohibit my remarriage at any time in any other state or country."

Best Treatment For Colds.

Most ordinary colds will yield to the simplest treatment," says the Chicago Tribune, "moderative laxatives, hot foot baths, a free prespiration and an avoidance of exposure to cold and wet after treatment is simple, it requires considerable trouble, and the one adopting it must remain in doors for a day or two, or a fresh cold is almost sure to be contracted, and in many instances pneumonia follows. Is it not better to pin your faith to an old reliable preparation like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, that is famous for its cures of colds and can always be depended upon? For sale by all druggists.

GOOD COMEDY AT THE BIJOU

Large First-Night Audience Pleased By New Bill Offered.

A program of laugh, producing comedy, good singing and other well-balanced features is what Manager Maitland is offering Bijou patrons this week. A crowded house of "first-nighters" was not backward in its appreciation for each act received more than the usual applause.

Joe F. Willard and Harry Bond in "The Battle of Bunco Hill" have an act that went well with Bijou patrons last night. Mr. Willard as a German war correspondent, and Rudolph, the old war horse, furnished a line of levity-inciting patter that nearly convulsed the audience to hysterics. The act furnishes most of the laughs of the evening.

A touch of plantation life was depicted in the turn furnished by Tim McMahon's Watermelon Girls. Their act is snappy and makes a hit of no mean dimensions. There are seven girls who first appear as a minstrel troup and later in the scenes of a watermelon plantation. One of them sings, "O Melon Sweet," and when the refrain is reached, a large watermelon opens disclosing the other members of the company, who join in the chorus. There is some fine solo, quartet and chorus work in the act.

Helen Stuart, with a "Sis Hopkins" makeup appears as "Polly Wiggles in Society." She keeps the audience in laughter and sings acceptably. Her rendition of "Experience" takes well.

Fitzgerald and Odell, the "Daffy Dusters" have a rattling good act in which much slap-stick work and a couple of good songs are features. Their act seemed to please.

Mabel Valenteene Mooree appears in a trapeze act and proves equal to her billing which states that she is a "miniature female Sandow." She does several hair-raising stunts showing remarkable muscular development.

Miss Deodata Rossing sings "Back to My Old Home Town" an excellent illustrated song. The show closes with some excellent motion pictures.

Fine Scenic Effects.

Among the notable scenes of Al W. Martin's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" which is to come to the Lyceum next Saturday matinee and night are the St. Claire home, showing a tropical garden with its fragrant magnolia and orange trees, among which nestles the typical Southern plantation residence, the home of little Eva; Legree's cotton plantation of the Red river with the cotton in full bloom; the wild rocky pass in Southern Ohio, and the ice choking Ohio river by moonlight.

One Conductor Who Was Cured.

Mr. Wilford Adams is his name, and he writes about it.—"Some time ago I was confined to my bed with chronic rheumatism. I used two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy with good effect, and the third bottle put me on my feet and I resumed work as conductor on the Lexington, Ky., Street Railway. It gave me more relief than any medicine I had ever used, and it will do all you claim in cases of Rheumatism." Foley's Kidney Remedy cures rheumatism by eliminating the uric acid from the blood. AROUND THE CAPITOL

Lodge Gives up Fight.

Washington, April 26.—In the senate yesterday Mr. Lodge withdrew his resolution, asking senate sanction for the expenditure of $65,000 to continue the cost of living inquiry. This action was taken on the ground that members of the minority were conducting such an extended debate upon the resolution as to interfere seriously with the passage of the railroad bill. The committee will continue the inquiry, however, under authority of the original resolution.

Senate O. K. for Devlin.

The senate has confirmed the nomination of Robert T. Devlin to succeed himself as United States attorney for the Northern district of California.

ALLEGED COSMOPOLITAN CROOK IS ARRESTED.

Chicago, April 26.—Charles, better known as "Chappy" Moran, alleged by Postoffice Inspector Stuart of Chicago and Inspector T. Cortelyou of the Philadelphia district to be a clever swindler, is under arrest here. The arrest was made Saturday, but was kept a secret until the arrival of Inspector Cortelyou.

In the last twenty years Moran's illegal gains are said to aggregate close to $1,000,000. Moran is said to be known on both sides of the Atlantic, having in his earlier days played the profession of gaming on the big liners.

"DAUGHTER" SUES HER PATRIOTIC MATES.

Washington, April 26.—The right of the executive head of the Daughters of the American evolution to dismiss an employe of the organization, which has been the bone of contention within the society, has been taken into the District of Columbia courts. Miss Agnes Gerald, a clerk in Continental hall, the national headquarters of the organization, who was dismissed by Mrs. Matthew T. Scott, the president general, for alleged insubordination, has entered suit for $130, representing her salary for the months of March and April.

Her services were terminated by Mrs. Scott at the end of February, but as she did not recognize the right of the president general to dismiss her, she continued at her post until she was deposed by a resolution passed by the board of managers of the organization on April 16.

QUEBEC TIMBER LAW PUBLISHED

Prohibits Exportation of Pulpwood to the United States.

Quebec, April 26.—"All timber cut on crown lands after May 1, 1910, must be manufactured in Canada; that is to say, converted into pulp or paper, into boxes or into boards, or into any other article of commerce or merchandise, as distinguished from timber in its unmanufactured or raw state."

This is the clause in the new Quebec timber regulations which prohibit the exportation of pulpwood to the United States. The new law which has been signed by the lieutenant governor was published yesterday in the Official Gazette.

A feature of the regulation is an agreement that no further increase in ground rent or license to cut timber shall be made before September, 1920.

The old ten-year agreement expires next September, when the new regulations respecting rents and stumpage dues will come into force. The exportation prohibition becomes effective at once and applies to all lumber cut after May 1.

SOCIALISTS WHOLE THING.

Chairmanships in Milwaukee Council Not Trusted With Other Parties.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 26. — Every chairman and every vice chairman of the twenty standing committees of the council as announced last evening by President Edmund T. Mulms, is a Socialist. The chairmen of two of the special committees are Socialists.

Alderman Frederick C. Bogk, Democrat, is the only member of the council not a Socialist who is given a chairmanship. He will continue as chairman of special committee on harbors, which will have charge of the important work of carrying through the plans for a $7,000,000 inner and outer harbor, utilizing Jones Island for municipal docks and warehouses and building a municipal belt line.

It is pointed out that the Socialists are committed to certain policies and must be depended upon for carrying their plans through.

PEARY TALKS ABOUT HIS ATTACK ON COOK.

New York, April 26.—At a farewell luncheon tendered him at the Brooklyn club yesterday, Commander Robert E. Peary, who sailed for Europe today, took occasion to explain why he attacked the claim of Dr. Cook so strongly on his return from his polar trip. He said:

"Three weeks before I got back to civilization I had the fullest information of what had been done by another in the Arctic regions and when and where and what would be claimed by this man. The telegrams I sent which caused me to be criticised were sent deliberately and after full consideration. That was my position.

"I knew that a deliberate attempt was to be made to defraud the country, morally and financially, and as an officer of the United States navy I felt that I should warn the country, and that I owed to myself, also to give warning in order that I might escape a charge of being an accessory to the crime. My position is still unchanged."

Object to Strong Medicines.

Many people object to taking the strong medicines prescribed by physicians for rheumatism. There is no need of internal treatment in any case of muscular or chronic rheumatism, and more than nine out of every ten cases of the disease are of one or the other of these varieties. When there is no fever and little (if any) swelling, you may know that it is only necessary to apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely to get quick relief. Try it. For sale by all druggists.

LAKE SUPERIOR CHEMICAL COMPANY REPORTED CHANGE.

Marquette, Mich., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is reported from Detroit that a deal is in progress that is likely to result in the sale of the control of the Lake Superior Iron & Chemicl company to an English syndicate. This control is represented by the holdings of the Barry estate, which are now being negotiated for. If the deal goes through it is said there will be a personal and financial reorganization of the company.

The Lake Superior Iron & Chemical company owns and operates the Choclay furnace. This plant was rehabilitated at a large expense three years ago and it was the intention to put in blast immediately, but the depression in the iron market following the panic of 1907 led to a change in these plans, even after the charcoal kilns had been fired, and the plant remained idle until a few months ago.

"Amodeine" in Woman's Journal.)

I receive so many letters every spring from persons who complain of a tired feeling on arising every morning, of a sort of "all gone," "don't care" condition—that I am forced to believe that everybody needs a tonic to purify the blood, tone the stomach and liver and restore the run down body to proper condition of activity of winter.

Nature usually finds the organs and blood filled with impurities. The result is languor and dullness, lack of appetite and energy, poor appetite, bad complexion, liver blotches, pimples and other skin eruptions—in fact, symptoms of impure blood, defective digestion or torpid liver.

You can make a full quart of good tonic at home at a small cost that will put your system in perfect condition and rid you of "Spring Fever" in all its phases. Get from your druggist one ounce of Sarsone, mix it with 1 ounce Compound Extract Cardiol and 1½ pints of hot water. Take one tablespoonful five minutes before each meal and before retiring.

Sarsone purifies the blood, arouses the liver, clears the skin, restores lost appetite and strengthens and builds up the entire system. There is no other blood medicine as good. If your druggist is out of Sarsone ask him to get it for you.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

The Norwegian Republican club last evening elected Thomas Bergeson vice president and took action looking to securing commodious permanent headquarters. J. J. Burke and Vice President Bergeson being named a committee to attend to this business.

Last night's meeting which was held in the Christie building, was an enthusiastic one, and the members entered into the discussion of plans to increase the effectiveness of the organization, with much interest. Meetings will be held twice a month.

At the next meeting there will be at least one address on a municipal subject.

The county option campaign in Minnesota has been launched in Minneapolis Seaborn Wright of Georgia, being the speaker of the occasion. The anti-saloon league had charge of the Minneapolis meeting. Mr. Wright, in the course of his remarks, suggested Roosevelt for president and Joseph W. Folk for vice president, but in the main his talk was an argument for prohibition and an exposition and defense of conditions in the South brought about by restrictive liquor legislation. There were about 2,000 persons in the audience.

Walter J. Smith of Eveleth and his family have made a distinct hit in Minnesota politics. The St. Paul Dispatch says:

"That tall slim figure with the winning smile that is occupying the center of the stage in the political limelight is Walter Smith, banker of Eveleth.

"He has come smiling into the glare of state publicity, and his friends say he will smile until after he has been nominated as state treasurer. Mr. Smith is the latest to claim a cinch on the treasurership nomination.

"All day in St. Paul today cheerfully smiling over it all, Charles L. Lewis, brother of the state supreme court, is looking on in mild-eyed wonder. Judge Lewis can't quite understand what the 10th district means in nominating Joe Walker, and saying nothing about the picture.

"Smith has come blazing out of the unknown, much as C. C. Dinehart did in 1906. Before any one was aware that he was honest Injun going after the place in fact the Eighth district footing for him like a bunch of law students at a Wisconsin football game.

"Mr. Smith is a banker. But when it comes to that it's a choice of evils as every candidate for the treasurership is a banker. Peter Swarg is vice president of the bank at Clara City. A. Kaiser, Hazley, has an interest in more than one bank. George E. Hartson is cashier of the Foley bank. John Sheehy is president of the New Ulm bank.

"It was said at one time by long-headed followers of the game who frequently register at the Merchants' hotel that the fight was between Kaiser and Hanscome, with Carl going around with something up his sleeve besides his arm, but not much show for President John Sheehy or Vice President Peter Swarg. Now the wisest of 'em say they don't know where to get off. They all admit that the Eighth district is getting behind Smith with a unanimity that may make an irresistible force. 'If he comes sailing into the convention, on June 21, with the Eighth district as a propeller, who is to stop him?' ask the astonished ones.

"'Kaiser can't have his district solid unless Bob Wells drops dead. Carl can't, Swarg can't, no one believes Sheehy can, and Hanscome has not yet eliminated 'you, Cassius,' in the Sixth."

Fine Scenic Effects.

Among the notable scenes of Al W. Martin's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" which is to come to the Lyceum next Saturday matinee and night are the St. Claire home, showing a tropical garden with its fragrant magnolia and orange trees, among which nestles the typical Southern plantation residence, the home of little Eva; Legree's cotton plantation of the Red river with the cotton in full bloom; the wild rocky pass in Southern Ohio, and the ice choking Ohio river by moonlight.

One Conductor Who Was Cured.

Mr. Wilford Adams is his name, and he writes about it.—"Some time ago I was confined to my bed with chronic rheumatism. I used two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy with good effect, and the third bottle put me on my feet and I resumed work as conductor on the Lexington, Ky., Street Railway. It gave me more relief than any medicine I had ever used, and it will do all you claim in cases of Rheumatism." Foley's Kidney Remedy cures Rheumatism by eliminating the uric acid from the blood. AROUND THE CAPITOL

Lodge Gives up Fight.

Washington, April 26.—In the senate yesterday Mr. Lodge withdrew his resolution, asking senate sanction for the expenditure of $75,000 to continue the cost of living inquiry. This action was taken on the ground that members of the minority were conducting such an extended debate upon the resolution as to interfere seriously with the passage of the railroad bill. The committee will continue the inquiry, however, under authority of the original resolution.

Senate O. K. for Devlin.

The senate has confirmed the nomination of Robert T. Devlin to succeed himself as United States attorney for the Northern district of California.

For Parcels Post.

Advocates of a parcels post appeared before the house commission on postoffices and postroads, which began a series of hearings yesterday upon the question of the advisability of the government's establishing a system of parcels posts are before the committee.

ALLEGED COSMOPOLITAN CROOK IS ARRESTED.

Chicago, April 26.—Charles Netter known as "Chappy" Moran, alleged by Postoffice Inspector Stuart of Chicago and Inspector T. Cortelyou of the Philadelphia district to be a clever swindler, is under arrest here. The arrest was made Saturday, but was kept a secret until the arrival of Inspector Cortelyou.

In the last twenty years Moran's illegal gains are said to aggregate close to $1,000,000. Moran is said to be known on both sides of the Atlantic, having in his earlier days played the profession of gaming on the big liners.

"DAUGHTER" SUES HER PATRIOTIC MATES.

Washington, April 26.—The right of the executive head of the Daughters of the American evolution to dismiss an employe of the organization, which has been the bone of contention within the society, has been taken into the district of Columbia courts. Miss Agnes Gerald, a clerk in Continental hall, the national headquarters of the organization, who was dismissed by Mrs. Matthew T. Scott, the president general, for alleged insubordination, has entered suit for $130, representing her salary for the months of March and April.

Her services were terminated by Mrs. Scott at the end of February, but as she did not recognize the right of the president general to dismiss her, she continued at her post until she was deposed by a resolution passed by the board of managers of the organization on April 16.

QUEBEC TIMBER LAW PUBLISHED

Prohibits Exportation of Pulpwood to the United States.

Quebec, April 26.—"All timber cut on crown lands after May 1, 1910, must be manufactured in Canada; that is to say, converted into pulp or paper, into boxes or into boards, or into any other article of commerce or merchandise, as distinguished from timber in its unmanufactured or raw state."

This is the clause in the new Quebec timber regulations which prohibit the exportation of pulpwood to the United States. The new law which has been signed by the lieutenant governor was published yesterday in the Official Gazette.

A feature of the regulation is an agreement that no further increase in ground rent or license to cut timber shall be made before September, 1920.

The old ten-year agreement expires next September, when the new regulations respecting rents and stumpage dues will come into force. The exportation prohibition becomes effective at once and applies to all lumber cut after May 1.

SOCIALISTS WHOLE THING.

Chairmanships in Milwaukee Council Not Trusted With Other Parties.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 26. — Every chairman and every vice chairman of the twenty standing committees of the council as announced last evening by President Edmund T. Mulms, is a Socialist. The chairmen of two of the special committees are Socialists.

Alderman Frederick C. Bogk, Democrat, is the only member of the council not a Socialist who is given a chairmanship. He will continue as chairman of special committee on harbors, which will have charge of the important work of carrying through the plans for a $7,000,000 inner and outer harbor, utilizing Jones Island for municipal docks and warehouses and building a municipal belt line.

It is pointed out that the Socialists are committed to certain policies and must be depended upon for carrying their plans through.

PEARY TALKS ABOUT HIS ATTACK ON COOK.

New York, April 26.—At a farewell luncheon tendered him at the Brooklyn club yesterday, Commander Robert E. Peary, who sailed for Europe today, took occasion to explain why he attacked the claim of Dr. Cook so strongly on his return from his polar trip. He said:

"Three weeks before I got back to civilization I had the fullest information of what had been done by anotaer in the Arctic regions and when and where and what would be claimed by this man. The telegrams I sent which caused me to be criticised were sent deliberately and after full consideration. That was my position.

"I knew that a deliberate attempt was to be made to defraud the country, morally and financially, and as an officer of the United States navy I felt that I should warn the country, and that I owed to myself, also to give warning in order that I might escape a charge of being an accessory to the crime. My position is still unchanged."

Object to Strong Medicines.

Many people object to taking the strong medicines prescribed by physicians for rheumatism. There is no need of internal treatment in any case of muscular or chronic rheumatism, and more than nine out of every ten cases of the disease are of one or the other of these varieties. When there is no fever and little (if any) swelling, you may know that it is only necessary to apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely to get quick relief. Try it. For sale by all druggists.

LAKE SUPERIOR CHEMICAL COMPANY REPORTED CHANGE.

Marquette, Mich., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is reported from Detroit that a deal is in progress that is likely to result in the sale of the control of the Lake Superior Iron & Chemical company to an English syndicate. This control is represented by the holdings of the Barry estate, which are now being negotiated for. If the deal goes through it is said there will be a personal and financial reorganization of the company.

The Lake Superior Iron & Chemical company owns and operates the Chocolay furnace. This plant was rehabilitated at a large expense three years ago and it was the intention to put in blast immediately, but the depression in the iron market following the panic of 1907 led to a change in these plans, even after the charcoal kilns had been fired, and the plant remained idle until a few months ago.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

CONCERNING WOMAN.

The federated clubs of Minnesota that have been interested during the last year in establishing a Maria Sanford scholarship fund for the Minnesota university have nearly completed the amount. The Duluth clubs have contributed their pledge of $100 to the sum, and the amount has been turned over to the state committee. Mrs. F. L. Barrows and Mrs. J. L. Washburn constituted the local committee in charge of the collection of the fund.

The Duluth clubs that contributed are as follows: Twentieth Century club, $39; Saturday club, $25; Outlook club, $10; Daughters of Liberty Chapter of the D. A. R., $10; Ladies' Literature class, $10; Lester Park Literary club, $2; W. C. T. U., $2, and Bishop's club, $2.

A circular by the committee of the state federation explains the object of this fund as follows:

"The Maria Sanford scholarship fund is designed to be at once a monument to the work of Miss Sanford and a blessing to young women who are endeavoring with insufficient means to secure the advantages of college education in the University of Minnesota. For more than twenty-five years Miss Sanford was at the head of the rhetorical department in the University of Minnesota. She retired last year amidst regrets that the university was to know her no more and rejoicings that she had come at last to a well-deserved reward and rest. In her long period of service in the university some thousands of young women were influenced by her sweet personality, her clear-eyed faith and optimism, her tolerant understanding and active helpfulness. Miss Sanford represented and represents the best service that women can render the state.

"It should be a cause of satisfaction to the women of Minnesota that for a quarter of a century a professor's chair in the university was filled by a woman who added to the mere technical preparation for her place a largeness of spirit and a nobility of purpose that gave a lofty ideal to life to thousands of young men and women.

"Now that her days of active work are over and her rare personality is no longer in the great university to help the ambitious, earnest young women who throng its halls, it seems truly fitting that a fund shall be established which shall give substantial aid to those she would help so much if there. It is proposed to use the money that may come into the scholarship treasury as a revolving loan fund. Small amounts will be loaned from time to time to those young women in the university whom the trustees of the fund find deserving of financial assistance, the loan to be repaid without interest at the earliest convenience of the borrower. (This is to be in no sense a charity fund. It is simply to be a source of helping, friendly loans—the kind of a loan that a friend makes to a friend—not to humiliate him with alms or harrass him with usury, but to give a warm, cordial, helping hand to a fellow-farer through life.)"

"RENA VIVIENNE" WILL VISIT DULUTH DURING SUMMER

"RENA VIVIENNE,"
Better Known to Duluthians as Rena Smith.

Rena Vivienne, who is now in New York, singing a few concert engagements and awaiting the arrival of her mother from Berlin, will be the guest of Duluth friends during June. Miss Vivienne and her mother, Mrs. Smith, will arrive some time during that month for a visit here. Miss Vivienne will probably be heard in concert here during her visit.

Miss Vivienna recently sang in a concert in New York in place of Marguerite Sylva and was most cordially received. The other artist appearing was a pianist, Leo Tetonius. There is much interest here in the summer visit of the young singer in whom Duluth is so much interested.

OTHER RESIGNATIONS

Are Offered By Officers of Suffrage Society.

The resignations from the official board of the National Society for Women's Suffrage are of great interest to women throughout the country. Mrs. Frances Squire Potter, in whom Minnesota women are especially interested, has resigned as secretary and neither her reasons nor future plans have been announced. That there has been some disagreement over the conduct of some branch of suffrage management is evident, but even the statement by Mrs. Rachael Foster Avery, first vice president, and Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, treasurer, whose resignations will take place within a month, does not make things especially clear to the lay mind.

Mrs. Avery and Mrs. Upton have issued the following statement:

"At the time of the election, we believed that a certain injustice of which we were previously cognizant, and which it was our official duty, as well as our private obligation to correct, had been discontinued. The knowledge that this injustice was being continued came to us subsequently. Having exhausted every means in our power to make the matter right, the only protest left to us was to resign our official positions, thus seeming to discontinue to countenance it. There are times when one cannot compromise; this was one of those times."

CIVIC PROVERBS

Are Spoken By Clever Minneapolis Woman.

Mrs. T. G. Winter president of the Minneapolis Women's club is a contributor to the current issue of The Survey, a weekly magazine devoted to social, charitable and civic interests of America. "The Book of Gopher" is the subject of Mrs. Winter's contribution, written after the style of the Bible account of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba. The climax is as follows:

"Then did she give unto the king a book, and she turned and went into her own country. And the king opened the book, and behold it was a book of proverbs, such as the men of Sheba delight in. And the king read the proverbs:

"You can get a law through the legislature but you can't get it enforced.

"Billboards cover a multitude of tin cans.

"One medical inspection in time saves nine doctors' bills.

"Many playgrounds make light hearted children.

"Too many labor permits spoil the adult worker.

"One tuberculosis case in camp is better than ten in a tenement.

"All that's garbage is not collected.

"Inspectors that can inspect and won't inspect should be made to inspect.

"Uncleanliness is next to ungodliness.

"Look out for the children and the men will look out for themselves.

"You'll never miss the microbe 'till the river runs dry.

"To the smokey city belongs the spoiled merchandise.

"When the chimneys be up, all cats be gray.

"It's an ill milk that bringeth no baby good.

"Where there's a will to make a better city, there's a way."

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER

Maple sugar, 20 cents a pound.
Spinach, 40 cents a peck.
Strawberries, two boxes for 25 cents.
Peas, two quarts for 25 cents.
Pie plant, four pounds for 25 cents.
Celery, two stalks for 15 cents.
Tomatoes, 30 cents a basket.
Live fish and dead ones.
Roasts and steaks and chops and things like that.

The market is a green and refreshing place to go these bright and beautiful mornings when the sun shines warm and invigorating and the lake blue and clean and cold sparkles in a most attractive manner, and thougats of murder and sudden death seize one when one encounters the inexorable fact that one must arise and face the responsibilities and duties of life, without which no real soul development, not to mention the wherewithal to be clothed or the filthy lucre to buy the luscious things with which the market is crowded, can be really achieved in a manner consistent with self respect, and that thrilling feeling of independence, which is a feeling that is perhaps purely American and maybe differs only in degree from the great impulse that stirred those great men, Benjamin Franklin, George Washington, some of the Adamses and others in the early days of the life of this republic when they placed their feet firmly on the stand they believed to be right, declared for liberty, which has through their efforts been preserved to a degree to this generation, not so far, however, as to allow for those so inclined to remain snuggled in the warm coziness of bed, until inclination and not grim necessity moves them to arise. (A prize is offered for a correct analysis of this sentence.)

The strawberries and spinnach and things like that are good to look at. As to how they taste ask the people who have dividends from mining stock.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY

Keeping Oilcloth Clean.

Those who use oilcloth as a covering for floors often find it hard to keep it in good condition. It should never be scrubbed with hard brushes, or washed with strong soap or soda. Oilcloth should be cleansed by being washed with a soft cloth and tepid water, and should it be very dirty a little ammonia should be dissolved in the water. When it is dry rub the oilcloth well with beeswax that has been softened with turpentine. Four ounces of beeswax melted and thoroughly mixed with eight ounces of spirits of turpentine gives a nice polish. Now and then rub the oilcloth with boiled linseed oil to "feed" it and keep it in good condition. Milk also is good for it.

Polish for Stained Boards.

To keep stained boards in good condition polish once a week with this mixture: Half a pint of turpentine, half a pint of linseed oil, half a pint of vinegar. Shake all well together in a large bottle. Apply a very little with a soft piece of rag, and polish with a dry soft cloth. This will remove all dust and keep a brilliant surface.

Dry Cleaning Process for Lace.

If cleaning real lace, spread it out on a sheet of white paper. Cover it with a fine calcined magnesia, place another paper over and press between two pages of a bulky book for a day or two. The powder may then be shaken off and the lace will be found quite clean.

Rust Stains on Marble.

Spirits of salt remedies this mischief. Rub the stains with a piece of flannel moistened with the spirits of salt. This however must be done with great care, otherwise it may also remove the polish. Ordinary stains on marble will yield to a mixture of unslaked lime made into a soft paste with soap lye. Leave the paste on for several days, then wash off with soap and water.

Mending Broken China.

To mend china smear the edge of the broken parts with white lead such as painters use. Press the edges together, tie them in place, and leave for two or three days until it has set.

To Make Boots Last.

If new boots and shoes are varnished on the sole every few weeks with best copal varnish, they will wear much longer. Give two coats of varnish for the first time, as new leather absorbs varnish very quickly.

Iron Mould on Linen.

The best way to remove iron mould from linen is to cover the stain with common salt, moisten the salt with the juice of a lemon, leave for a minute or two, then shake it off, when the stain will have disappeared.

Meat—Smothered Chicken With Oysters.

Fill a young chicken with drained oysters seasoned with salt and pepper. Sew up and put into a pail with close-fitting cover. Set the pail into a pot of boiling water and cook until the chicken is very tender. Take up the chicken and to the gravy add a tablespoonful each of flour and butter, blended together, with half a cup of milk. Cook until it thickens, stirring constantly. Then add two finely chopped hard-boiled eggs and a tablespoon of minced parsley. Bring to the boil, pour over the chicken and serve.

Vegetables—Corn Fritters.

Cut the corn from four good ears, cutting off the tops of the kernels and scraping the rest. Season with salt and pepper, add two eggs, a cup of milk and a cup of flour. Do not beat the mixture, but stir it well for five minutes and it will be sufficiently firm. Butter well a frying pan, take a large spoon and drop by spoonful the mixture into the pan. Fry until a golden color, about five minutes on each side. Serve on a folded napkin.

Dessert—Madeline's Peach Kisses.

Pare large, mellow free-stone peaches, cut in halves and remove the pits. Dust with sugar, put into each cavity the half of a marshmallow and cover with whipped and sweetened cream. Chill and serve.

TRY THIS DINNER

Spanish Soup.

Chop two onions very fine and fry brown in a little butter. Add a tablespoonful of sugar and when browned add a quart of beef stock (or one can of bullion and two cans of water), a tablespoon of minced parsley, and boil for ten minutes. Place thin fingers of toast in a tureen, season with salt and pepper, pour the soup over them and serve.

DULUTH WOMAN WHO HEADS FIGHT AGAINST WHITE PLAGUE

MRS. FLORENCE LEE.

Residents of Duluth are today receiving the letters sent out by the financial committee of the Duluth Anti-tuberculosis committee, appealing for funds with which to carry on the work for the next year.

It is too early to expect a response today, but it is believed that the mail tomorrow will bring some substantial checks. The committee has placed the amount it needs at $3,000.

In view of the vast good done in the last year by the fight which is being waged in this city against the white plague, there should be little difficulty in securing that sum in a short time. Mrs. Florence Lee, the visiting nurse, has been in charge of the work since last spring. She has visited hundreds of homes and patients and has been the instrument through which the committee has been able to take such a big stride forward in the campaign which is being waged. She has acted as an educator as well as a nurse. Giving lessons on hygiene, sanitation and proper living, she has probably done more in this direction than by the administration of medicines.

When she came to Duluth she found a situation entirely unlooked for. The committee knew there was much tuberculosis in the corporate limits, but it had not anticipated the foothold it had obtained or had an inkling of the condition in which many people were living. Wherever she has gone in the course of her duties, it has been one of the first aims of Mrs. Lee to induce the residents to clean up. She has shown them that they will be healthier if their surroundings could be improved and in no instance has her advice gone unheeded.

Several patients who would have soon been helplessly in the clutches of the disease have been given a new lease on life, while the last days of those too far gone to save have been made as comfortable as possible. With the needed funds at its command the committee is certain that even more good will be accomplished the coming year. The members are sure that the people of Duluth are deeply enough interested to furnish the ammunition in the form of contributions to continue the work which has had such an auspicious start.

SOMETHING NEW IN PARTIES

By POLLY PAGET.

Presently the afternoon party, in its pre-historic form of eating cake in crowded rooms, in listening to different music and of giving their guests something novel to look at or to do, and, as at one house lately, was displayed a fine collection of modern fans, and at another the latest jewelry, one might just as well go on a shopping expedition as to a party, and all the world knows there is nothing more delightful than shopping.

I heard of a pretty notion which was carried out at a hen party in the country. In a marquee on the lawn tables were heaped with every flower of the season, lilacs, lillies, laburnam, etc., and a number of cheap glass vases were provided for the guests.

Each one proceeded to make the most effective arrangement of flowers that could be achieved in a quarter of an hour, and prizes for the prettiest vases were given by the hostess, who judged that various exhibits without being told the names of the decorators.

Another idea brought much profit to a deserving cause at a charity meeting. The ladies present put together buttonholes for men to bid for afterward at an improvised auction, the bidding of each starting at a penny.

Here, again, secrecy was supposed to be observed as to the identity of the makers, and the buttonholes were nominally sold on their own merits, but I imagine some system of telepathy was established or terrible mistakes must have been made.

For instance, a brother might have committed the foolish blunder of paying for his sister's handiwork.

Even his interest in the charity which had been benefited by his generosity would hardly atone for the fact that a certain bunch of flowers, its origin discovered too late, was adorning another man's coat.

THE EVENING STORY

CHECKMATING THE KIDNAPERS

(A Detective Story.)

By Edwin L. Terhune.

Harvey Knox, detective officer, was called to the desk by the sergeant in charge, and found standing there a young woman in the garb of a nursery maid. She was greatly agitated and gazed pleadingly at the detective as the sergeant said: "Here's a kidnaping case, Knox, with a hot trail. Get busy on it at once."

"Oh, do help me, Mr. Knox!" the girl exclaimed. "I'm in such trouble! Oh, what shall I do?" Then she began to cry.

"Come now," said Knox, kindly. "Calm yourself and tell me what's the trouble. Let us be quick about it."

He drew the girl aside, and by judicious repression of her lamentations and self-condemnation drew from her the story that she was employed to take care of little Wallace Horton, the 4-year-old son of a millionaire merchant. One of her duties was to take the child out for a daily afternoon airing in Central park. She had disobeyed instructions this afternoon and instead of going to the park had gone to a matinee at one of the theaters. During the second act the lights went out suddenly, and when the theater was lighted again, only a minute or two later, the child had disappeared amid the confusion caused by the unusual incident.

"I have come straight here," continued the nurse, hastily. "I instantly told the manager, and he consulted the doorkeepers, who are perfectly sure no one left the theater during the period when the lights were out. They could see, because it was daylight at the doors."

"We have no time to lose," said Knox, when the girl had finished. "Let us hurry to the theater."

Knox found the manager quite ready to co-operate with him in solving the mystery. The girl returned to her seat, under a caution from the detective to conceal her anxiety as much as possible, so that the kidnapers, if they were still in the house, would believe she thought the child was near by and hiding himself for the fun of the thing.

"You are sure the child has not been taken out of the theater?" Knox asked the manager as they went behind the scenes.

"Positive. The doorkeepers are trustworthy, and have been put on the lookout for him," was the answer.

The detective placed himself behind a large piece of scenery, in the canvas of which he made a small hole with his penknife. Through this he was able to see the audience. It required but a few moments to make a survey of every part of the house. Suddenly he gave a start, and, quitting his post, he sought the manager, by whom he sent a message to the nursery maid, telling here where to await him.

It was only a few minutes before the performance was ended, but before the curtain went down Knox had made his way toward the exit from the gallery, and in the shade of one of the pillars waited for the people to come out of the theater. In a few minutes crowds of men, women and children streemed out, and Knox suddenly noticed two men, each holding the hand of a child about 4 years of age. The men were carrying large bags of sweets, and in an instant the detective knew the boy to be the stolen child. For reasons best known to himself, he did not rush to the child's rescue. He felt certain there was a gang at work, and that he would probably be struck from behind and rendered senseless. Following the men, he saw one of them give the child another bag of sweets.

"No, we'll take you home to your father," he heard the fellow say. "Come along, Evan; we'll get in the taxicab."

The men jumped in a taxicab, and in an instant the detective sprang into another.

"Follow that cab wherever it goes," commanded the detective. The next moment the cab was sailing away in pursuit.

For over half an hour the cab followed, until suddenly it stopped and the driver jumped down.

"They have gone into a house half way down the road," he said to the detective.

Hastening to the house, Knox cautiously approached the front door, and finding the way clear for his purpose he entered the place by means of a skeleton key

The house was in semi-darkness. The detective approached the door of the front room. He heard voices.

"I want to go back to mamma," he heard a tiny voice exclaim.

"Shut up, you little idiot, or we'll drop you in the river!"

The words were uttered by one of the men, and the next moment Knox heard them moving toward the door. In an instant he ran down the passage and hid behind a curtain.

No sooner had he done so than the men came out of the room.

"I'll lock the door for safety," said the nearer man.

"Yes, we don't want the kid to get away now we've got him. It was a great idea of yours, tampering with the electric lights."

Both men chuckled at the thought, and the next moment they had gone out by the front door.

Directly the door closed, Knox went to work on the lock to the door of the room and presently he was face to face with the child, now more frightened than before.

"Don't cry, my little man," the detective said in a reassuring tone as the boy began to show symptoms of a long, loud fit of crying. "Keep as quiet as you can and come with me to your mamma. We must hurry or those bad men may be back before we get away."

The child was won by the kindly voice and the pleasant expression of the detective, and sprang to his extended arms. Knox was quick to make his exit from the place and to the taxicab which was awaiting his return. He now had another task to perform.

"You must tell Mr. Horton all about this," he said to the grateful nursery maid when he restored her lost charge to her. "This is the first, but it will not be the last attempt of the Kidnapping gang to get possession of the child, and Mr. Horton must be put upon his guard."

Gladdened by her speedy extrication from the great misfortune her imprudence had led her into, the girl was quite ready to bear any punishment her betrayal of confidence might subject her to and the detective went with her to the Horton residence.

It was only a mild reproof that the girl received when the story was told, for in the escape from a great woe Mr. Horton could not but be forgiving, especially as the girl's prompt action had been the means of retrieving the situation. But he was curious as to how Knox had so quickly located the child whom he had never seen.

"Will you kindly explain how you knew that the child was in the gallery?" he asked.

"I watched from behind the scenes, and saw a small boy seated in the third row. He was eating sweets, and seemed strange. He did not applaud when the others did so; he removed his hat, and his manners were entirely different from those in the gallery. I waited till they came out with your boy, and followed them."

IRON FOUND IN BEMIDJI

Boys Pick Up Bits of Ore Along the Shore of the Lake There.

City Is Excited Over Discovery of Bits Scraped Up By the Ice.

Bemidji, Minn., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Iron ore has been found on the shores of Lake Bemidji within the incorporated limits of this city. The ice a few weeks ago, grinding against Diamond point, which was offered a year ago to the state for the location of a sixth normal school, has shoved up sand containing 50 per cent iron.

Two Bemidji boys made the discovery yesterday afternoon. Wilbur Lycan and Byron Russell, two freshmen in the Bemidji high school, both about 15 years old, noticed that the ice had scraped a ridge up the shore. In this they found several small chunks of dark rock, which Young Lycan insisted must be iron ore. The boys filled their pockets with the dark "pebbles" and sand and took them to Wilbur's home at the Markham hotel, where it was found that the ore clung to a magnetized knife. They took the pieces to C. L. Cummer, a local jeweler, who emphatically declared that it was 50 per cent iron ore.

Excited Over Find.

Considerable excitement exists in the city this morning and several parties have visited the point and secured more of the iron gravel.

A. A. White of St. Paul, a heavy stockholder in the Bemidji Townsite & Improvement company, is the owner of Diamond Point. It has been known for a long time that iron existed in this part of Beltrami county, but whether the ore can be found in paying quantities is unknown, no one ever having sunk a drill in this vicinity to determine the question.

VERDICT FOR THE PLAINTIFF

John Erickson Is Awarded Small Sum in Personal Injury Action.

Joseph Erickson was given a verdict for $225 against the Oliver Iron Mining company by a jury in district court this morning.

For injuries alleged to have taken place at the Hill mine at Marble, Erickson sued for $3,000. The case was on trial before Judge William A. Cant for some days.

Erickson claimed that he was working in a trench loading holes with dynamite when the side of the trench gave way and a huge chunk of frozen material dropped on his head, breaking his skull.

He claimed that the accident was caused by the negligence of the company.

HEINZE TRIAL IS UNDER WAY

Defendant's Financial Relations With C. W. Morse Aired.

Thirty-Eight Counts Remain in the Indictments Against Him.

New York, April 26.—The banking relations of Charles W. Morse and F. Augustus Heinze figured in the proceedings at the very outset of Heinze's trial, begun today in earnest in the United States court, on charges of misapplication of funds of the Mercantile National bank and over-certification of checks drawn upon it. Heinze was president of the bank in 1907, when the transactions complained of took place.

Seven counts in the indictments against Heinze were quashed yesterday by Judge Hough, but thirty-eight were left upon which to try him, and the government attorneys expressed their readiness to proceed. The trial thus begins after a delay of two and one-half years.

The counts dismissed charged over-certification and misapplication of the funds of the Mercantile National bank. Enough counts remain, however, to send Heinze, on conviction, to prison for many years.

The loans are alleged to have been made to persons interested with Heinze in various ventures. If this is proved, said the judge, a crime will have been established.

Counsel for Heinze.

Heinze's counsel include ex-Lieutenant Governor John B. Stanchfield, ex-United States Judge William J. Wallace, John C. Tomlinson and the firm of Levy, Rosenthal & Hermance.

Mr. Tomlinson asked that the indictment, a consolidation of three indictments, be dismissed on the ground that a similar charge was dismissed by Judge Hough last March. The only difference, he said, was that the present charge contained the words, "convert, converted and conversion," put in, he alleged, to prevent a demurrer.

"There is no allegation," he said, "that the firm of Otto Heinze & Co., to whom money was loaned, was insolvent, nor that there was collusion between the borrower and the defendant."

JOY IN PROSPECT FOR CLIMBERS

One Elevator to Be in Operation at Courthouse Next Week.

One elevator at the courthouse will be in commission Monday of next week.

Although those in charge of the building have done all in their power to have the elevators repaired in as short a time as possible, the delay has been long owing to the inability of the contractors to get the new steel fittings.

The elevators have been out of commission for some weeks. The old service was not satisfactory in any way. The elevators made so much noise they disturbed greatly the work in the courtrooms. They were put out of service after they had been condemned by an insurance company.

During the past few weeks the stairs have been used and as they are long and winding, those who have occasion to visit the courthouse daily will welcome back into service the popular lift scheme.

It is expected that both elevators will be running in two weeks time.

To Dedicate Hankinson Church.

Charged With Horse Theft.

Mandan, N. D., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Edward Lund, residing in Fort Rice township, was arrested on a charge of grand larceny, the theft of a number of horses in that neighborhood being laid at his door.

At about the time the horses were stolen, Lund disappeared. He was arrested at Forsyth and brought back to Mandan to answer to the accusations of his neighbors.

WEST END

YOUNG SON WAS CRUELLY BEATEN

Andrew Johnson Given Thirty Days for Abusing Son.

Andrew Johnson of 2716 West Michigan street was sent to the county jail for thirty days in police court yesterday afternoon, for cruelly beating Arthur, his 6-year-old son, Saturday night. The evidence was that he had beaten the boy with a stick about the head and body until he was black and blue, and one of his ears partly torn from the head. Still in a rage, it was alleged that he threw the youngster outdoors into the snow and cold, clothed only in an undershirt. Complaint was made to George V. Fifer, humane agent, and he caused Johnson's arrest yesterday. In sentencing Johnson the court declared that he was a brute who ought to be horse whipped.

COMMERCIAL CLUB WILL MEET FRIDAY.

Owing to other attractions, the meeting of the West end Commercial club, which was supposed to have been held on Friday evening last, was postponed. Yesterday afternoon, it was decided to hold it next Friday evening at the office of the secretary, George M. Jensen.

The "white way" matter may also come up for consideration.

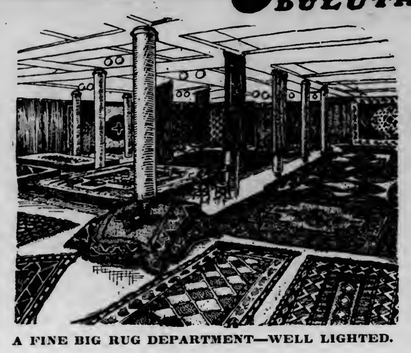
At the September primaries Burrows and Representative Townsend both will be candidates and will agree to abide by the result of the primaries.

Burglary at Carrington, N. D.

Carrington, N. D., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Although burglars who entered Walker & Co.'s store in this city only secured $10 in cash, they made away with a great quantity of plunder of a valuable nature. Costly revolvers and cutlery pieces were stolen by the men, who entered the building by the use of skeleton keys.



FOR FALLING HAIR

The man or woman whose hair is becoming thin and "straggly" and falls out every time it is combed or brushed can make at home a hair tonic that will nourish and strengthen the dying follicles.

Just get from your druggist one ounce of beta quinol and one-half pint alcohol, take home and mix with one-half pint warm water. Some mix the ounce of beta quinol with a pint of bay rum. Either recipe will prove beneficial to the hair, for it is the beta quinol that puts the hair in healthy condition and keeps it so.

The care of the hair deserves as much attention as the care of the teeth. Beta quinol prevents dandruff. Use this tonic every other day until the hair and scalp are in satisfactory condition, then twice a week, and your hair will remain long, abundant and glossy.

HINTS FOR BOUDOIR

By MILDRED WYCKOFF.

Spots on the Face.

"My face is very spotty and I am wondering if it results from the use of powder. Will you advise me?" Flora M. writes. It is doubtful if the use of powder would in itself, cause the skin of the face to show a spotted appearance. Neglecting to treat the face properly after using powder might be one of the several causes. The condition of the blood has something to do with such cases, and carelessness in the matter of diet is sometimes to blame. But if the use of powder is a leading cause it would be well before retiring at night to see that the face should be well washed in warm water, so that all traces of the powder are removed from the pores. If the powder is left on, it will clog the pores and might cause blackheads to form. The skin should also be perfectly clean before powder is applied.

Removal of Freckles.

The summer girl does not object to a good coat of tan upon her face, but she does abhor freckles and it is freckles that she gets instead of tan in some cases. This can be avoided in nearly every case by bathing the face in lemon juice at night, and avoiding the direct rays of the sun during the day by wearing large sandy hats. The application of buttermilk in the morning will sometimes help.

About Puffy Eyelids.

"Can you tell me what causes puffy eyelids," asks Agnes L., "and how to cure them?" Puffy eyelids generally indicate some internal trouble concerning which it would be advisable to consult a doctor. It may be caused, however, by catching cold in the eyes, this causing the eyelids to become swollen and inflamed. In this case you should bathe them in warm water in which a teaspoonful of boracic acid has been dissolved twice a day, and avoid going into the open air directly afterwards.

Blondes May Wash Their Hair Often.

Because it matters little how light her hair becomes a blonde may wash her hair more frequently than a brunette. A shampoo in borax water once or twice a week will soon lighten the hair.

Making the Elbows Smooth.

Rubbing the elbows with rough salt and rinsing with cold water often helps to make them smooth and takes away that unpleasant redness with which some are afflicted.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

Treatment of Constipation.

It is as much a mistake to get into the habit of taking medicines regularly for constipation as it is to neglect the trouble altogether.

Proper diet, combined with exercise, is the more rational and more satisfactory method of dealing with the condition.

Oatmeal porridge, brown bread (stewed and fresh) are the best foods, but even more important than diet is regular exercise, and out of doors, to counteract the evils of modern sedentary life.

If you suffer in this way take stewed fruits as the first course at breakfast invariably. This, combined with oatmeal porridge and cream, a little brown bread and butter and the inevitable cup of weak tea or coffee, is a better breakfast than bacon and kidney, strong tea and toast.

Take stewed prunes, figs, plums, or apples; in fact, take any fruit that is in season, either stewed or fresh. Take fruit again at dinner. Indeed, if you can digest it and enjoy it, fruit is the most valuable article of diet.

Avoid Summer Colds.

The season is upon us when people take colds in what they frequently regard as an unaccountable way.

Thin linen and cotton garments worn next to the skin are answerable for a great many chills in hot weather. These materials are non-porous, which means that they retain moisture. After exercise and excessive perspiration the contact of damp clothes is very likely to cause chills and summer colds. Thin wool, nun's veiling or silk material should always be worn next to the skin in hot weather.

Evil of Overeating.

Eminent medical authorities say that people eat too much. While this has a bad effect upon young and old alike, to those who have reached or passed middle life self-restraint is especially advisable. As the fire of life burns less fiercely and the output of energy is smaller, the fuel supplied should be reduced, in order that the system may not be clogged with ashes and half-burnt cinders.

YOUNG MEN AND MAIDENS

By MISS EXPERIENCE.

Seems Hard to Please.

Lottie M. writes that she has received twelve proposals of marriage to date, and can't decide to accept even the latest. You have had a very fair share, Lottie, and the latest may be the last. But it is a good guess that you would not accept the very next one, anyway. Or have you a superstition concerning the number thirteen? On the whole it might be best for you to gather in that twelfth man while you have the chance. Delays are dangerous.

Wants to Make Up Again.

"I had a sweetheart for seven months and was very much attached to him, but I sent him a hasty letter two years ago, and we have neither met nor corresponded since. I have had several good offers, but cannot make up my mind to accept any one else, for I still think of him. Do you think I can win him back?" Vera J., who writes thus, has let the misunderstanding last too long. If her letter was a mistake she should have realized it sooner. The young man evidently has accepted the situation, and may-be he has forgotten all about that love affair of two years ago. But Vera might write to him and say she would be glad to be friendly once more, and admit that the quarrel was her own fault. That is about as far as she could go.

Just a Bit of Retribution.

When a girl throws over her lover and wants to recall him she is in an uncomfortable plight. She has only herself to blame for the situation she describes when she writes: "I was engaged to a young man whom I adore. We quarreled because of my imagining that he was too much interested in another girl. Then, in despair, I accepted a rich man, but my later lover tired of me and now has another sweetheart. Could I ask the first one to come back?" It wouldn't be a pretty thing to do at all. If he is a wise man he would refuse. You didn't treat him nicely, and he could scarcely have any trust in you again. And though the rich man behaved badly, too, you are not in a position to complain about that in the least. Do try to realize what an unkind and dishonorable thing you did.

"ON TO CROOKSTON!"

The executive committee of the Northern Minnesota Development association makes formal announcement that the summer meeting of the association will be held at Crookston June 1, 2 and 3.

The apportionment of delegates will be mailed to each county association in a few days.

Subjects of vital importance to every citizen of Northern Minnesota will be discussed, and speakers of national reputation are promised. The program is being prepared and will soon be ready for distribution.

Crookston and the Polk County Development association are to be the hosts at this gathering, and they can be counted upon to do their part nobly. A social meeting on the evening of June 1 will open the convention, and the following two days will be given up wholly to business. That part of the affair may safely be left to Crookston and Polk county.

But it is up to the county associations in each of the twenty-nine counties outside of Polk to do their part—which is to see that there is a full attendance from every county.

The Bemidji meeting was all business—except for a pleasant social evening provided by the hosts of the convention—but every minute of it was enjoyed by every delegate there. It was all business, but it was business of such uncommon interest that it was enjoyed as keenly as though it had been new kind of sport. It was the business of getting together—a business that Northern Minnesota had neglected hitherto, and a business that needed attending to very much indeed.

It will be the same way at Crookston. In the realization of the common interest of a vast empire that is fully taxed but grossly under-represented in the making of laws, and in the determination to serve those common interests by co-operation, lies the secret of the success of the Bemidji meeting; and it will be the reason for the success of the Crookston meeting.

That is why it is essential that the thirty counties included in the territory of the associa ion all shall be represented by their full quota of delegates. These meetings are more than a getting together. First they are a focus into which the determined purpose of the neglected northern two-thirds of the state is concentrated. Next they are the center from which radiates, into all parts of this great empire within a state, the collective force of public sentiment.

The more people there are at such meetings the more there will be to partake of the spirit of these meetings and to carry it back to their home communities to add fire and zeal to the public sentiment there.

Besides the general purpose of arousing public interest and concentrating it into effective form, these gatherings serve as a vehicle for spreading information useful in the up-building of Northern Minnesota. Experts talk on the topics about which they are best qualified to talk, and their speeches are mines of useful wisdom.

The Crookston meeting will come shortly before the state political conventions. Northern Minnesota wants these conventions to adopt its policies as parts of their platforms. The success of the Crookston meeting will have much to do with determining whether or not this wish is heeded.

On to Crookston!

DAIRYING ON CUT-OVER LANDS.

A lesson that should be taken home by every person who lives in Northern Minnesota is to be gained from a bulletin recently issued by A. J. McGuire, superintendent of the Grand Rapids experiment station, after a visit to Milaca. Mr. McGuire is a valiant and effective champion of the dairy cow. He preaches his doctrine trenchantly and pointedly on every occasion, and when he discovered that drinking and dairying don't mix well, was brave enough to say so even though saying so enraged certain interests to the point of threatening to take his job away from him. But the inharmonious relationship between ardent liquors and milking cows has nothing to do with the story of Milaca, from which every community in Northern Minnesota can take comfort and encouragement.

Says Mr. McGuire: "Milaca is near the southern border of the pine-growing section of Northern Minnesota. It is eighty-six miles south of Duluth and seventy-four miles north of St. Paul. It is in the cut-over section, and has a few scattering pine standing. The farms run from forty to one hundred and twenty acres, with an average of about forty acres under cultivation. These farms have been made by cutting brush and getting out stumps as best the farmers could. The land there was no easier to clear than the average cut-over land of Northeastern Minnesota. The soil is no more fertile, and yet the farmers around Milaca are prosperous, and are rapidly becoming well-off farmers. Milaca has a creamery that is owned and operated by the farmers. In 1909 this creamery made 300,726 pounds of butter, from which the farmers received $71,160.07 after paying all running expenses. This creamery has been in operation but two years, and the farmers have been dairying but four years, yet their output is well up toward that of the best creameries in the state. Furthermore, the area from which the creamery receives patronage is only a single township."

The application of this brief description to Duluth or to any community in Northeastern Minnesota needs no argument; it applies itself.

What Milaca has done and is doing, any other community in Northern Minnesota can do; and many others are doing it.

When Mr. McGuire asked a Milaca banker whose was the farm with the fine buildings he saw from the train, the banker said he didn't know; there were so many answering that description that he couldn't tell which one was meant. Asked how the farmers have made their money, the banker said: "They have made it from seven to fifteen cows to the farm—and common cows at that. They have made it through dairying and their creamery." Through their success in dairying, Mr. McGuire adds, these farmers have increased the value of land around Milaca 100 per cent. "Best of all, they have shown what may be done throughout Northeastern Minnesota. Any farmer who may feel discouraged with his land or brush and stumps should visit Milaca. Milaca is wholly a farming town, and is one of the most prosperous towns of its size between Duluth and St. Paul. It may also be worthy of note that it has no saloons, but it has three banks, and its farmers have bank accounts—and its merchants very few accounts that are uncollectible."

The moral of this is obvious—but let Mr. McGuire supply it in case there are any so obtuse as not to see it: "Let the dairy industry be the aim of every farming community throughout Northeastern Minnesota, and in every community it may be made as successful and prosperous as Milaca." Varying this by adding market gardening close to such markets as that of Duluth and the iron range communities, and it is splendid advice.

HUGHES ON THE BENCH.

Whatever question there may be about the gain to the nation in the selection of Governor Hughes of New York to be associate justice of the supreme court, there isn't a particle of doubt that it is a great loss to the state of New York, which loses a governor that it needed very much, and one who has filled the place as it hasn't been filled in many a year.

Hughes is a fine, upstanding statesman with a man's strength and a man's courage. He is a good lawyer, and his public spirit, so far as it has been tested, seems actuated by the best of motives. He vetoed a 2-cent passenger fare bill in New York when 2-cent rate bills were in vogue, but on the whole he was admired for it rather than condemned, because he vetoed it on the ground that the legislature had made no investigation before acting, and couldn't possibly know what it was doing. That wasn't so bad; but one could wish he hadn't rendered such effective service in defeating the income tax amendment—for it is to be feared that for the present at least that measure is defeated. To oppose the amendment on the ground that it might be possible under its provisions to tax state securities was a good deal of a strain; and it is significant that very few good lawyers agree with him in his opinion.

Hughes has been a bitter, uncompromising enemy of graft in all its pettier forms, but on the whole he has shown no overmastering convictions about graft in its larger forms; indeed, there is little evidence that he looks upon tariff and other special privileges as graft at all.

However, though there may be some doubt about the bent of his mind toward these broader issues, there can be no question about his rigid honesty. The appointment is a better one than many had expected.

TAWNEY AND TARIFF COMMISSION.

Just before election, the Republican organization is very much interested in a tariff commission, and Congressman Tawney of Minnesota has been picked as the champion of the plan.

If it wasn't so close to election, and if Mr. Tawney was not in such great political jeopardy, and if the Republican organization had shown better faith in its admiration of the tariff commission idea last summer when it had a chance to do something, we should take this talk more seriously than it is possible to do now.

If the Republican organization, the "system" that gives Aldrich and Cannon their power, really had wished a tariff commission, it would have provided one last summer when the tariff bill was on the way to passage. Instead, it emasculated the tariff commission provision in the bill in open senate, and then emasculated it some more on the quiet in conference committee, leaving nothing of it but a useless skeleton, which it offered as a sop to public opinion.

The only possible reason for its present advocacy of a tariff commission is that it wishes to give Mr. Tawney something to get re-elected upon. He is opposed in his district for his abject subserviency to the "system," for his standpatism, and for his service to Cannonism. He is defended in his district because his usefulness to the "system" enables him to be useful to his district. If the "system" is to go, as seems likely, his usefulness will cease; and his strength has been greatly undermined by the growing weakness of Cannonism in the house.

This country needs a tariff commission plan that will take the tariff out of politics. The present move, however, seems nothing but a pretty scheme to give Tawney something to play with for the beguilement of his constituents.

RYAN IN THE SENATE.

A dispatch to The Herald last evening stated that in all probability Thomas F. Ryan will be appointed to the United States senate in the event of Senator Daniel's death.

This will fit Mr. Ryan's lifelong ambition, and on the whole we are rather in favor of it. There is no great difference between having Mr. Ryan in the senate and having somebody there that does what he commands; and what difference there is seems all in favor of putting the principals in where everybody can understand their acts instead of having underlings who may be mistaken for single-minded patriots.

But if Mr. Ryan is going to the senate, Mr. Rockefeller, Mr. Morgan, Mr. Archbold and their associates ought to be there also.

The servants of the specially privileged ought to be put out of the senate. If they cannot be replaced by servants of the people, it will be better to have the real beneficiaries in the senate than their retainers. There will be less misunderstanding and confusion in that event than there is now.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

REPLIES TO "MAGNETO."

To the Editor of the Herald:

A certain anonymous magnate or "Magneto," appeared in your "Open Court" column, defending their side of the case in regard to automobile drivers. The writer said: 'I suppose that I stand a chance of being mobbed." Not as long as you protect yourself under an anonymous cover need you have any fear in that respect. He further said: "We all regret the accident of a few days ago when an aged lady was killed. Let me say, however, that many people have plenty of sympathy for the man who was driving the car." I do not doubt that, as I sympathize with him myself, but that does not excuse those careless drivers. What about the man who lost his wife? I see no sympathy offered him in your article, only a common regret. What if that lady had been your wife, what would you have said and done then? A couple of weeks ago while waiting for a street car for the hillside at Third avenue west and Superior street, some young man came sailing along at a terrific speed, turning the corner up Third avenue in such a rush that it was a wonder to me that the machine did not tip over. After he had turned he looked back as if to see if anything had happened and with his eyes looking backward his machine was still speeding up the avenue, with speed that led me to think that there must have been something that he was speeding for. Maybe he was a little late in getting the magnate or "Magneto" for his lunch? It is unfortunate for us that we are so situated that we have to use a tramway in loading and unloading. The Fourth street buildings are not yet up to the automobile speed in modern conveniences. Every time I happen to tell plain facts in plain truths it is almost certain that some one gets after us for using our tramway, just as if that ordinance was made just for us. What about Michigan street? Did the writer ever pass on that street, in the summer time? You say you want to be fair and yet you have not courage enough to put your own signature to your article, which in itself shows weakness. We can't all be magnates or a "Magneto," but we can all be careful and considerate.

WHY IS A MISSIONARY?

To the Editor of The Herald:

Back in the days when I wore trousers abbreviated at the knee joint, father used to don his black swallow tail coat, mother her black satin dress, and myself a clean collar and stiff bow necktie, and the family paraded up the center aisle of the First Methodist church back home, to the family pew down among th $2 seats.

In those days father used to amputate himself from a $5 bill, once every year, for foreign missions. It gave him a standing in the community. Every year the list of givers was published in the monthly church paper. A retired banker and money lender, who had in his early and less prosperous days, drawn down his 12 per cent from widows, used to head the list with a subscription of $100 a year. Then came several $25 men, a few $10 men and then a long list of prosperous $5 men. To get into the $5 class was a guarantee of financial standing. Father broke in, and once each year, with an air of great solemnity placed a $5 bill in an envelope, sealed it, and dropped it into the plate for the poor children in Northeast Burmah. When I came to man's estate, and took up the heritage of Adam, I joined the great army of missionary supporters, blindly and unthinkingly. I inherited my religion, like I did my politics, and that's about all I did inherit.

But out here in Lakeside, a man has time for reflection. I have insurged in politics and backslid in religion, have asked myself the question "Why is a missionary?" and myself couldn't answer. Mr. Editor, why is a missionary? Rome is probably the oldest home of Christian religion. Do you think the people of Rome are any happier, or any better, or any more comfortable than the people of Central Africa? Certainly they work harder, and in the end what more have they? Italy is one of the most poverty-stricken countries on the face of the globe. If we could go to these ignorant barbarians with our hands clean, and say: "Look here what we have to offer—honest recompense for honest toil; freedom from industrial slavery; health; sobriety; honesty; assurance that every man who does an honest day's work, shall have peace, assurance of a comfortable old age, and freedom from want"—it would be different. But can we say that? Are we not offering a poor heathen an empty sham? Are we not flim-flamming the black brother? "Better fifty years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay." True, if one is a European. It reminds me of the somewhat shop-worn joke of the unbeliever who asked the missionary why he was trying to arouse the heathen from his idleness and sloth. The answer was to teach him to work and earn money. "Why earn money?" persisted the questioner. "To insure himself ease" was the answer.

Even those who have been successful and are able to buy a home at Lakeside, are in the end no better off than the dark brother. What is the difference between one acre, contentment, a family, a steady job and a pipe, in Lakeside, and all outdoors, a black wife and some pickaninnies, a sod hut and contentment in Central Africa? We strive to dodge automobiles, keep out of jail, and keep the tax collector in good humor. They strive to avoid hungry lions on dark nights, keep away from hostile tribesmen with a liking for dark meat, and to provide enough yams or whatever it is they eat, to pay their annual tribute to the big chief.

I purposely withheld this letter until after the laymen's missionary convention had adjourned, but now Mr. Editor won't you tell me "Why is a missionary?" Your old friend,

A LAKESIDER.

Commission Government Increased Wages.

George Kibbe Turner in an article in the May McClure's, shows what commission government has done for Des Moines. It has increased wages, for one thing. He says:

"In the department of street and public improvements, directed by John MacVicar, one-half of the $1,000,000 budget of the city is expended. It has been the policy of the councilman to take everything directly into his own hands, and to do as little work by contract as possible. When he was in office about a year, the city laborers and teamsters brought pressure upon him to raise their wages. He considered this a fair request, and gave them a considerable advance—raising the laborers from $2 to $2.25 for an eight-hour day; the teamsters from $3.50 to $4.50. These wages were higher than those current, and unquestionably tended to raise the private scale of wages in the city. There was no protest, however, made by employers, and the laboring class was naturally pleased.

"On the contrary, both this raise in pay and the limits of the city's appropriations made it necessary for the manager of this department to get steady work from city workmen. Foremen were allowed to select their laborers, and were held responsible for the results. The result of this change of policy was well set forth by the answer of a washerwoman, the wife of a city laborer, to the question of the woman employing her:

"'How is your husband getting on?'

"'Not so well this winter,' she said 'You see, the city has a new plan, and there is no work when there is nothing to do.'"

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Life: He—A philosopher says: "The only thing worth while in life is trying to do something you can't—and doing it."

She (sweetly)—Is that why you play bridge?

Tit Bits: Jones—That young man who plays the cornet is ill.

Green—Do you think he will recover?

Jones—I am afraid not. The doctor who is attending him lives next door.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: Stranger—Who are those uniformed men with the heavy leather gloves and the nickel-plated nippers?

Native—Eh! Why, that's Chicago's famous hatpin squad.

Boston Courier: Stubb—I notice your wife doesn't wear her 500-button gown to church now.

Penn—No; it was too embarrassing. Every time a button turned up on the collection plate the parson glanced at her.

Pittsburg Post: "I think I'll borrow an idea from the burlesque houses for my society drama."

"As to how?"

"Have the bass-drummer whack his drum every time an epigram is uttered."

Chicago Post: "Grand to live in Florida," said a guest of the Palace to Clerk Smith, "and wake up in the morning hearing the green leaves whispering just outside your window."

"And horrible to hear the grass mown," replied Smith.

Insurgency.

"Insurgency is on the wane,"
Says Wickersham.
Such language gives to each a pain
Who's not a clam,
Because each looks around and sees
Insurgency in every breeze
From East and West, from North and South,
And gets direct from pen and mouth
Strong protests by the small and great
In finance, commerce, church and state
Against the ancient things that stood
For what was man's supremist good.
Perhaps they might have been before,
But in these days we are more and more Inclined to change the old for new
And seek some better thing to do
Than merely to accept the creeds
That seemed to meet our father's needs.
We want to know what's what these days,
We want to know the devious ways
Of men in politics and trade
By which their fame and wealth are made;
We want the church to show the way
To something more than Judgment Day;
We want the blind to see the light,
We want the good to win the fight,
We want the poor to have their share,
We want the deal that measures square,
We want the right to have a chance
To govern every circumstance;
We want fresh air and not dry rot,
We want much more than we have got,
And all will come to us, but not
By ancient methods; there must be
Unterrified insurgency,
And by all signs that count, it seems Insurgents are not idle dreams.
In every soil they sprout and rise
And send their branches to the skies,
And every branch bears fruit to feed
A greater people's greater need.
Insurgents on the wane, indeed!
Oh! Wickersham,
Art thou a clam?

The Woman and the Want Ad.

Professor Charles Zueblin in the Delineator: The present day woman in business employs just as up-to-date methods as a man. When she goes after a position she does so with all her might. The frank adoption of masculine methods, in order to beat the men at their own game, is splendidly exemplified by the young Bryn Mawr graduate who published the following enticing advertisement.

"Situation wanted—Are you looking for brains? For an experienced correspondent who can write convincing letters, letters that get what they are sent to get? A clever woman who can write clever ads or clever talks on any subject and from any point of view? Some one expert in the use of stenography and typewriting? A hybrid from the university and business world? One who knows people and conditions and who can meet all combinations of the two with unwreckable savoir faire? That describes me exactly. Address B. A., 281, Tribune."

Is it surprising that she was swamped with answers?

Women who attain success in the most masculine of industries and financial positions are evidently multiplying. The statistician who prepares the annual report on the cotton crop for the government is a woman, who is said to have increased her income from $8 a week to $10,000 a year.

Trenton, N. J., has recently reported fifteen business women whose occupations are scarcely feminine. They include barbering, wholesale tobacco, real estate, undertaking, pharmacy, jewelry, piano dealing, insurance, shoe repairing, banking, charcoal, etc. South Chicago's situation is more spectacular, if less creditable. In addition to women doctors and police, a woman runs the worst saloon and another the best undertaking establishment, so that, from birth to death, even by "the broad way which leadeth to destruction," a feminine hand may guide.

Self-Dependence.

Weary of myself and sick of asking
What I am, and what I ought to be,
At the vessel's prow I stand, which bears me
Forwards, forwarus o'er the starlit sea.

And a look of passionate desire
O'er the sea and to the stars I send:
"Ye, who from my childhood up have claimed me,
Calm me, ah, compass me to the end!

"Ah, once more," I cried, "ye stars, ye waters,
On my heart your mighty charm renew!
Still, still let me, as I gaze upon you,
Feel my soul becoming vast like you!"

From the intense, clear star-sown vault of heaven,
Over the lit sea's unquiet way,
In the rustling night-air came the answer;
"Wouldst thou be as these are? Live as they.

"Unaffrighted by the silence round them,
Undistracted by the sights they see,
These demand not that the things without them
Yield them love, amusement, sympathy.

"And with joy the stars perform their shining,
And the sea its long moon-silver'd roll;
For, self-poised, they live, nor pine with noting
All the fever of some differing soul.

"Bounded by themselves, and unregardful
In what state God's other works may be,
In their own tasks all their powers pouring,
These attain the mighty life you see."

O air-born voice; long since, severely clear,
A cry like thine in mine own heart I hear:
"Resolve to be thyself; and know that he Who finds himself, loses his misery."
—Matthew Arnold.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A woman's heart is most of her body and all of her head.

A man could make a lot of money betting against his own success.

Most people are so busy being good to themselves they haven't time to be even decent to anybody else.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Patriotism Beats Partisanship.

Albert Lea Standard: With many voters the fetters of party are yet stronger than is their sense of duty to their country, and with such the harangue of the officeholder and salaried platform spieler to "stand by the party" is more fetching than evident transactions and facts, however condemnable and atrocious they may be. But the spirit of rebellion from party servitude and of freedom from the party whip is growing and as men become more sensible of governmental wrongs, the treachery of their representatives in office, and of their own rights, they are putting on the armor of political independence and hosts of them in these enlightened days are becoming more truly patriotic and thus better and more useful citizens.

Scarcity of Taft Papers.

Litchfield Independent: We have a good many Republican papers on our exchange list, but not a Taft paper among them except such as are edited by postmasters.

It is Their Worry.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: It is not the Democrats that view with alarm the workings of the present day Republican party—it is the Republicans.

A Call for Roosevelt.

Sauk Rapids Sentinel-Free Press: If the American people rise up in their might and power and demand that Theodore Roosevelt become president again the vested interests will understand that the "square deal" has passed the sentimental stage. With Roosevelt in the White House again nothing on earth can prevent the enactment of legislation to carry out the progressive program of conservation, postal savings banks, railroad reform and probably tariff reform and a parcels post.

Ask Darford, Ed.

Foley Independent: The Indiana state Republican convention commended the stand taken by Senator Beveridge who voted against the Payne-Aldrich bill; Iowa will likewise uphold her senators. What stand will our convention take?

The Hopeful Outlook.

Fergus Falls Wheelock's Weekly: This part of Minnesota has never had a better start toward a great harvest than this spring. The weather has been made to order for seeding. Farmers are about a month ahead of their usual spring calendar. More grain than usual will go in, because there is more time to do it. The progressive ones are getting ready for corn. There will be more fodder crops than usual. The farmers' increasing dairy herds require them. The crop year of 1910 promises great things for Northern Minnesota.

The Difference.

Floodwood Broadaxe: When a Republican insurges, he goes over on the side of the people. When a Democrat insurges he goes over on the side of Special Privilege.

Pointed Paragraphs.

Chicago News: The increased cost of living doesn't worry the husky hobo.

The man who isn't capable of giving advice always has the habit.

A farmer's wife says that boys are almost as hard to raise as turkeys.

A woman will take a man's word for anything she is unable to disprove.

A man can get his understanding polished for a nickel, but not his intellect.

The average man would rather be blown up by his wife than by an automobile.

When we see some women on parade we wonder how they get themselves unharnessed at night.

One little moth that gets away worries a woman more than all her early love affairs put together.

The man who thanks you for calling his attention to an error he has made is a hypocrite, and he knows it.

There must be something wrong with the statement that the cucumber contains 95 per cent of water. That would leave only 5 per cent for colic.

Humanity in the Spring.

Philadelphia Press: Languor at this time of year is a constitutional symptom that is almost general, and, in many respectable households, is anticipated, even welcomed, with all the sanctity of traditional faith. Grandfather and grandmother used to feel that way—tired and weak—and always took a spring tonic, perhaps of birch or sassafras tea, or dittany, or swamp-root, or snake-root, or maybe of wine-of-iron, or something of even a livlier value, and mother and father keep it up, and so must the children. It might be well to keep them from school.

The fact is that an active, busy man hasn't the time these days for languid introspection or the leisurely survey of the state of his health, the tabulation of the various tense of his moods, the fluctuation of his pulse. With the change of seasons and temperature there is, of course, a corresponding alteration in the physical condition and needs of men and women. It is the lazy person who designates this condition as "spring fever." Its pathological importance is immense to the self-centered few who have nothing else to think about but themselves. They dignify their complaint into a calamity, whereas a simple and reasonable adjustment of diet and clothing to meet the change of weather suffices any healthy, normal man, woman or child.

Dean Swift was one of the most cynical and obnoxious advisers in the history of literature, but he adopted for us from the ancient Latin one memorable sentence full of spring wisdom: "The best doctors in the world are Dr. Diet, Dr. Quiet and Dr. Merryman."

The Deathless Life.

Victor Hugo: I feel in myself the future life. I am like a forest once cut down, the new shoots are stronger and livelier than ever. I am rising, I know, toward the sky. The sunshine is on my head. The earth gives me its generous sap, but heaven lights me with the reflection of unknown worlds. You say that the soul is nothing but the resultant of the bodily powers. Why, then, is my soul more luminous when my bodily powers begin to fail? Winter is on my head, but eternal spring is in my heart. I breathe at this hour the fragrance of the lilacs, the violets and the roses, as at 20 years. The nearer I approach the end the plainer I hear round me the immortal symphonies of the worlds which invite me. It is marvelous, yet simple. It is a fairy tale, and it is history. For a half century I have been writing my thoughts in prose and in verse; history, philosophy, drama, romance, tradition, satire, ode and song. I have tried all. But I feel I have not said the thousandth part of what is in me. When I go down to the grave I can say like many others: "I have finished my day's work." But I can not say: 'I have finished my life." My day's work will begin again the next morning. The tomb is not a blind alley; it is a thoroughfare. It closes on the twilight; it opens on the dawn.

The old man replied: "One is serving the Lord, and the other the Devil, and both are doing well."

WATCH THE COMPLEXION

Entirely Cleared After a Few Applications of Poslam.

Where it goes is evidently not a very serious matter as long as the little red spot, blemish or other skin disfigurement disappears as quickly as it does after a few applications of poslam, the new skin remedy. A peculiar feature of poslam is that it is naturally flesh-colored and contains no grease, so that when used on the face for the complexion, or for pimples, red noses, or any other inflammations, blemishes or discolorations, its presence cannot be detected. It can thus be applied in the daytime, the natural color of the skin being immediately restored and the actual healing and curing process accomplished in a few days. Poslam can be had of any pharmacist who sells pure drugs. The Lyceum Pharmacy and W. A. Abbett's in Duluth, Holmberg's in Superior, make a specialty of it. Fifty cents' worth will answer either for the troubles mentioned or in curing ordinary cases of eczema. Itching stops at once.

Any one who will write to the Emergency Laboratories, No. 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York, can secure by mail, free of charge, a supply sufficient to cure a small eczema surface or clear a complexion over night and remove pimples in twenty-four hours.

ALLEGED BOX-CAR THIEVES CAUGHT

Soo Employe and Two Boys Accused of Rifling Cars at Marine, Minn.

Stillwater, Minn., April 26—Edward Pohl of Minneapolis, who takes charge of traveling gangs of track repairers on the Soo line; William Miller, section boss on the same road at Marine, Ray and Walter Harrington, sons of the station agent at Marine, are in custody accused of being members of a gang that for months have carried on systematic thefts from box cars on the Soo line at Copas and Marine.

Detectives found good in the barn of Mrs. H. Olson, Marine, and a couple of wagon loads of goods in the barn of Thomas Reed, two miles from Marine.

Mr. Reed agreed to tell all he knew if not prosecuted. He hitched up a team of horses and hauled two wagon loads to the station at Marine. The goods stolen included building materials, such as sash and doors, 200 feet of flooring, several barrels of flour, cases of shoes, a cooking range and two Winchester rifles.

This is but a part of the great amount missed from cars.

It is said the stolen goods were "fenced" in the Twin Cities.

Others are implicated and additional arrests are expected.

YOUTH SWORE IN VOTE.

Further Sensational Development in Laurium Illegal Voting Case.

Laurium, Mich., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—A new development in the illegal voting case here has just come to light and the officials of the village are continually uncovering new evidence against the alleged violators of the law, it is said. It has been ascertained, it is claimed, that one of the boys under 21 years of age charged with illegal voting, neglected to register and had his vote sworn in.

COMET NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR FREAKISH WEATHER.

Lake Geneva, Wis., April 26.—The blizzard was not caused by Halley's comet, according to Prof. E. B. Frost of Yerkes observatory.

Prof. Frost's voice showed well-founded indignation when it was suggested to him that some fearful people had attributed the black storm to the influence of the comet.

"It will have absolutely no effect on the weather," he said. "Except for a phosphorescence in the sky, it will not change conditions in the least. And that phosphorescence cannot last long."

CURE YOUR KIDNEYS.

Do Not Endanger Life When a Duluth Citizen Shows You the Cure.

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinary disorders, lameness, headaches, languor, why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney diseases, cure yourself now, before diabetes, dropsy or Bright's disease sets in. Read this Duluth testimony:

Thomas G. Thompson, 624 West Second St., Duluth, Minn., says: "I was in poor health for several months and suffered a great deal from pains in the small of my back. I had often heard Doan's Kidney Pills recommended as a cure for such trouble and believing that my kidneys were disordered, I decided to try this remedy. After using one box, my health improved in every way and since then I have had no need of a kidney remedy. As I have found that Doan's Kidney Pills live up to the claims made for them, I do not hesitate to give them my endorsement."

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

RED RIVER LAND LIKED

Farmers of Middle West See Great Possibilities in Northwestern Minnesota.

Large Land Deals in Vicinity of Warren Have Recently Been Closed.

Crookston, Minn., April 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—John D. Henry, a land dealer, has returned to Hallock after an extended trip through Iowa, Illinois and Indiana, where he has been interesting a large number of land buyers in Kittson county and other Northern Minnesota lands.

Mr. Henry stated, while here, that next summer will witness the heaviest land movement experienced since the 1902 and 1903 boom, and that records for sales by all the leading land companies thus far this year exceed all past records for the same season of the year. He believes that the great development congress held in St. Paul was the greatest advertisement Minnesota ever received, and that at every place he visited he heard echoes of it and that no trouble is experienced in getting people to come to Minnesota from among the desirable class of substantial farmers who bring wealth to the state and who are equipped to make the best kind of progressive farmers. He wants to see the next session of the state legislature provide an appropriation of not less than $100,000 placed at the disposal of George Welch of the state immigration bureau.

The development convention at Bemidji is most heartily endorsed by Mr. Henry and T. M. George, treasurer of the same land company of Hallock, and looks forward to the development convention here, June 1, 2 and 3, to be of even greater importance.

Some Recent Big Deals.

His company has recently sold the big Culbertson farm, northeast of Stephen, to an Illinois company which is disposing of it in small tracts, 6,600 acres and the 4,104 acre Marsh farm, west of Warren is being disposed of in the same way, some of it in as small as eighty-acre tracts, which will be devoted to intensified farming.

Crookston land men tell the same story of boom in lands. The company in which Senator S. D. Works of Mankato is interested, is this year in placing renters on every farm his company owns, or hiring capable men to run them. Practically all the land that has been held by the large companies for speculation is being worked this year, or at least the portion of the farms they hold which have ever been cultivated in the past.

Others state that the farmers from the Middle Western states are turning to the Red river valley of their own accord owing to the opportunities offered by the seeker after good, but comparatively cheap lands, and that far less talk of Canada is being heard, they being certain that the tide is setting the other way.

TALK MUCH; DO LITTLE

Aldermen Have Long Session Disposing of Routine Matters.

Two Ordinances Are Advanced and Turned Down By Council.

WHAT THE COUNCIL DID.

Directed operation of city rock crusher.
Confirmed contract to Austin-Western company for two street sprinklers.
Turned down substitute second-hand dealers ordinance.
Raised pay of milk inspector from $80 to $125 a month and also provided him with a horse.
Killed ordinance requiring automobiles to sound three blasts or three bells before turning a corner.
Transacted some other small routine business.

The city council spent much time over small routine matters, listened to much discussion over rather unimportant details and transacted comparatively little business in a long session at the city hall last night.

Alderman Hector called attention to the fact that the city paid $1,103 for crushed rock from private parties last year while one of the city crushers laid idle. He declared that this was poor business and upon his restlution the council passed a resolution calling for the installation and operation of the crusher belonging to the city.

Rollo N. Chaffee, attorney for the smaller second-hand dealers of the city, spoke at length upon a substitute ordinance, reducing the license fee of his clients from $25 to $5 a year. The same substitute brought junk dealers into the fold, as heretofore they have been exempt. He claimed that the revenue would be about the same by making these men pay for their privileges, but the aldermen couldn't see it that way and turned down the ordinance. The original was then set back to the committee for reconsideration.

C. F. Rogers, special representative of the Studebaker Bros. Manufacturing company of South Bend, Ind., appeared before the city fathers to protest against the treatment he had received from the board of pubic works. He alleged that the board had refused to accompany him to a demonstration of the sprinkler made by his company and the Austin-Western firm. His bid was $285 per sprinkler and that of his competitor $281 per sprinkler, a difference of $4. He stated that his wagon was worth $1 more than that of the Austin-Western concern, but that the board refused to take into consideration the differences in quality, looking at only the small difference in price. The board members replied that they had used both wagons in Duluth and found the difference, at least from a practical standpoint, did not exist. C. L. Goodell, representing the Austin-Western company, defended the merits of the sprinklers manufactured by his people. The council decided to support the board of public works and confirmed the contract awarded to the Austin-Western company for two sprinklers.

The old ordinance of Alderman McKnight, requiring all automobiles to sound a bell or whistle three times before turning a corner, was voted out of existence. The aldermen did not believe that it would have any salutary effects. They claimed that there are now too many regulations and that the more that are passed the more the automobile owners will violate. Alderman Wharton commended the judge of the municipal court who came out with the assertion that the horns should be removed, thus placing the driver on his own responsibility.

A resolution was passed asking the city attorney for an opinion as to whether or not the ordinances now in force requiring the aisles of theaters to be kept clear during the performance applies to other meeting places as well, particularly the moving picture shows.

The salary of the milk inspector was raised from $80 to $125 per month. The city will also furnish him with a horse. The reason for the very unusual raise is that he will test the cows of the city for tuberculosis. In the past it is said that this has been done by a veterinary surgeon at a cost of several hundred dollars.

J. S. Pardee of the Producers' Co-Operative Market association sent a communication speaking of the desirability of building a warehouse and other buildings on the city lots at West Duluth. He stated that the warehouse would be supplied with a railroad track. The estimated cost is $2,812 built of brick, and $2,607 built of cement blocks. The plans also include a platform with an extended roof for unfavorable weather.

Mrs. Mary B. Edmondson, formerly Miss E. May Bondy, sent in her claim of $104.15 for services in the municipal court from March 1 to May 15, 1895. The claim has been coming in regularly for several years, having grown from a small amount to a fair-sized sum because of the interest.

Anna M. Henrickson filed a notice of a claim for damages of $490 sustained on Ramsey street between Fifty-eighth and Fifty-ninth avenues because of a defective sidewalk. She alleges that she sustained a broken finger as well as other injuries.

The city attorney was asked to decide whether or not the street railway company can be forced to pay the cost of reducing East Fourth street between Twenty-third and Twenty-seventh avenues to grade. The property owners allege that it will be necessary to remove 9,750 cubic yards of dirt because the company elevated its tracks and believe that the company should bear this part of the cost if the street is paved.

A petition was received for the laying of a sanitary sewer in Gladstone street between Fortieth and Forty-fifth avenues east.

E. A. Nelson was granted a license to operate a moving-picture show at 2107 West Superior street.

The city engineer turned in an estimate of $2,786.96 for paving Greysolon road between Nineteenth and Twentieth avenues with crushed rock macadam. With the combined cement curb and gutter the cost is figured at $3,374.36.

Chief Randall submitted a request for an automobile for the fire department, accompanied by letters from many large cities where the efficiency of the department has been increased by their use.

The engineer was asked to prepare an estimate for grading and paving West Sixth street between Fifth and Eighth avenues to a width of thirty feet.

The Wisconsin Central was given permission to replace West Michigan street, between Eighth and Twelfth avenues, with sandstone blocks instead of tar macadam, with which it was improved before the company ruined the roadway.

The board of public works was directed to repave the Garfield avenue viaduct north of Michigan street at a cost of $2,000. The rest is being repaired by the Northern Pacific.

The sealer of weights and measures and the city attorney were requested to formulate reports of what they consider the duties of the former. The council appropriated $20 for the sealer to visit St. Paul and Minneapolis to familiarize himself with the offices as conducted in those cities.

• • •

A resolution was passed authorizing the repair and improvement of the office of the board of public works.

DOING THEIR OWN HOUSEWORK

Duluth Women Are Having a Hard Time to Get Maids.

Maids are very scarce.

Many a Duluth housewife is these days doing her own work about the home and in leisure moments making frantic efforts to secure help.

All the employment offices have orders stacked up and there is no immediate relief promised. Not only in Duluth is this the case, but also in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The employment agents lay the shortage to the farm. With the coming of spring comes the hard work upon the farm and the girls are very useful. Many of those who work in and about Duluth were raised on farms close to the city. In the winter they are not needed at home for there is not much work to be done. In the spring, summer and fall they are called back, however, and hence the scarcity.

At the state free employment office there are more than 150 orders for girls. The list is being added to each day. Large wages are offered freely but there are but few who respond.

IS DEFENDED BY SHERMAN

Tariff Law Is Extolled and Held Up as Issue in Coming Campaign.

Carnegie Lauds Taft and Also Praises the Payne Tariff Bill.

St. Louis, Mo., April 26.—Predicting that the tariff in general and the Payne law in particular is sure to be the principal issue of the coming campaign, Vice president James S. Sherman in a speech here last night said it was his duty as a protectionist to defend the policy. The speech was delivered before the Citizens' Industrial association. He said the policy of protection is growing and that it is to be a national rather than a political one. The forecast was made that not within the life span of any present living American will the policy be abandoned.

"I am one of those old-fashioned protectionists, who believe in American wages and American standard of living," the vice president said, "and that the way to maintain these is by doing our own work. Such faith, however, does not preclude the occasional revision of our tariff, and the changing of duties either up or down, to meet changed conditions in our industrial and commercial transactions.

"But my faith does include the judgment that such changes should be made by the friends, and not by the enemies, of protection.

Claims Pledge Was Kept.

"This was our creed and our promise to the people in the last campaign, and I believe we can claim that the faith was kept, the pledge fulfilled, and that the tariff was revised substantially and successfully.

"No previous tariff law was more carefully prepared or more exhaustively considered than the last which went into effect last August. It was not satisfactory to all. No tariff law ever was or ever will be, but it was the best law we could get and its basic principle is protection.

"It has now been in operation over nine months and we can study the results and determine whether it is a successful measure.

"First, from a revenue standpoint, no question of its success exists. During the fiscal year to date, our receipts have been over $50,000,000 more than during the corresponding months of last year. A year ago now our deficit was $70,000,000; now it is only about $15,000,000, and it seems quite safe to assume that that deficit will be very small, if not entirely wiped out, by the end of the fiscal year.

"It is true that expenditures are a little less than last year, but the gain to the treasury is largely due to the new tariff.

In Industrial Affairs.

"I believe it will not be questioned that the return to a full volume of employment has been most pronounced. All our artisans and mechanics are busy and, with few exceptions, all our workingmen are well employed. And not only on full time, but at the highest wages in our history.

"One of the reasons of the decrease in exports of foodstuffs is because the farmers can market almost their entire output at home and at the highest prices ever received by them.

"The universal demand is such that high prices will continue. Some say the duties will be too high; some want a change; and some want it increased if we are to do our work and maintain our present volume of employment and high standard of wages and living."

Carnegie Praises Taft.

Washington, April 26.—Andrew Carnegie, addressing the members and guests of the National Press club last night, declared President Taft was one of the greatest presidents this country has had and that for his efforts of world peace the world would grant him a high place in history; commended the Payne-Aldrich tariff law as the best tariff law ever enacted; extolled the progress and spirit of the West, from which section he had just returned after an extended tour, and made a vigorous plea for universal peace.

In the West, said the speaker, he had found a great deal of trouble over the tariff, mostly confined to a few states, he believed.

"The present tariff law is the greatest for all people that I have ever known," he continued. "The protective feature of the new tariff is a secondary consideration—the revenue-raising feature is the most important," he said. "The thing to do in taxation is to tax those who can afford to pay for it. Put the tax on the luxuries that are consumed by the rich, but never tax the laboring people who cannot afford to pay."

HOG EXPERT TELLS WHY PRICES GO UP

South Dakotan Gives Testimony Before Committee of the Senate.

Washington, April 26.—Why pork chops and pork roasts cost more now than two, three and four years ago, was the subject of expert testimony given in the senate food probe yesterday by Peter W. Peterson of Cloy county, S. D.

Mr. Peterson makes a specialty of raising hogs. He said he sold porkers at prices ranging from $4.50 per 100 pounds in 1900 to $6.95 in 1909. The price then jumped to $9.30 as the average from Jan. 1 to this week.

Corn, the product on which hogs chiefly are fattened, averaged 58¾ cents a bushel in 1908, and 56½ cents in 1909, and 33 to 40 cents several years ago.

Pork High and Corn Low.

"Now," said Mr. Peterson, "pork is high because there are not enough hogs to supply the demand. Corn is low because there are not enough hogs to meet the supply."

Mr. Peterson showed that the average wage paid to farm hands had almost doubled in ten years; that the value of grain-producing farm lands had actually doubled in his section; that the cost of farm implements had increased 25 per cent; that clothing costs the farmer from 25 to 50 per cent more; and that everything else he had to buy showed corresponding increases; yet, he said, he was making good profits and did not feel that the panic of 1907 had affected him.

CONVICTS KILLED IN TRYING TO ESCAPE.

Canyon City, Colo., April 26.—Two convicts were instantly killed and three others were fatally wounded while attempting to escape from the state penitentiary here last night. The dead are John Bradley; Andrew Johnson. The wounded: Harry Brohy; John Miller and W. J. Williams.

The battle took place in the corridor of the cell house.

GREAT MEN AND BEER BREWING

WHENEVER this great nation needed the assistance and personal services of strong, patriotic men to further the cause of liberty and humanity or to repulse invasions and oppressions, the brewers and their friends were among the first to respond.

History tells us that many of the best men of their time were connected with the business, such as Wm. Penn, who caused the erection of the first brewery in Pennsylvania, or Samuel Adams, the acknowledged father of the Revolution, who managed his father's brewery at Boston, or Patrick Henry, the jovial host of Williamsburg, Va., who made the famous speech: "Give me liberty or give me death." And the immortal Lincoln, when accused by his rival, the great Douglas, in one of their famous debates, of being engaged in the traffic, turned the tables by saying: "The difference between Douglas and me was that I was doing the selling and he was doing the drinking."

Surely the brewers and their friends have always been foremost in promoting public welfare, and according to Andrew D. White, the great statesman, they have done more for real temperance than their fanatic opponents can ever do.

LATEST SPORTING NEWS OF THE DAY

FAST EIGHT FOR DULUTH

Every Indication Points to the Success of Coach Peyton's Crew.

Old Men Are Back and New Candidates Show Promise.

Each evening that the junior eight candidates are out, adds more brilliance to the struggling hope that the present season may witness a winning eight for the Duluth Boat club.

There is an abundance of excellent material on hand, and if Duluth does not win the present season, it will be surely because of some defect in local conditions. The time and opportunity are at hand.

In addition to the old men, Forgette, Hector, Quimby, Thompson and Liggett, and the possibility that Crawford will be in the boat some time in June, there are a large number of other candidates who are going to make some of the old men go to hold their jobs.

Roy Kent, a strapping big fellow, is rowing better the present season than he showed any promise of last year. He has filled out and has grown stronger. He is going out for a place in the boat in earnest, and will put up a hard fight for a regular position.

Big Ver Wiebe, the Harvard football man, is one of the finest built men at the Head of the Lakes. The only question in his case, is whether he can learn the ground work of rowing in one season. He is strong and enduring and quick for a big man. He is thoroughly in earnest, too, and is learning very rapidly.

Nelson is another big and powerful man. He has been rowing with the Naval reserve and is in good condition. If he can learn the rhythm of the shell stroke, he will make a very likely man for a seat in the eight.

Slack, Safford, Killorin, Jean Forgette and a lot of other candidates are out for the eight. Last night there were more than enough men for two eights, and last night was one of the coldest nights of the season.

Last night the first real grind of the season began. Coach Peyton instructed the men that from now on the real training will begin.

Smoking and the little luxuries of life will be tabooed. Real work and lots of it will be the order of the day, or of the evening, just as you will.

Coach Peyton, assisted by "Bill" L'Estrange, is out in the launch each evening. The men are being put over the course and last night the men came in from the mile and a half in one stretch.

The men are enthusiastic, for it really looks like a Duluth year. The candidates realize that a winning eight means real work and plenty of personal sacrifice. They seem willing to do this.

Already Peyton is placing emphasis on the quick catch and fast shoot, something that the junior eight was weak in last season. Just what modifications will be made in the stroke, have not been made manifest as yet.

JEFF TAKES DIP IN THE OCEAN

Fighter Forsakes Training Schedule on Advice of Joe Choynski.

Ben Lomond, Cal., April 26.—Following the suggestion of Joe Choynski, the new physical director at Camp Rowan-Cenna, Jim Jeffries forsook the training schedule yesterday, and if he can be prevailed upon to accept the advice of his handlers, it will be several days before the gymnasium and the handball court see him again.

The fighter has been annoyed during the last few days by a skin eruption on his back, a condition diagnosed by Choynski as a serious disorder of the blood. It is the trainer's opinion that Jeffries has been working too hard since he went into training, and from now on the work will be regulated with greater system.

Accompanied by Sam Berger, his manager, Farmer Burns and a party of friends, Jeffries took an automobile trip to Santa Cruz yesterday afternoon, where the former champion had a dip in the surf and enjoyed a hot salt water tub bath. A swift trip from the beach brought the party back to Ben Lomond in time for the evening meal, at which Jeffries displayed an appetite set on edge by the sea breeze.

Berger and Jeffries have as yet had no formal talk over the selection of a referee, although the date for the selection of the man who is to officiate at Emeryville on the Fourth of July, is only a little more than a week distant. Whatever views they may hold as to whom the referee should be, are not being disclosed.

BREWER-ENGLISH BOUT DECLARED A DRAW.

Kansas City, Mo., April 26.—Harry Brewer of Kansas City and Clarence English of Omaha, fought ten rounds to a draw at 145 pounds here last night.

The contest was the fastest held here this year. English pushed his man from the start. Brewer, however, landed the most blows. There was not a knockdown during the fight.

Tommy Mowatt, the Chicago fighting conductor, lost a 10-round decision to Percy Matthews of Denver.

Willie Gibbs of Philadelphia and Tommy Gary of Chicago, lightweights, will fight fifteen rounds here, May 9.

AS SEEN FROM THE SIDE LINES

(BY BRUCE.)

Why Wolgast Won.

One man at the fight pictures yesterday kept repeating to his two companions: "See, Nelson is forcing the fight all the way; he has the better of it and he is fighting that Wolgast all around the ring."

Part of the statement of the gentleman in question is true. But he failed to see the plan of the Michigan fighter. Like many persons, unfamiliar with a subject, he jumped at the most obvious and patent conclusion.

Nelson did force the fighting, right from the very start. That is the only way he knows how to fight. In the past this style has won for him. When he met Wolgast he was up against a fighter who combined the ability of a slugger with the skill of a fighter. The combination proved the undoing of the pride of Hedgewisch.

If you observed closely and intently, with an eye to those little things that happen so quickly that it is very difficult to follow their course, you would have seen that many of the blows let fly by the Dane failed to find effective lodgment on any vital spot of the Wolgast anatomy.

You must have also noticed that Nelson struck three or four blows to one struck by Wolgast, and yet it is very probable that Wolgast hit Nelson more times than Nelson hit Wolgast. Now you can gather some idea of the reason Wolgast won.

In the past the tremendous vitality of the Dane allowed him to go on and on, fighting like a perpetual motion machine. He never husbanded his strength and he never thought of stalling. His superhuman powers of endurance enabled him to fight in this crude way.

Wolgast evidently found the way to victory. He covered when the storm was breaking hardest and fought back with deadly effect when the Dane let up for the least moment. His blows were clean and seemed to have power behind them. On the other hand, many of the blows launched by the Battler seemed to lack force.

All through the fight—the battle that was fought out on the screen yesterday—it was apparent that Nelson was not the Nelson of old.

The brute instinct was there; he fought with the old time stubbornness; yet that slashing, dashing method of tearing and ripping seemed somewhat reduced. In the pictured before the fight, Nelson's face looked tired and seemed to have lost some of the vitality.

Wolgast showed wonderful recuperative powers. He showed generalship far surpassing that of Nelson. He avoided the most vicious blows of the Battler and then came in fast with vitality killing blows.

Wolgast is fast and tough. He possessed sufficient endurance to go the route with the Dane, has more speed than Nelson, and his blows were cleaner and more effective.

And so, thinking it out along these lines, it does not seem so very difficult to see why Wolgast was returned the winner. He is a clever staller and a wonderful fighter in a rally. In sparring he nearly outfought Nelson, and for the rest—well, he was content to permit the Dane to wear himself out on ineffective hitting.

That is about the best reason why the Wolgast party won.

Jake Beckley Gone.

It sounds like the name of a play—"The Passing of the Third Floor Back"—this going of Jake Beckley.

When Noah hit the land, after that long and somewhat tedious cruise in the good old ark, of the Spiritual Transit company, i.e. being a wise and farseeing old patriarch, opined that his followers would have some pessimistic thoughts if he could not devise some light and harmless amusement to take their thoughts away from homes under water.

And so it was that the ancient game of baseball was thought out. Jake Beckley was chosen by Noah as captain of the more noisy members of the Ark team.

They played with stones and balls carved out of wood, which same accounts for the gnarled fingers of the veteran. Jake has kept right on playing through the years. He has never told his age, even to his closest friends, but it is safe that he was 19 at the time the ark set sail.

Since securing some hazy ideas of the great game of baseball from Noah's Nowhereres, Jake forced his way into more regular baseball circles. He played with Cincinnati, a city ruled over by Boss Cox and Garry Hermann, gentlemen in no wise resembling Noah.

Jake has also worn the spangles for St. Louis. His last place of playing was with Kansas City. But the other day Noah's protege was released, which same means that the game will lose a man who has been with it since the dawn of ages.

Before Sir Walter Raleigh discovered tobacco Jake was never considered a very good player. But with the introduction of the bag of Peerless into the game, Jake became one of the most feared batters in the big league. The nerve narcotic was the making of Jake.

He has gone and he will be missed around the American association circuit. Jake's voice would make the combined offerings of a boiler factory seem like the sylvan quiet that hovers over the swain and the sweet little thing, about 8:15, when he has popped the question and the entire world looks on in hushed expectancy.

He was a great character, was Jake, and his going marks the serious inroads of old Father Time.

Brawn or Brains.

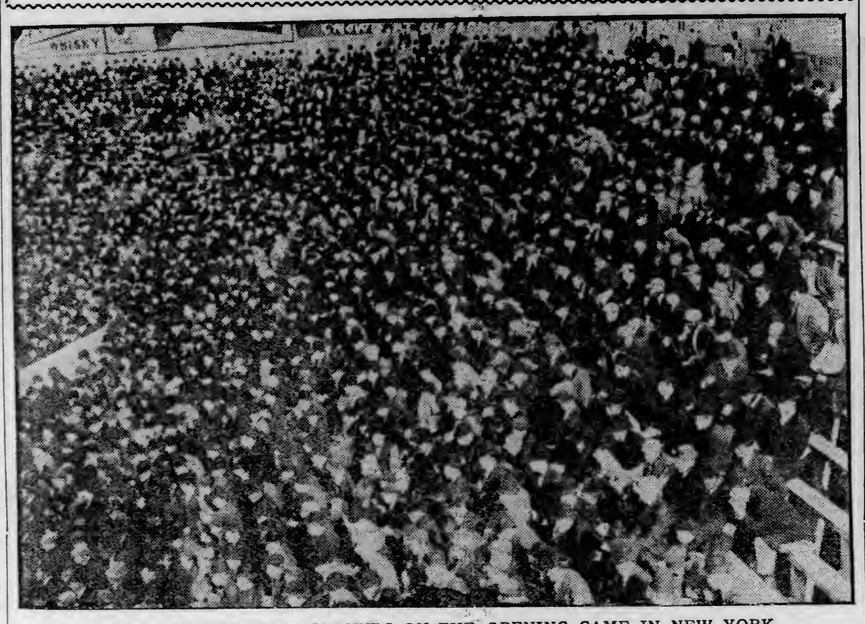
In this age of commercial strife, where money is the highest goal of many men, one is made to pause and wonder, when even reading such books as the "Simple Life" and some of the works of Henry James, where the mental and physical education is the most advisable.

In some manner this argument is brought up almost every day. The other day in Omaha, William Jennings Bryan was due to arrive. He finally arrived and three newspaper men met him at the train.

Jack Johnson, a large and foolish negro, was also due to arrive in Omaha that day. He did. As many people as could leave their work, crowded the depot to see the black and flat features of the dinge.

Mr. Bryan is a man with a large amount of brains. He is one of the great national characters of the country. He has done much that will live after he passes from this earth.

Jack Johnson is a racial accident. Physically, he is a man in 10,000. He was born of the lowest class of Texas negroes. His polish, as some do speak, is of the most superficial depth, picked up as a parrot will pick up words and phrases. His brains would rattle in a little lady's thimble.



William Jennings Bryan, scholar, statesman, national leader of thought, is met by three men upon reaching the metropolis of his native state; Jack Johnson, a colored man, ignorant, uncouth, leading a life that is disgusting to people with the ordinary moral sense, is lionized.

Humor is one of the most saving characteristics of this life.

Bedell and Carey Draw.

Troy, N. Y., April 26.—Joe Bedell of New York and Tom Carey of Philadelphia fought ten rounds to a draw before the Spindle Athletic club at Cohoes last night. The bout was fairly even.

HOW THE GOTHAM FANS TURN OUT TO WITNESS THE BIG LEAGUE BALL GAMES

CROWD AT THE POLO GROUNDS ON THE OPENING GAME IN NEW YORK.

The seating capacity of the Polo grounds has been greatly increased since last season. A new grand stand has been erected back of third base. It is estimated that crowds of 40,000 will not be infrequent at some of the games this year.

JOHNNY CONLON BADLY BEATEN

Frankie Burns Outboxes Bantam Champion in No-Decision Bout.

New York, N. Y., April 26.—Johnny Coulon, the bantam champion got a bad beating last night at the hands of Frankie Burns of Jersey City in a 10-round no-decision bout at the Marathon A. C., Brooklyn. The local youngster out-boxed, out-generaled and outpunched the Chicago fighter from the first to the final round, ring generalship on the part of Couton saved him from a knockout.

"Tommy" Houck, a bantam of Philadelphia easily beat "Young" Goldman of this city in a fast and clever 10-round bout at the Olympic A. C.

KUEHNOW IS AFTER PLAYERS

Secretary Writes That He Hopes to Secure Catcher and Infielder.

In a letter to the sporting editor of the Evening Herald, A. W. Kuehnow states that he has almost completed arrangements for the securing of the services of a new first baseman and catcher. The guardian of the initial sack formerly played with a Western college and is a dark, according to all reports. The catcher will come, if he is secured, from the Madison team of the Wisconsin-Illinois league.

Mr. Kuehnow writes that he expects to close negotiations with these players today. The Duluth magnate is expected home tomorrow, when some more definite information will be learned of the squad.

It is known that Kuehnow is satisfied with the outfield and three positions of the infield. The hurling staff is very strong. What is needed most is a catcher and first baseman. These players are being sought by Kuehnow.

PRIZES ARE OFFERED.

Kelley and Northern Hardware Companies to Give Cups for Motor Boats

Several of the local firms have offered to donate prizes for the open events that are to be held by the motor boat department of the Duluth Boat club the present summer. The Kelley Hardware company and the Northern Hardware company have offered to present cups for the various events. J. E. Simmon's, designer of the boats, will donate a cup to be known as the Simmon's cup, which will be contested for annually.

The first of the new type boats is expected here the first of next week. The boats have been tested at Lake Geneva and have shown that they are up to all expectations.

SAFFORD LOSES FIRST BLOCK TO KEOGH.

Rochester, N. Y., April 26.—In the first block of their 600-ball world's pool championship here last night, Jerome Keogh, the title holder, of Rochester, defeated Clarence Safford of Chicago, 214 to 198.

In the twentieth frame the challenger had a lead of 64 balls. In the closing innings Keogh made 104 balls to Safford's 24.

JOHNSON BOXES FOUR ROUNDS AT SALT LAKE.

Salt Lake City, Utah, April 26.—Jack Johnson, the champion heavyweight, sparred four exhibition rounds here last night. The scales showed he weighed 224 pounds.

"I have not done a lick of training yet," said the champion in a speech to the audience. "I will begin the first week in May, when I open my quarters at Seal Rocks, Ocean Beach."

Johnson and party will resume their journey west tonight.

MINNY LEAGUE NOTES

Bad weather has played the very hob, as one old lady once said, with both the teams of Duluth and Superior. The Superior team has run into a bunch of weather that would make some of the atmospheric conditions pictured by the energetic Dr. Cook seem like some of that Wabash River, Ind., harvest moon stuff.

But one game in nine days has been played by the Superior team, and heaven knows the team needs the practice. The O'Dea band left Keokuk, Iowa, without playing a game. The hotels are fairly good there, and some of the boys know the smear game fairly well; otherwise life in Keokuk would have been intolerable.

Today the team is at Ottumwa, where, if the weather permits, the boys will shelve the cards and unpack their bats. The change necessary to finance the training trip has been conspicuous by its absence. Unless some games with goodly gates are played before the return of the team, money will have been dropped along the Iowa way, or the Great Drab Way.

The only news of the players is that of the progress at smear. Vogt is leading the league, also the pinochle league. He cleared the bases by melding 100 aces. O'Dea and the other boys may be expected home in the near future. Even without little Otto Koepping they will be welcomed.

It is only fair to ask the "Kid" of the Superior Telegram if he thinks that Teddy Roosevelt would for a moment think of "doing sports" on "this sheet."

Weather, mean and perverse of character, has hit the beautiful precincts of Winona. The game scheduled for Sunday with the Dubuque Olympics had to be called off. series of games is scheduled with Regina of the Western Canad league. Games will be played at Winona Wednesday, Thursday, Sunday and Monday. The Cuban Stars will follow the Regina team to Winona.

Ray Saveland is in Winona, or was there yesterday, holding a heart-to-heart talk with Uncle Joe Killian. Saveland wants to secure his release from the Winona club, in order that he may play with some higher class club.

The controversy over Saveland has approached the Koepping quarrel in ardor and endurance. Saveland claims he is entitled to an oportunity of going higher up, of quite in the manner of the Eye, however, and Killian, hard-hearted as he is, insists that little Ray play with Winona.

Ray is a workman in the Pabst pant at Milwaukee. Under the circumstances can you blame him for threatening to quit baseball, unless a higher salary is paid him? That is the piece de resistence he holds over the grizzled and hard head of Killian. With a job in a brewery, Saveland may really be serious in his threat to quit the game. Ah me.

Harry Perry, an outfielder, secured from Minneapolis, has reported and will be with the team today. Harry Crangle, a star in the Winona garden last season, has also reported. Pitcher Frank Baillies is another of the veterans to report.

Rochester has asked that the team representing that city be called by some other name than the "Surgeons." The name was simply a compliment, as it was imagined that the "Surgeons" might administer to the wounds of some of the other teams of the circuits. However, if the Rochester fans lack confidence, the name will be dropped.

Naseth, an amateur pitcher who made a great record with a Rochester nine last season, and who has been given a tryout with the Minneapolis American Association team, has been returned to Jack Corrigan. The return of the youngster will strengthen the Rochester hurling hill recruits and the news will be gladly received around the circuit.

Workouts of the Rochester Red Cross baseball brigade will start the present week at Faribault. With confidence in their "chists," the brave Corriganites will sally forth to the first muscle-teasing tests of gentle spring

Work on repairing the grand stand at Red Wing has started. The damage will be repaired in a few days. The Red Wing team will report at the park and work out until the opening of the season.

Malloy has seven pitchers under contract and is reporting to be still signing hurlers. He also has several catchers under pen and ink.

La Crosse has some hope of getting Schardt back from Milwaukee. The boy has not done much work for McCloskey as yet, but there is a feeling that he may be returned for more seasoning. The return of Schardt would be almost as important as the return from Elba, or coming down to more moden historical parallels, the return from Africa.

Schadt is a strong pitcher, winning consistently for La Crosse last season. He would strengthen the Outcasts.

Both Superior and Duluth will return home shortly after the first of May. The squad of both teams will be materially reduced by that time. The inter-city series between the two teams will start within a week or ten days.

WHO PLAYED THE GOAT?

Wrestling Fiasco in Copper Country Causes Much Comment.

Believed Person Consented to Frame Up to Get Match.

Who was to get stung?

You will have to go and ask Dr. Rounavaara.

All of which reference is to the Person-Lehto wrestling scandal.

This is how it looks to the Duluth wiseacres—

Person had to tell the wily manager of the Finn that he would permit the "great" Karl Lehto to win, in order that he might get the match.

In the dressing room of the Lyceum theater, a week ago last Thursday night, Person told a Herald reporter that he believed he could "beat the big dub," and that he was going to try his very best to bring about the downfall of the pride of the Copper country.

With that in his mind, he worked hard at the Duluth Athletic club. He trained harder than he has tarined for any match the present winter. He left for Calumet with the sincere belief that he would beat the Finn.

In his matches here Person had convinced the followers of wrestling that he was thoroughly honest. He is a married man and needs all the money he can make. It is believed in Duluth that, realizing that there would be a large piece of money in the match, he agreed to the terms of the wily Rounavaara, simply that he might get on.

There is little doubt here that Person was going to try to beat the Finn, who in many quarters, let it be said, has for some time been considered a mat joke, spelled with a large "J."

It is pretty evident on the face of things, that when "Doc" Rounavaara saw the amount of money being wagered on Person, he sighted a Senegambian in the woodpile. He believed that Person was out to defeat his meal ticket.

Then he called off the match.

It must be said that the Finnish manager showed very little brains in taking the step he did. The same can be said for Person, in stating that he had agreed to lie down.

Person had the Finn's backers in a trap and when the match was called off, he would have only had to keep still and his silence would have proved Lehto a coward and forced him into another match.

Rounavaara has succeeded in killing the wrestling game. It has always been thus.

Person, too, must come in for his share of blame, though, giving his due credit, it must be said that he was always willing to beat the overrated Copper country wonder in any old kind of a match.

He simply tried to get an honest match, and failing in this, used dishonest means towards an honest end. The obsequies of wrestling will be celebrated in the Copper country today. Services at 2:30 at the home of "Doc" Rounavaara.

BROWNS HUMBLE TIGERS IN TWELFTH.

St. Louis Mo., April 26.—A hit batsman, Bush's error, a passed ball and a sacrifice fly gave St. Louis the winning run over Detroit in the twelfth inning yesterday. The game was played on a muddy field at a temperature near freezing and both teams played a ragged game, marked by heavy hitting and many miscues. A hot liner from Hartsell's bat in the ninth broke Jones' nose and he was carried from the field, Crawford going to first base in his place and D. Jones to center.

HIGHLANDERS WIN IN FIRST INNING.

Washington, April 26.—New York bunched hits with Washington's errors in the first inning and won out yesterday by the score of 5 to 2. Warhop was hit hard in the third inning and was replaced by Quinn, who was very effective. Sensational plays were made by Cree, La Porte and Elberfeld.

NAPS ARE BLANKED BY SMITH'S PITCHING.

DARKNESS ENDS GAME WITH SCORE A TIE.

Philadelphia, April 26.—Boston and Philadelphia played a tie game of nine innings yesterday, which was stopped by the darkness, the score being 5 to 5. The start of play was delayed forty-five minutes by rain, and it rained almost continuously from the second inning on, but Umpire Rigler kept the teams in action, except during the seventh inning, when play was suspended for twenty minutes. The game was played in mud, and was largely a farce. Score: R. H. E.

GIANTS WIN FAST FIELDING CONTEST.

New York, April 26.—In a game game marked by exceptionally brilliant fielding, the New York Nationals yesterday defeated Brooklyn, 3 to 1. In the sixth inning, Bridwell started a triple play by stopping Hummel's grounder and throwing it to Doyle for a force-out of Wheeler. Doyle's throw to Merkle caught Hummel at first, and Burch, who had over-run third, was nipped at the plate. There also were four double plays in the game. Rucker was found for six hits and three runs in the last two innings. Brooklyn's tally was due to a base on balls and Burch's triple. Score: R. H. E.

CARDINALS WIN ON PITCHERS' WILDNESS.

Cincinnati, Ohio, April 26.—Failure of Cincinnati pitchers to locate the plate in the early innings was largely responsible for a St. Louis victory yesterday. Backman performed well, until the sixth, when the locals succeeded in getting a series of hits, coupled with bases on balls. Score. R. H. E.

A press dispatch from South Bend, Ind., states that Darby O'Brien has purchased Pitcher Brynes from South Bend team of the Central league. The pitcher will become the property of the local club today.

Byrnes was not needed with South Bend, because of the presence of several veterans on the South Bend staff.

If the weather conditions are favorable South Bend and the Sox will battle today. The O'Brienites will probably be off for Chicago at the end of the present week.

"ALWAYS SURPRISED WHEN I COME HERE," SAYS HILL

Railroad Magnates Say Crops Have Not Been Seriously Damaged.

James J. Hill, chairman of the board of directors of the Great Northern Railway company; Charles Steel and board of directors of the Great Northern; Louis Hill, president of the Great Northern; Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific Railway company; and Attorney R. Jackson, counsel for the Great Northern, were in Duluth for a short time yesterday afternoon.

The special carrying James J. Hill and his party pulled into the union depot shortly after 5 o'clock. The party was met at the depot by W. A. McGonagle, president and general manager of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad.

The members of the party were taken for a short ride over the city. They came back to their special in a short while and left for the iron range, where the properties of the Great Northern will be inspected by the officials.

"I know of nothing new," said James J. Hill to The Herald. "I am surprised every time I come to Duluth. I have said that you are going to have a great city here, and every time I come here this prediction is strengthened.

"Our road is in excellent shape at the present time. I look for a big year in the railroad business. I think the country is prosperous, and will be more prosperous. I think we are going to have a good crop, as the crop was not seriously damaged by the snow. We are going to the range and then to the West."

Louis Hill stated that a good deal of yesterday was spent in inspecting the terminals between here and Superior. He stated that the Great Northern was in shape to do a heavy business, as the terminals here were in the best of shape at the present time.

Howard Elliott informed The Herald representative that the Northern Pacific was not to be overlooked in the general statement of conditions.

"The Northern Pacific is in shape to handle an immense amount of business," said President Elliott. "The next thing is the crop. We hope for a big crop. Reports along the Northern Pacific show that the wheat has not been injured by the snow storm. Small fruits and vegetables may have been injured somewhat.

"Most of the railroads are in very good shape. They are now ready to handle all the business the country can give them. A big year is generally looked for."

PERSON'S STORY OF IT

Duluth Wrestler Returns and Relates History of Michigan Fiasco.

Says His Refusal to "Throw" Match Brought About Trouble.

Chris Person returned today from the Copper country with his own version of the wrestling scandal that is exciting the Copper country.

Person denies that he had anything but an honest purpose. He says that it was the very fact that he would not sign a paper, agreeing to lie down, or forfeit his money in case he failed to carry out his agreement, that caused Dr. Fixem Rounavaara to call off the match.

"To get the match I had to agree to give the Finn two falls," said Person today. "I had some of my own money wagered upon myself, and I hope I may never say another word, if it was not my honest intention to win. I needed the money very badly, and in my view it was simply a case of outwitting a clever crook and then going in and working like any man.

"This Rounavaara wanted me to sign a paper, which would have forfeited my money in case I had won. This I refused to do. Then he tried his best to 'fix' Miller, the man agreed upon to referee the bout. Miller refused to be fixed. It was after he had failed to convince himself that I would lie down, and after he had failed to make an honest man like Miller do a piece of dirty work, that this Rounavaara decided to call off the match.

"He told the newspapermen and me, that Miller had refused to referee the match, and for that reason he had decided to call it off. Miller did not know the match had been called off until he was about ready to start for the match.

"Rounavaara dodged me and the newspapermen. He played the part of a sneak all the way through. I offered to wrestle Lehto with Rounavaara as referee. This he refused to do, simply because he did not have enough nerve to go through with something he tried to get others to do. He is too small and petty to possess courage.

"I have never thrown a friend, and I know that there were lots of well wishers of mine who had money on me. I would have won or have been a badly beaten man. I went there to beat Lehto, and I am telling you the truth. I swear it.

"Letho, in my opinion, is not hard to beat. He is an overrated man. Rounavaara knew this. He has been making money and didn't want to see a good thing get away. I may have made a mistake, but I want my friends to know that I simply adopted a means to beat a faker and fixer."

WHY THEY GRINNED.

Lippincott's: Mrs. Grant was undoubtedly the disciplinarian in the family, and Mr. Grant, who was a very busy lawyer, was regarded by the two children as one of themselves, subject to the laws of "Mother." But one day Mrs. Grant became very ill, and at luncheon Mr. Grant, who felt that the children were already showing signs of "running wild," felt obliged to reprimand them.

"Gladys;" he said, "stop that immediately or I shall have to take you from the table and spank you."

Instead of making the impression he had fondly hoped to do he saw the two little imps glance in a surprised manner at each other and then simultaneously a grin broke over the faces of both culprits, and Gladys said in a voice of derisive glee:

"Oh, George, hear father trying to talk like mother!"

AUTO CAUSES DISCUSSION

Fire Commissioners Explain Request for Machine for the Chief.

Say It Could Carry Apparatus for Extinguishing Small Fires.

The automobile which the board of fire commissioners wish the city council to provide for Joseph Randall, chief of the fire department, is not the ordinary kind of devil wagon in which the joy riders disport themselves.

"Nothing like that," they say. "We gave up that idea long ago. It would not be good business, and we don't blame the aldermen for turning down former requests. The gasoline whizzer which we have in mind would be a real benefit to the department and our city."

The board wants an automobile equipped with sufficient apparatus to put out an ordinarily small fire, carrying a number of highly-charged chemical extinguishers. Because of the hills it would necessarily have to have a powerful engine, able to send it ahead at a rate which would make the ordinary citizen dizzy to watch it should it ever be let out to full capacity.

The idea is that when alarms of fire come in, the chief and one or two assistants would be able to get to the scene of the blaze a long time ahead of the heavy, horse-drawn engines, hook and ladder carts and hose and chemical wagons. Should it prove to be a small fire, and most of those in the city are comparatively trifling, the chemicals on the auto would be able to extinguish it in a short time, and probably return to stop the apparatus from the other engine houses before they had reached the scene. In case of alarms a long ways off this would save the horses a great deal and prevent considerable wear and tear.

Another feature is exemplified in the adage that "a stitch in time saves nine." Many disastrous fires could have been prevented had the department been able to get to them quickly. Besides this, it is pointed out that the horses of the chief are killed before their time because of the hard runs they are obliged to make day and night for any alarm, whether it be false or not. Another argument is that money would be saved on the feed bill and figures are produced to substantiate the allegation.

The board sent in the request for the machine to the council last evening, but no action was taken on it, the matter being referred to a committee.

When the aldermen first heard of the request they scratched their heads a bit. It didn't puzzle them much, but they started to thinking a bit.

"Why didn't we add $2,000 to the fire department fund the first of the year to give the men a day off in every seven days after the first of July?" they pondered. "Seems to us that we did. Fact is, we are dead sure of it. No mistake, because Jim Foubister had his heart set on it and asked for $5,000, which we cut down to $2,000.

"Now, didn't we hear or read something lately about the funds of the department being so shy that the men couldn't get the benefit of those two thousand, we set aside for them? Strikes us that such is the case, unless our eyes and ears deceive us, and they do assert that 'seeing is believing' and hearing is something along the same line.

"Well then, how can we reconcile the claim that the fire department fund is so low that it can't permit the hiring of sufficient men to give the boys a day off in every seven after July 1, with the fact that a new automobile is needed? The two do not seem to hitch, from our point of view.

"The automobile is a good thing all right, and we're in favor of it if it's going to improve the efficiency of the departments. But they've got to show us why the men shouldn't have one day off in seven before we buy that buzz wagon. That's all."

CHAUFFEUR IS ARRESTED

Police Are Busy Looking for Careless Automobile Drivers.

The police are checking up the chauffeurs of the city who are inclined to be careless.

The first arrest since the fatal accident of last week was made this morning, when Clifford Oppel, 22 years old, was taken into custody, charged with reckless driving. He was arraigned in police court, where he entered a plea of not guilty and his trial was set for this afternoon.

It is understood that other arrests will follow. The authorities have been on the lookout for chauffeurs who have been too free with the ordinances regulating the use of the buzz wagons in their charge. It is claimed that they have evidence in their possession now on which other warrants will be issued.

The new boat, Peter Reis, in course of construction at the Superior shipyards, was threatened by fire last evening, but before much damage occurred the blaze was put out by the tug Inman.

The blaze was confined mostly to the scaffolding. It is thought that one of the workmen dropped a red-hot rivet on the timber, causing the fire. The Inman directed a stream of water on the burning scaffolding, and the fire was out before the city fire department arrived on the scene.

BIG JEWELRY FRAUD FOUND

Ten Arrests Made in Alabama and Texas---Bogus Shipments Involved.

Providence, R. I., April 26.—A conspiracy, far reaching in its effects, has just been unearthed, and developments up to date indicate that through this great swindle manufacturing jewelers in Rhode Island and other states have been robbed of goods valued at half a million dollars at least. Ten arrests have been made in Alabama and Texas, and one of the alleged conspirators was on the Mexican border, ready to cross the line when the officials took him into custody.

Details of the swindle were made public today by Harry Cutler of this city, who was a member of the committee of the New York Jewelry Board of Trade, appointed to capture the conspirators. Mr. Cutler says that the conspiracy had gone so far that arson was resorted to by the alleged swindlers.

Montgomery, Ala., is said to have been the headquarters of the conspirators. The scheme was to buy jewelry throughout the country and ship to Montgomery. After that, the reports say, dummy packages were sent from Montgomery to other stores of the firm. These were then credited as real shipments of valuable goods and so listed. The stores were then set on fire, it is alleged, and the dummy packages were listed as lost assets by the firm in bankruptcy proceedings.

The great railroad viaduct over the Sioule river in France, is considered the greatest bridge of its kind in the country, and one of the most notable bridge-building feats in the world. Its total length is about 1,500 feet, the railroad tracks are 450 feet above the normal level of the river, and the central span is 465 feet long. It is said too that on account of its purity and wholesome food qualities Golden Grain Belt Beer is unexcelled as a table beverage. It has won a dignified place in the American home. MARVELS OF MINUTENESS.

Chicago Tribune: There is on exhibition in the Army Medical musum at Washington a specimen of microscopic writing on glass. This writing consists of the words of the Lord's Prayer, and occupies a rectangular space measuring 1.294 by 1.441 of an inch, or an area of 1,129654 of a square inch. These lines are about 1-50000 of an inch apart. Now, to get some idea of the minuteness of this writing: There are in the Lord's Prayer 227 letters, and if as here this number occupies the 1.129654 of an inch there would be room on an entire square inch for 29,432,458 such letters similarly spaced.

The entire Bible, old and new testaments, contains but 3,566,480 letters, and there would therefore be room enough to write the entire Bible eight times over on one square inch of glass in the same manner as the words of the Lord's Prayer have been written on this specimen. Such a statement staggers the imagination, but the figures are easily verified and are certainly correct.

Along this same line of almost incredible minuteness is the story of one Mark Scallot, a blacksmith, who in 1578, in the twentieth year of Queen Elizabeth's reign, made a lock consisting of eighteen pieces of steel, iron and brass, with a hollow key to it, that altogether weighed but one grain of gold. He also made a gold chain, composed of forty-three links, which he fastened to the lock and key. In the presence of the queen he put the chain about the neck of a flea, which drew it with ease, after which he put the lock and key, flea and chain into a pair of scales and they together weighed but one grain and a half. This is vouched for by an old writer.

Many instances of mechanical ingenuity really remarkable to us in these days, when we are supposed to have advanced in learning, are related by various ancient authors. The silver sphere, "a most noble and ingenious performance," which was presented to Sultan Solyman the Magnicent by his imperial majesty, Ferdinand, is mentioned by Paulus Jovius as showing and keeping time with the motions of the celestial bodies in various configurations. It was carried to Constantinople by twelve men, and there put together by the artist that made it.

Mymecides, an ancient carver, was so proficient in microscopic mechanism that he made an ivory ship, with all its decks, masts, yards, rigging and sails, in so small a compass that it might have been hidden under the wing of a fly. He also made a chariot with four wheels and as many harnessed horses, which took up scarcely more room than the ship.

George Whitehead, an Englishman, made a ship, with all things pertaining to it, to move as if it sailed upon a table. "All hands were aloft, a woman made good music on a lute, and a little puppy cried in the midship, all of which variety," says the old writer, "was pleasant and diverting."

OUTBLUFFING A BLUFF.

John Lover, the wild animal expert at the Philadelphia zoo, was talking about big game hunting in Uganda.

"You must be quick," Mr. Lover ended. "You must be as quick as a cousin of mine once was in Whitechapel.

"It was Jack-the-Ripper time. Do you remember that terrible time? All Whitechapel, all the world, was on edge. My cousin, looking for excitement, wandered one night through the darkest and dismalest alleys and courts of the Whitechapel slums, and all of a sudden a woman blocked his way.

"'Give me your money, all of it,' she said, 'or I'll scream out that you're Jack the Ripper. If this crowd gets at you then——'

"My cousin was always phenomenally quick. He took the woman's arm in a vise-like grip, and he let his eyes blaze into hers.

"'Madam,' he hissed, 'I am Jack the Ripper!'

"And with a smothered scream she turned and fled."

THREE MEN ARE INJURED

Charles Johnson's Leg Broken When Automobile Turns Over.

Lindsay A. Stevenson and Fred A. Anderson Are Slightly Hurt.

Charles Johnson, 20 years old, whose home is at 229 North Fifty-fourth avenue west, is in the Duluth hospital with a broken leg, and Lindsay A. Stevenson and Fred A. Anderson are treating minor injuries as the result of an automobile accident on Third street between Thirty-seventh and Thirty-eighth avenues west about 4 o'clock this morning.

The automobile, which Johnson was driving, and in which the other two men were riding, was overturned when a tire was punctured. Stevenson and Anderson escaped with a few bruises, but Johnson was pinned under the car and when he was released it was found that his leg was broken.

Stevenson is a saloon keeper at 322 Central avenue and lives at 7 North Fifty-sixth avenue west. Anderson is a patrolman on the West Duluth police force and lives at 306 Central avenue.

Johnson and Stevenson were knocked senseless and neither regained consciousness until after an ambulance had been called, over a half hour later. Stevenson said this morning that the first thing that he remembered after the accident was the sight of William Johnson bemoaning the injuries of his son.

Officer Anderson, who was slightly dazed, picked himself up and hurried to the nearest telephone to summon an ambulance. He escaped with but a slight scratch on his nose. Sevenson fared worse. His head was badly bruised and his clothes were nearly torn from him. He struck the ground on his head, scraping his face on the pavement. Both Anderson and Stevenson were badly jolted and are somewhat lame from the effects.

No one knows just how the accident occurred, as it came so suddenly, says Stevenson, one of the injured men, this morning. They were traveling eastbound along Third street at a fairly lively clip, when the tire punctured. The machine was running close to the curb and when the tire of one of the rear wheels gave way, the machine hit one of the many manholes along this thoroughfare, swerved off its course into the curbing and overturned, pitching its occupants headforemost into the street.

The machine was owned by young Johnson's father, William Johnson, who up to a few months ago, conducted the Johnson livery at West Duluth.

The machine is demolished. The rear wheel is gone, the frame badly smashed and only the chassis proper, is worth repairing. Earlier in the evening, Young Johnson took out another machine owned by his father and in starting it, stripped the gearing. Johnson was driving on the left side of the street when the accident occurred.

It will probably be several days before Johnson will be able to leave the hospital.

Telephone calls requesting the West Duluth police to investigate a disturbance at the home of James Van Aspern, of 219 North Sixty-second avenue west, came thick and fast at the station house yesterday afternoon, and Officer Root was detailed to the scene.

It was reported that Van Aspern had created a scene at his home by threatening to take his own life with a razor, and it was also alleged that he had threatened other members of the family. The first call for the police came from his wife's mother.

When Officer Root arrived on the scene he said that it appeared as if the entire neighborhood had assembled around the Van Aspern home. Upon making inquiries, he was refused any information as to the source of the trouble.

ARE PLEASED WITH MOVE

Governor Hughes' Appointment Causes Favorable Comment in Duluth.

The unexpected announcement of the appointment of Governor Hughes of New York as associate justice of the United States supreme court was widely commented upon in Duluth today.

On all sides this appointment was described as an excellent one, but some thought they saw in it a clever political move that will redound to the advantage of President Taft.

Odin Halden, county auditor, heartily indorsed the president's selection of a successor to the late Justice Brewer.

Lee Willcuts, collector of customs, said:

"Governor Hughes has the confidence of the people of the whole country, and his appointment will therefore be most satisfactory. Probably a better appointment could not have been made."

"I don't know Governor Hughes personally," said Oscar Mitchell, the attorney, "but from my knowledge of his work as a lawyer I regard the appointment as a most excellent one. I think that he has demonstrated that he is a man of very great ability. He is now at the height of his powers, and his personal honor and integrity are recognized by everyone. Personally, I would have been glad to see the appointment come to the West. Aside from that, the appointment is as good a one as could have been made. I had hoped that some one of the Eighth circuit judges would receive the appointment, but as they sat in the Standard Oil case no one of them could sit in the supreme court in the same case, and this probably prevented their consideration."

Some comment was made on the political aspects of the appointment the suggestion being made that, while governor Hughes is certain to make a good judge, his selection means that the man most dangerous to Taft in 1912, aside from Roosevelt is eliminated from the situation. It is said by some that Governor Hughes' appointment leaves only Roosevelt between Taft and renomination.

INDIANS WILL FILE CONTESTS

Gus H. Beaulieu of White Earth was in the city today, a guest at the St. Louis. Mr. Beaulieu is a Democrat and a newspaper publisher who gives much attention to political and public affairs in his district, and he gave it as his opinion that Halvor Steenerson will be renominated for congress over H. O. Bjorge, who is fighting him for the place.

Mr. Beaulieu was in the city in connection with Indian cases that are to be tried here. He said that the Indians of White Earth are making elaborate preparations for the annual celebration they will hold June 14, at that place.

Many of the Indians affected by the throwing open to entry of the lands involved in the recent order of the secretary of the interior are dissatisfied with the arrangements made by the government for their future, said Mr. Beaulieu, and say that they should have received their allotments in the regular way before the land was thrown open to settlement.

It is probable that contests for the land will be made by some of the Indians.

COPPER MARKET STAYS IN A RUT

No Trend in Values—Steel Common Dividend Is Increased.

The market was erratic today and the trend was without significance. The declaration of a dividend of 1¼ per cent on Steel common came too late to exercise a direct effect. In the early hours stocks saged and there was considerable liquidation. Toward the close there became a well defined impression in the market that the quarterly dividend on Steel common would be increased ¼ per cent to 1¼ per cent and the entire list strengthened. The copper market closed about on a par with the opening. Some issues were lifeless and failed to rally.

The dividend on Steel common should exercise a beneficial influence on the market. It should not be forgotten however, that the increase has been partly discounted. The regular dividend of 1¾ per cent was declared on the preferred.

The copper metal market is quiet and sales are few and far between. Small lots have been sold below 13c a pound. Large consumers are in no hurry to enter the market. Exports are small and indications point to a large increase in stocks this month.

Exports of gold, it is rumored, will be large in the near future and this caused some liquidation in long stocks in the early hour today. Renewed talk of crop damage and stop orders contributed to the early decline.

Butte Coalition declared a dividend of 25c a share today payable June 1. Books close May 17, and open June 8.

WHEN MOSE WENT EAST.

Found He Needed His Snow Shoes in New York.

Mose White carried the mail into the Thunder Mountain gold district. He snowshoed through the silent forests with his little mail sack and his blankets upon his back, toiled up summits and slid down them and camped in a hole in the snow at 3:30 every day, says the New York Telegraph.

He took two days off to get drunk in when he hit the big camp, and another two at Bolse to gather the mail and tell the gang in the Overland whether the drifts were deeper this year than the last. He lied loudly about his trip, spinning tales of starving cougars which leaped from lairs in pine tree trunks hungering for human meat.

"I was shoein' through Pen Basin when I seen him," said Mose on a Saturday night in the Overland bar. "an' I'm only packin' a few cartridges for my cannon. So I ain't in no mood to waste none. I let him sneak up clost to me before I made a move. Then, jest as his yaller eyes was blazin' and his breath was risin' up like the smoke of a prairie fire, I jumped fur him an' kicked him on the nose with my left foot. He was stunned, but only fur a minnit. Then he began to run an' me on his back. I had the savvy to snatch up the mail, an' we was off fur the big timber. He couldn't shake me, an' I callate we traveled forty miles before he lays down an' dies from pure exhaustion, 'cause I'm a pretty heavy weight.

"I slept on his hide that night, an' I made the big camp a day 'fore schedule, thanks to that there cougar, which most guys'd kill, never stoppin' to think that all God's critters got a use. Snowslides is frequenter'n usual up'n the hills."

The Eastern barkeep had listened without showing emotion of any sort until the trailer's voice ceased. Mose eyed him sharply. The barkeep sneered a little.

"Mebbe you're doubtin' my word, young man?" inquired Mose, coldly.

"Forgit it," advised the barkeep; what's your's White?"

A sudden rage developed in the old man's bosom. He gazed at the spruce jacket, the horseshoe pin and smartly knotted scarf of the speaker and snarled:

"Don't you White me! They's a mister afore my name!"

"Always kiddin' ain't you?" retorted the barkeep; "sink your beazer into that bath you just poured out. 'Scuse me for not offerin' you a towel with it, but we can't always be prepared."

The row of men whose elbows rested on the bar grinned.

"Mose won't lay up much on that lad," observed the Green Meadow Corral's proprietor. "Orville's a foxy kid."

"I bet ol' Broadway's a missin' you turble," said Mose.

"Yes, they been sendin' for me, but I realize I'm needed here," replied the jestful Orville. "Somebody's got to keep a little life goin' on Main street."

"I dunno how Bolse ever got 'long 'fore you come," said Mose bitterly.

"Turn about's fair play," said Orville, amiably; "why don't you go East an' give 'em a treat?"

The listeners cackled. Mose seemed to have lost his customary power of repartee. His eyes looked past the group around the bottle of "Yellowstone Delight."

"Kid," said he, after a moment or two of meditation. "I been a-packin' mail since they opened up the Buffalo Hump country, an' never thought o' hikin' nowhere else. Now I reckon I'll take your tip and see the East."

On a mild March night Mose climbed into the Nampa local and began his journey. Several friends accompanied him over the first stage of the trip. As they stood in the half darkness on the platform at Nampa awaiting the eastbound Portland express, some one asked why Mose was taking his snowshoes.

"Might need 'em," he replied.

"Why, it's warm weather in Noo York," argued the barkeep, who was of the escort. "Don't have hardly any snow there. An' there's a thousand street cars an' cabs to ride in."

Mose refused to leave the snowshoes.

"You old fool, I'll lay you fifty to five you can't find enough snow to set 'em on," exclaimed the corral owner.

"Took!" said Mose, imperturbably, "them shoes go where I do."

The crowd laughed and hooted, and Mose hoisted his luggage to the sleeper platform.

"You be darn careful of these, mister," he warned the porter, an' if you treat me good they'll be a dime fur you when I git off at Chicago."

His train was due in New York in the morning, and Mose, as he did in the hills, was awake at 5 in his upper berth and cursing the elderly woman who occupied the lower because he had no place to sit until she chose to arise.

When he firmly let himself down into the aisle, located a vacant seat and peered out of a window, he slapped his knee and laughed noisily. Leaving the train he plodded up the platform and emerged in Forty-second street.

Disconsolate passengers lined the station steps, their glances bent on a great bank of snow. The cars clanged up and down. Not a cab was in sight. A few chilled looking, white-clad street cleaners were taking orders from a timekeeper who was obviously not familiar with such weather conditions. New York was buried under the result of a two-days' blizzard.

"Well, we can't walk through five feet of snow, can we?" roared the father of the complaining family of females.

"I don't move a step until our automobile gets here!" shouted an angry woman.

"No machines kin get through this here snow, lady," soothed the carriage agent; "no traffic of no kind."

"Why didn't we stay in Florida?"

"Beastly rottenest climate in America!"

"If we didn't have the worst run street-cleaning department in the world—"

These were only a few mild specimens of their comments. Then a man cried:

"What's he about?"

Mose White was tying the knot in a moosehide thong around his left ankle. He lifted his old valise and a small bag to his back, stood upright on his snowshoes and mounted the drift. Then he called:

"Which way's the hotel?"

A REAL CHUCKLE-HEAD.

"The late Congressman Cushman," said a Tacoman, was justly called the 'Wit of the House.' He never lacked an anecdote wherewith to point and season his remarks.

"Once, in a Tacoman speech, he told us not to be chuckle-headed, shallow people, doing the wrong thing, deceiving none but ourselves.

"'Don't,' he cried, 'be like the beefy English officer!'

"Then he explained that this officer, being seated next to an elderly stranger at a dinner, leaned over and said:

"'Who's the fat old hippopotamus of a woman opposite?'

"'That's my wife,' was the reply.

"'Thanks,' said the officer hastily, 'Thanks. That's all I wanted to know.'

"And he turned to his neighbor on the other side and whispered with a chuckle:

"'Got devilish well out of that, I think, eh?'"

ARE PLEASED WITH MOVE

Governor Hughes' Appointment Causes Favorable Comment in Duluth.

The unexpected announcement of the appointment of Governor Hughes of New York as associate justice of the United States supreme court was widely commented upon in Duluth today.

On all sides this appointment was described as an excellent one, but some thought they saw in it a clever political move that will redound to the advantage of President Taft.

Odin Halden, county auditor, heartily indorsed the president's selection of a successor to the late Justice Brewer.

Lee Willcuts, collector of customs, said:

"Governor Hughes has the confidence of the people of the whole country, and his appointment will therefore be most satisfactory. Probably a better appointment could not have been made."

"I don't know Governor Hughes personally," said Oscar Mitchell, the attorney, "but from my knowledge of his work as a lawyer I regard the appointment as a most excellent one. I think that he has demonstrated that he is a man of very great ability. He is now at the height of his powers, and his personal honor and integrity are recognized by everyone. Personally, I would have been glad to see the appointment come to the West. Aside from that, the appointment is as good a one as could have been made. I had hoped that some one of the Eighth circuit judges would receive the appointment, but as they sat in the Standard Oil case no one of them could sit in the supreme court in the same case, and this probably prevented their consideration."

Some comment was made on the political aspects of the appointment the suggestion being made that, while governor Hughes is certain to make a good judge, his selection means that the man most dangerous to Taft in 1912, aside from Roosevelt is eliminated from the situation. It is said by some that Governor Hughes' appointment leaves only Roosevelt between Taft and renomination.

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN.

INDIANS WILL FILE CONTESTS

Gus H. Beaulieu of White Earth was in the city today, a guest at the St. Louis. Mr. Beaulieu is a Democrat and a newspaper publisher who gives much attention to political and public affairs in his district, and he gave it as his opinion that Halvor Steenerson will be renominated for congress over H. G. Bjorge, who is fighting him for the place.

Mr. Beaulieu was in the city in connection with Indian cases that are to be tried here. He said that the Indians of White Earth are making elaborate preparations for the annual celebration they will hold June 14, at that place.

Many of the Indians affected by the throwing open to entry of the lands involved in the recent order of the secretary of the interior are dissatisfied with the arrangements made by the government for their future, said Mr. Beaulieu, and say that they should have received their allotments in the regular way before the land was thrown open to settlement.

It is probable that contests for the land will be made by some of the Indians.

MICHIGAN MEN VISIT DULUTH

Members of University Faculty Are Guests of Alumni.

The members of the University of Michigan faculty who have been on a tour of the country for some weeks arrived in Duluth a few minutes after 2 o'clock today, and were at once taken in automobiles to the Commercial club. After resting there for a short time they were taken on a sight-seeing jaunt about the city in the automobiles.

In the party are Dean John O. Reid of the literary department; Prof. M. E. Cooley of the engineering department; and General Secretary W. B. Shaw of the Alumni association. Prof. H. M. Bates of the law department has been with the party, but because of the illness of his wife he was unable to come to Duluth. President Hutchins will join the party at St. Paul tomorrow evening.

There will be a banquet at the Commercial club this evening, beginning at 6.30 o'clock. After the banquet the guests will adjourn to the Commercial club assembly room, where the speeches will be delivered. The general public is invited to this part of the entertainment.

New Montana Federal Judge.

Washington, April 26.—President Taft, late today, sent to the senate the nomination of Carl Rasch of Helena, Mont., to be United States district judge in that state. Mr. Rasch has been acting as assistant counsel for Secretary Ballinger before the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation committee.

If a few more table guests would make it profitable for you to keep boarders, then you have business for a Herald want ad.

COPPER MARKET STAYS IN A RUT

No Trend in Values---Steel Common Dividend Is Increased.

The market was erratic today and the trend was without significance. The declaration of a dividend of 1¼ per cent on Steel common came too late to exercise a direct effect. In the early hours stocks sagged and there was considerable liquidation. Toward the close there became a well defined impression in the market that the quarterly dividend on Steel common would be increased ¼ per cent to 1¾ per cent and the entire list strengthened. The copper market closed about on a par with the opening. Some issues were lifeless and tailed to rally.

The dividend on Steel common should exercise a beneficial influence on the market. It should not be forgotten however that the increase has been partly discounted. The regular dividend of 1¾ per cent was declared on the preferred.

The copper metal market is quiet and sales are few and far between. Small lots have been sold below 13c a pound. Large consumers are in no hurry to enter the market. Exports are small and indications point to a large increase in stocks this month.

Exports of gold, it is rumored, will be large in the near future and this caused some liquidation in long stocks in the early hour today. Renewed talk of crop damage and stop orders contributed to the early decline.

Butte Coalition declared a dividend of 25c a share today payable June 1. Books close May 17, and open June 8.

Trading here was of fair volume. Butte-Ballaklava was traded in at $9.25 to $9.10½; Red Warrior at $2.12½; Shattuck at $26, $26.12½ and $25.62½; Butte & Superior at $1.87½, $1.85¾ and $1.87½; Calumet & Corbin at 76 and 77 cents; Cliff at $1.50; Keating at $1.25; St. Mary's at 19 and 18 cents; Sierra at $3.25; North American at $2.50, $2.56¼ and $2.43¾.

Amalgamated sold at $73.37½ to $73.62½ to $72.37½ and at the close at $73.37½; Butte Coalition sold at $21.25 to $21.37½; Calumet & Arizona at $64, $63 and back to the opening; Giroux at $4.75; Greene at $8.37½ to $9, after opening at $9; Superior & at $51.75 to $52.25 to $51 to $52.50; North Butte at $33.25 to $34.75 to $32.87½ and then to $34.25; Steel common sold at $82.87½ to $84 and down to $81.62½ and at the close at $82.87½.

WHEN MOSE WENT EAST.

Found He Needed His Snow Shoes in New York.

Mose White carried the mail into the Thunder Mountain gold district. He snowshoed through the silent forests with his little mail sack and his blankets upon his back, toiled up summits and slid down them and camped in a hole in the snow at 3:30 every day, says the New York Telegraph.

He took two days off to get drunk in when he hit the big camp, and another two at Boise to gather the mail and tell the gang in the Overland whether the drifts were deeper this year than the last. He lied loudly about his trip, spinning tales of starving cougars which leaped from lairs in pine tree trunks hungering for human meat.

"I was shootin' through Pen Rash when I seen him," said Mose on a Saturday night in the Overland bar, "an' I'm only packin' a few cartridges for my cannon. So I ain't in no mood to waste none. I let him sneak up clost to me before I made a move. Then, just as his yaller eyes was blazin' and his breath was risin' up like the smoke of a prairie fire, I jumped fur him an' kicked him on the nose with my left foot. He was stunned, but only fur a minnit. Then he began to run an' me on his back. I had the savvy to snatch up the mail, an' we was off fur the big timber. He couldn't shake me, an' I calkilate we traveled forty miles before he lays down an' dies from pure exhaustion, 'cause I'm a pretty heavy weight.

"I slept on his hide that night, an' I made the big camp a day 'fore schedule, thanks to that there cougar, which most guys'd kil, never stoppin' to think that all Rod's critters got a use. Snowslides is frequenter'n usual up'n the hills."

The Eastern barkeep had listened without showing emotion of any sort until the trailer's voice ceased. Mose eyed him sharply. The barkeep sneered a little.

"Mebbe you're doubtin' my word, young man?" inquired Mose, coldly.

"Forgit it," advised the barkeep; what's your's White?"

A sudden rage developed in the old man's bosom. He gazed at the spruce jacket, the horseshoe pin and smartly knotted scarf of the speaker and snarled:

"Don't you White me! They's a mister afore my name!"

"Always kiddin' ain't you?" retorted the barkeep; "slink your beazer into that bath you just poured out. 'Scuse me for not offerin' you a towel with it, but we can't always be prepared."

The row of men whose elbows rested on the bar grinned.

"Mose won't lay up much on that lad," observed the Green Meadow Corral's proprietor. "Orville's a foxy kid."

"I bet ol' Broadway's a missin' you turble," said Mose.

"Yes, they been sendin' for me, but I realize I'm needed here," replied the jestful Orville. "Somebody's got to keep a little life goin' on Main street."

"I dunno how Boise ever got 'long 'fore you come," said Mose bitterly.

"Turn about's fair play," said Orville, amiably; "why don't you go East an' give 'em a treat?"

The listeners cackled. Mose seemed to have lost his customary power of repartee. His eyes looked past the group around the bottle of "Yellowstone Delight."

"Kid," said he, after a moment or two of meditation, "I been a-packin' mail since they opened up the Buffalo Hump country, an' never thought o' hikin' nowhere else. Now I reckon I'll take your tip and see the East."

On a mild March night Mose climbed into the Nampa local and began his journey. Several friends accompanied him over the first stage of the trip. As they stood in the half darkness on the platform at Nampa awaiting the eastbound Portland express, some one asked why Mose was taking his snowshoes.

"Might need 'em," he replied.

"Why, it's warm weather in Noo York," argued the barkeep, who was of the escort. "Don't have hardly any snow there. An' there's a thousand street cars an' cabs to ride in."

Mose refused to leave the snowshoes.

"You old fool, I'll lay you fifty to five you can't find enough snow to set 'em on," exclaimed the corral owner.

"Took'" said Mose, imperturbably, "them shoes go where I do."

The crowd laughed and hooted, and Mose hoisted his luggage to the sleeper platform.

"You be darn careful of those, mister," he warned the porter, an' if you treat me good they'll be a dime fur you when I git off at Chicago."

His train was due in New York in the morning, and Mose, as he did in the hills, was awake at 5 in his upper berth and cursing the elderly woman who occupied the lower because he had no place to sit until she chose to arise.

When he timily let himself down into the aisle, hunted a vacant seat and peered out of a window, he slapped his knee and laughed noisily. Leaving the train he plodded up the platform and emerged in Forty-second street.

Disconsolate passengers lined the station steps, their glances bent on a great bank of snow. The cars clanged up and down. Not a cab was in sight. A few chilled hooking, white-clad street cleaners were taking orders from a timekeeper who was obviously not familiar with such weather conditions. New York was buried under the result of a two-days' blizzard.

"Well, we can't walk through five feet of snow, can we?" roared the father of the complaining family of females.

"I don't move a step until our automobile gets here!" shouted an angry woman.

"No machines kin get through this here snow, lady," soothed the carriage agent; "no traffic of no kind."

"Why didn't we stay in Florida?"

"Beastly rottenest climate in America!"

"If we didn't have the worst run street-cleaning department in the world—"

These were only a few mild specimens of their comments. Then a man cried:

"What's he about?"

Mose White was tying the knot in a moosehide thong around his left ankle. He lifted his old valise and a small bag to his back, stood upright on his snowshoes and mounted the drift. Then he called:

"Which way's the hotel?"

A REAL CHUCKLE-HEAD.

"The late Congressman Cushman," said a Tacoman, was justly called the 'Wit of the House.' He never lacked an anecdote wherewith to point and season his remarks.

"Once, in a Tacoman speech, he told us not to be chuckle-headed, shallow people, doing the wrong thing, deceiving none but ourselves.

"'Don't,' he cried, 'be like the beefy English officer.'

"Then he explained that this officer, being seated next to an elderly stranger at a dinner, leaned over and said:

"'Who's the fat old hippopotamus of a woman opposite?'

"'That's my wife,' was the reply.

"'Thanks,' said the officer hastily. 'Thanks. That's all I wanted to know.'

"And he turned to his neighbor on the other side and whispered with a chuckle:

"'Got devilish well out of that, I think, eh?'"

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE—

DEFAULT has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed by John Zuponcic and Francis Zuponcic, his wife, mortgagors, to Joe Putzel, mortgagee, bearing date July 1st, 1909, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of St. Louis County, Minnesota, on the 17th day of August, 1909, in Book 262 of Mortgages, on page 352.

Said default consists in the nonpayment of $322.00 and interest at 6 per cent per annum upon that certain note for $500.00, dated July 1st, 1909, which became due, according to its terms, on or before December 30th, 1909, with interest at 6 per cent per annum, which is one of the notes secured by said mortgage, and no part of which has ever been paid except the sum of $178.00.

Said mortgage was assigned by said Joe Putzel under date of October 2nd, 1909, to Sattler Liquor Company, a Minnesota corporation, by written assignment recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said St. Louis County on October 13th, 1909, in Book 188 of Mortgages, on page 269. Said mortgage was thereafter assigned, under date of October 18th, 1909, by said Sattler Liquor Company to Joseph Francel, who is now the owner thereof, by written assignment recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds on October 20th, 1909, in Book 132 of Mortgages, on page 497.

By reason of such default, and pursuant to the terms of said mortgage, said Joseph Francel hereby elects to declare, and does declare, all sums secured by said mortgage to be due and payable. By reason of such default and election, the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative, and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has ever been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage.

The property described in said mortgage and thereby mortgaged is Lot one (1) in Block five (5) of the First Division of Aurora, in St. Louis County, Minnesota, together with the two-story frame building thereon, excepting all mineral reservations as previously reserved by the Longyear-Mesaba Land & Iron Company, according to the plat thereof on file and of record in the office of said Register of Deeds.

There is claimed to be due, and is due, upon said mortgage at the date hereof the sum of $2,945.46.

WHEAT HAS SHARP BREAK

Sags Throughout the Session Closing at the Low Point.

Flax Also Weak, All Options Showing a Loss Here.

Duluth Board of Trade, April 26.—Wheat, which in this market has been relatively stronger than in other American markets, declined severely today, the principal portion of the slump occurring in the closing hour. The shorts put out new lines on the decline. May and July wheat lost 2½c and September declined 2c. Toward the close the market met with little or no resistance and offerings exceeded the demand. May wheat opened $1.09½, sold at $1.08⅝, $1.08¾-⅞, $1.08⅞, $1.08⅜, $1.08⅝ and down to $1.07¼ and closed with offers at $1.07¼. July opened with offers at $1.10¼, sold at $1.09½, $1.09⅜, $1.09, $1.09¼ and down to $1.07¾-⅞. September was 99½c bid at the close.

Flax declined under moderate offerings. May lost 2c, opening with offers at $2.41, selling at $2.40, $2.37¾, $2.39½ and $2.39, closing $2.39 bid. July opened at $2.35 and sold down to $2.33, $2.33½ and closed at that figure. September was offered at $1.83 and sold at $1.78, $1.80 and then at $1.77, closing with bids at $1.77. October was $1.70 bid and sold at $1.68 and closed $1.67 bid. The country offered flax to arrive in September moderately.

Cash wheat equaled May. Oats closed ⅞c off; durum 1⅛c off; rye and barley were unchanged.

The market was erratic today and the trend was varied and had little significance although the activity of the bears seemed to have a greater effect on the market than the attitude of the bulls. A factor which worked against a pronounced decline was the fact that the market has been considerably oversold. Bears deny that the short interest is unwieldy, however. The professional element is disposed to sell on the bulges and is not inclined to buy on the breaks. Most traders seem to think that the market will sink to an export basis and that bulges caused by crop damage reports put the market in an advantageous position for selling.

Wheat opened weak on easy cables and scattered selling on more favorable weather indications. With the exception of the Paris market cables were lower. Continental markets were bidding for near Australian cargoes and prices were firm in consequence. Liverpool was weak, the cash demand being dead. Russian offers were liberal and cheaper. Manitoba offerings were heavy. The unexpected decrease of 2,264,000 bu in the European visible caused a firmer tone at mid-day, but the strength was only temporary.

As the time approaches for the close of the May option, the bears are manifesting some anxiety. There is a fair short interest out and there will probably be a scurry to get under cover. No squeeze is expected, however, as the pressure of actual wheat is heavy and the cash demand for available supplies is poor. There is a heavy bear interest in the deferred months and the bull holdings are not as large as some people assume. The longs are less aggressive than three or four weeks ago.

The rallies today were occasioned by short covering and scattered buying from indiscriminate sources. The longs who were not shaken out on the recent decline were not active today, but bought in moderate quantities toward mid-day causing firmer values. Toward the close values declined. The bears are in a strong position as they accepted profits on the recent decline and are in a position to jump on the market when it shows the slightest signs of weakness.

The cash demand in the Southwest was strong today, but in the Northwest the betterment was only slight. In the Southwest farmers are not sending wheat to elevators. Their attitude seems to be governed to some extent by crop damage reports and not by the supplies of wheat in the country. The time is near at hand when it will be known with some degree of certainty whether or not the wheat in the Southwest has been hurt. The bulls maintain that the deterioration has been pronounced and that eventually values will respond to the broadening of concessions among professionals to the contention that the winter wheat plant has been seriously damaged. The recent frosts, the bulls think, have checked the growth of the plant even in the spring wheat country.

The flour trade has not improved on the recent bulge. Stocks of wheat are large and there is no scarcity in the visible supply, which is gradually approaching the basis that existed last year. Deliveries on May contr cts in the Northwest will be as large, if not larger, than in the histor. of the two markets. Canada has plenty of wheat for export and current receipts at Winnipeg are large.

W. J. McCabe does not believe that the cold weather has hurt the wheat seed or the plant above ground in the Northwest. Advices received by him lead him to that conclusion. Similar weather before, he said today, has not hurt the young plant nor the seed in process of germination.

Broomhall Cabled: Wheat at the start was steady and unchanged to ¼d higher, being influenced by strength in America. Later heavy selling developed and prices declined ½d to ⅞d with principal weakness in May. Manitoba offered freely at lowered prices with spot heavy and poor demand and this led to a heavy liquidation in May by tired holders. European crop advices continue bearish and favorable and Australia continues to offer freely with Russian offers liberal and lower. Toward mid-day the decline was checked, the unexpected liberal decline in the European visible and reports that the continent is bidding for nearby Australian steamers. Corn was unchanged. Visible wheat in Europe this week 93,908,000 compared to 96,172,000 last week, a decrease of 2,264,000; last week there was an increase of 1,298,000 and last year a decrease of 600,000, when the total was 11,800,000 bu.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Break of More Than a Cent Marks Wheat Opening.

Chicago, April 26.—A break of more than 1c in wheat today proved an unpleasant surprise to many traders who went home long last night. The chief cause for the slump was a sudden reversal of sentiment at Liverpool. Traders at that market influenced by bearish crop advices from Europe and free offerings from Manitoba turned from a bullish view to one distinctly different. The market here was poorly supported and the offerings soon became heavy accelerating the downward trend of prices. On the break, however, there was good buying, especially of the September option. The immediate incentive for this buying was said to be further discouraging reports concerning the growing crop. Quotations started ⅛@½c lower with May at $1.09⅞@1.09½. From that price the market descended to $1.08⅞ and rallied to $1.09⅝. September opened at $1.01¼@1.01½ and was not subjected to as great a decline as May.

The rally was short-lived and May went to $1.08¼, but closed fairly steady at $1.08⅜@½, a net loss of 1½@1⅝. September went down to 99⅞c and closed a trifle higher. Rain in some parts of the winter wheat belt and sales by a leading elevator concern that had been a buyer for several days were factors.

On scattered but fairly general commission selling in sympathy with wheat, corn was weak, and May particularly so. That month opened ⅛@⅜c lower at 59⅝@59⅞c and declined to 59¼c.

Corn sold off with wheat and because recent advances in cash corn were said to have put buyers into retirement. May, after touching 59⅞c, sold down to 59⅛c, closing steady at 59⅛@59¼c, a net loss of ¾@⅞c.

There was free unloading of oats. Most of the selling was by the local crowd. May opened ¼c lower at 42⅝@42¾c and went to 42⅛c.

Provisions started a little firmer because of a small run of hogs West, as well as here. The buying, however, was poor and the market took on an easy tone with grain. September pork opened 5c higher at $21.95, went to $21.97½ and declined to $21.75. Lard and ribs followed a similar course, but the price changes either way were only half as wide.

The Cotton Market.

New York, April 26.—Cotton opened steady but showed a somewhat reactionary tendency following the sharp advance of yesterday. First prices were unchanged to 8 points cables, and during the first few minutes active months sold off to a net decline of 7 and 11 points under the heavy realizing. There was, however, a continued good demand for new crop deliveries. Further reports of scarce seed for replanting, the New Orleans bulls gave the old crop support and the market showed a steady undertone with prices rallying slightly after the first rush of profit-taking.

Spot closed quiet, middling uplands, 15.25; middling gulf, 15.50. Sales, 5,655 bales. Futures closed easy. Closing bids: April, 14.87; July, 14.77; June, 14.62; July 14.60; August, 13.88; September, 13.07; October, 12.68; November, 12.54; December, 12.53; January, 12.49; March, 12.49.

A BUDDHA OF ILL LUCK.

London Chronicle: An example of the malevolent influences of an inanimate object upon the fortunes of its possessors similar to the Hope diamond is recorded by Lady Dirothy Nevill in her "Reminiscences." From the day a miniature Buddha from Burmah of charming workmanship entered her house everything went amiss. Its installation in the drawing room "was followed by a perfect avalanche of catastrophes."

Within a week a son failed in business. Household pets came to tragic ends. A favorite pony was suddenly paralyzed—"and this on the very eve of an election in which it was to assist by conveying Conservative voters to the poll"—from which it is to be inferred that the Buddha was not favorable to the Tory party. A few days later a neighboring chimney crashed down upon a wing of Lady Dorothy's house, doing much damage. Shortly afterward the Buddha was sent on loan to the India museum, where, after some minor disturbances, it settled quietly down and has since remained.

ADVANCES WIPED OUT

Stocks Rise Early on Rush of the Shorts to Cover.

Selling in Large Volume in Afternoon Causes Sharp Decline.

New York, April 26.—The opening stock market today reflected some discorded mixture of buoyant rises at some points with small fractional advances and declines in others. The rush of shorts to cover in stocks which were most freely sold yesterday caused them to advance convulsively. Union Pacific, Reading and Consolidated Gas rose 1½, Wabash preferred, Amalgamated Copper, United States Steel and Brooklyn Transit 1⅜ and Atchison, Northern Pacific and American Smelting 1.

The advance caused a check when traders who considered the rise too rapid sold stocks, but the reactions were not wide, and the market afterwards reached a higher level all around. The metal stocks, Union Pacific and Reading were foremost in the advance. United States Steel, American Smelting and Reading extended their gains 2 points. The trading became quiet at higher prices.

Uncovered shorts were eager buyers of stocks and found no such volume of offerings as yesterday's weak market led them to expect. The decline in the price of cotton relieved an anxiety over the reports of the disaster to the new crop by the cold wave. The Bank of England reduced its price for American eagles and an early end of gold exports was expected. The activity of the dealings lessened at higher prices, but gains were maintained. Union Pacific touched 183 and United States Steel advanced to 83⅞ on reports that the dividend rate would be raised at the afternoon meeting. Bonds were easy.

The market closed generally firm. The exhaustion of demand at the high level prompted renewed selling of the whole list in large volume and the day's gains were completely wiped out. The cotton carriers were conspicuously weak. Atlantic Coast line lost 3. Louisville & Nashville 2, Southern Jacific 1⅜, Texas & Pacific 1¼ and Illinois Central 1. International Pump and United States Expressed declined 2½, St. Paul preferred 2¾ and United States Realty 3. Covering by shorts rallied some of the leading speculative issues a point or more.

NOT A BAD GUESS.

Judge Mary H. Cooper of Beloit, Kan., is the only woman probate judge in the United States. She performs more marriages than any Kansas minister. This is because she always omits the word "obey" from the ceremony—an omission that pleases the Kansas girls, says Washington Star.

Judge Cooper believes in the capable and strong woman—she thinks that the day of the clinging, helpless woman is past. She said in a recent interview:

"In the strong and independent woman's hands, in the fighting woman's hands, our sex's future rests. There is more than a little truth in an episode that a Chinese missionary once related to me.

"This missionary was taking tea with a mandarin's eight wives—she was, of course, a female missionary. The Chinese ladies examined her clothing, her hair, her teeth and so on, but her feet especially amazed them.

"'Why,' one cried, 'you can walk and run as well as a man!'

"'Yes, to be sure,' said the missionary.

"'Can you ride a horse and swim, too'

"'Yes.'

"'Then, you must be as strong as a man?'

"'I am.'

"'And you wouldn't let a man beat you—not even if he was your husband—would you?'

"'Indeed I wouldn't,' said the missionary.

"The mandarin's eight ladies looked at one another, nodding their heads. Then the oldest said softly:

"'Now I understand why the foreign devil never has more than one wife. He is afraid.'"

REPORTERS' MISTAKES.

Answers: "Drunkenness is folly!" earnestly exclaimed Bishop Magee in the house of lords on a celebrated occasion. How horrified was the prelate to read in the papers next morning that he had given utterance to the very Bacchanalian sentiment, "Drunkenness is jolly!" Lord Salisbury was a master phrasemaker; but one of his best points was spoiled when a careless reporter turned his reference to "manacles and Manitoba" into the meaningless "manacles and men at the bar."

Sir William Harcourt was badly misrepresented once. "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" he exclaimed upon the platform; but a country paper had it, "Great Dinah! What a farce this is!" Lack of knowledge of familiar quotations is a prolific source of misreporting. For instance, a speaker once made use of the well-known lines from Milton's "L'Allegro:"

"But come, thou goddess, fair and free,
In heaven yclept Euphrosyne."

The country reporter deputed to "take him down" was in despair. He could not make head or tail of this mysterious utterance. But, following the sound as far as possible, he seized his pen, and produced the following gem:

"But come, thou goddess, fair and free,
In heaven she crept, and froze her knee."

The speaker was "taken down" in more senses than one!

DRUGGISTS TELL OF DR. HYDE'S PURCHASE OF DEADLY POISONS

Are Called as Witnesses in the Murder Trial at Kansas City.

Say Physician Explained That He Wanted Drugs to Kill Dogs With.

Women Form Nearly the Entire Audience in the Court Room.

Kansas City, Mo., April 27—Cynanide of potassium, the deadly poison which the state accuses Dr. Hyde of giving Col. T. H. Swope, causing his death, played an important role in the physician's murder trial today. Hugo Brecklein, a druggist, and three of his employes testified that on three occasions, in September and December, 1909, Dr. Hyde purchased a total of twenty-five grains in capsules of the poison at their place of business.

So dangerous was this poison and so rare were sales of it in capsule form, said Mr. Brecklein, that he at once informed Dr. Hyde of its deadly qualities and told him that unless he promised to handle the capsules himself and throw away what he did not use, he would refuse to sell them to him.

"Wanted to Kill Dogs."

To this, testified the druggist, Dr. Hyde answered he was acquainted with the nature of the poison and wanted only to kill dogs with it.

The physician made no mention of desiring to rid his office of vermin, said Mr. Brecklein. This was the use the poison was put to, claimed the defense in its opening statement.

Just before the noon recess, Dr. A. L. Stewart, a bacteriologist, took the stand. It was from him Dr. Hyde obtained the germs with which he is alleged to have innocu'ated the Swope family and others.

Attorneys for Dr. Hyde objected to part of the testimony regarding selling the poison, maintaining the events

TWENTY-SIX COAL OPERATORS SIGN

Pittsburg District Mines All May Be in Operation Next Week.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 27.—Twenty-six coal operators of a total of about thirty-one in the Pittsburg district have signed the wage scale demanded by the miners and will soon resume operations in their mines.

This statement was confirmed today at the headquarters of the district officials of the United Mine Workers of America. It was said, however, that the five operators who have not yet signed are among the largest producers in this district.

President Francis Feehan of the miners' organization said today that he expected all of the operators to sign by the end of the present week, and that operations would be resumed in all the mines early next week.

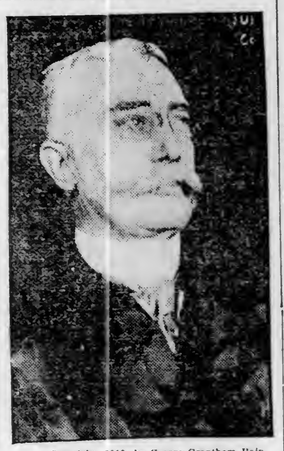
Bank Teller Explains Shortage of $117,000 in His Accounts.

Newberne, N. C., April 27.—The trial of J. R. B. Carraway, a former teller in the National bank of Newberne, for an alleged shortage of $117,000 was begun in the United States district court here today. Carraway is charged with embezzlement, misapplication of funds and false entries. The shortage was discovered in 1909.

The accused teller claims none of the missing money was used by him, but that upon his own authority he paid it out to oblige depositors who overdrew their accounts.

He claims to have checks aggregating nearly the entire amount of the shortage to prove his defense.



TAKE CENSUS OF PARK SLEEPERS

New York "Bread Line" Count Will Include All City's Vagrants.

New York, April 27.—What is known as the "bread-line" census, the count of the city's vagrant population, is scheduled for tonight. The pedigrees of the homeless men and women in the parks and out-of-the-way corners of the city will be taken for the federal records.

"There are many persons who claim some other state as a residence," said Albert Falk, the census superintendent, "but if they were sleeping here on April 15 they have a 'residence' in New York, and will be required to give the enumerators all the information required by the government."

WHOLE PANEL IS DISMISSED

Pittsburg Judge's Action Is Laid to Tampering With Jurors.

Twelve Men Said to Be in Deadlock Over the Coffey Case.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 27.—Judge Robert Frazer, in criminal court, today dismissed a panel of fifty-two jurors in the so-called graft trials now in progress, and in so doing remarked that the action of the court followed a conference with the district attorney.

It is said that the action is the outcome of the reported activity of jury tampering. Judge Frazer, however, refused to discharge the twelve men who have heard the testimony in the case of Maurice Coffey, former city councilman, charged with bribery, who have been deliberating over a verdict for the last eighteen hours. It is reported that the jury is hopelessly deadlocked.

QUEBEC REFUSES TO MODIFY LAW

Policy of Non-Exportation of Raw Forest Products Will Be Adhered to.

Washington, April 27.—Efforts of the United States to have modified in some way the new pulp wood policy of the Canadian province of Quebec have been unsuccessful. United States Consul Foster at Ottawa has telegraphed to the state department that Premier Laurier of Canada yesterday informed him the premier of Quebec province had declined to modify the new law.

This measure prohibits the export of timber cut on crown lands, except in manufactured form, such as pulp and commercial lumber.

Considerable loss to American paper mills will be caused by the new law, which goes into effect May 1, because they will have to buy manufacured pulp instead of raw wood, as heretofore.

SEEK PEACE IN INDIANA

Democrats Try to Avoid Conflict Over Senatorial Nomination.

Marshall and Shively Clash But Compromise Is Being Sought.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 27.—Hope of reconciling the opposing factions among the delegates to the Democratic state convention on the question of indorsing a candidate for the United States senate impelled party leaders today to strive for a compromise and prevent the fight being carried into the convention, which opens tonight.

Among the delegates there is considerable sentiment that both the plan of Governor Marshall, who favors the convention indorsing a candidate, and that of Thomas A. Taggart for a state-wide primary to select a candidate, should be defeated, and the matter should be left to the legislative caucus.

United States Senator B. F. Shiveley, who is to be permanent chairman of the convention, today takes issue with Governor Marshall's plan saying there is no official call for the nomination of a candidate for the senate and there could be no authority for such a call, as the immemorial rule and party usage have not been officially changed.

STATE FUNERAL FOR BJORNSON

Official Norway Mourns at Death of Poet and Novelist.

Christiania, Norway, April 27.—Evidence of mourning for Bjernstjerne Bjornson, Norwegian poet and novelist who died at Paris last night, are universal. King Haakon and Queen Maud have telegraphed their condolences to the widow.

The storthing met today and decided on a state funeral, and immediately afterwards adjourned as an evidence of the public grief. All of the theaters were closed today.

The funeral arrangements have not been sufficiently advanced to show what effect, if any, they will have on the program prepared for the entertainment of Mr. Roosevelt.

POLITICAL PROPHETS SAY ROOSEVELT WILL TAKE DEPEW'S PLACE

Washington Wiseacres Have New York Situation All Framed Up.

Base Their Beliefs on Conditions Created By Hughes' Appointment.

Washington, April 27. — Theodore Roosevelt for the United States senate as successor to Chauncey M. Depew.

This is the way the political prophets and wiseacres in Washington have the situation in New York state figured out today. They arrive at this conclusion from many different viewpoints, but there is apparently a consensus of opinion that this suggestion offers a solution to a multitude of problems confronting the Republican party, not only in the Empire state, but in the nation at large.

In the general discussion of the situation growing out of the appointment of Governor Hughes to the supreme bench, it already had been agreed that his retirement from politics leaves Col. Roosevelt as the probable dictator of the party in New York state.

Strong Factor Demanded.

The party leaders in Washington realize the same thing, that the exigencies in New York demand a strong factor in the race this fall if the Republicans are to gain success at the polls.

With Theodore Roosevelt as candidate for the senate, it is predicted here that the Republican party would easily regain control of the legislature, and that the Roosevelt personality in the campaign would bring success to the entire state ticket.

This feature of the situation was

GIRL AND SCALP ARE REUNITED

Hair of Victim of Factory Accident May Grow Again, Say Doctors.

St. Louis, Mo., April 27.—Although 17-year-old Viola Locke was completely scalped when her hair became caught in the machinery in a factory yesterday, the scalp not reaching the hospital until some time after she did, surgeons believe the scalp will reunite itself to her head.

The girl was taken to the city hospital in an automobile and the scalp was taken to the hospital later in an ambulance. It was sewed to the head immediately on its arrival, Miss Locke refusing to take an anesthetic.

During the healing process the head will be constantly dampened by a solution to keep the scalp alive.

INSURGENTS COQUETTES?

Senator Rayner Asks Them If They Are Flirting With Democrats.

Says Combination Never Holds Good When the Real Test Comes.

Washington, April 27.—"Are the insurgents in earnest, or have they just been flirting and coquetting with us?"

Senator Rayner of Maryland, in mock seriousness, asked this question and others even more pointed, in a speech delivered in the senate today on the administration railroad bill. He said that the Democrats wanted no combinations with the insurgents on preliminary skirmishes, but that the recalcitrant Republicans would be welcomed into Democratic ranks if they only would enlist and take their followings with them.

Pointing out that on almost all preliminary moves on various measures before the present congress the insurgents and the Democrats have stood together, Mr. Rayner said that "when the final vote is taken upon the bill itself they seem leisurely to stray away from us."

What Do They Mean?

"Now," he said, "the question is,

Increase in Wages Is Granted to Firemen on That Railroad.

New York, April 27.—The Erie railroad's wage differences with its firemen have been adjusted, it was learned today, by an advance of 8.2 per cent to the men. Under the new schedule the passenger firemen receive $2.90 and men on the big freight engines $2.60. The company is still negotiating with its trainmen, conductors and shop forces. It has settled with its engineers, operators, switchmen and freight handlers. The agreement with its firemen takes effect on April 15.

NORTHERN PACIFIC'S LAND GRANT CASES IN SUPREME COURT

Claimants to Tracts Between Duluth and Ashland Are Heard.

Charge That Department of Justice Favored Railroad Is Made.

Weyerhaeuser, Humbird, Wass, Hoyt and Campbell Are Parties.

Washington, April 27.—A bitter controversy over the attitude of the interior department toward the land grants to the Northern Pacific Railroad company reached a climax today, when the matter was laid before the supreme court of the United States for decision.

Individual land claimants in Minnesota contend that the department has shown unjustified favors to the Northern Pacific Railway company, as successor to the Northern Pacific Railroad company. Frank B. Kellogg, recently before the public as the leading governmental "trust buster," appeared for Frederick Weyerhaeuser and John Humbird in defense of the department.

The Northern Pacific Railway company claims title to one parcel of land and Frederick Weyerhaeuser and John A. Humbird to two others by reason of the privilege given to the Northern Pacific Railroad company, to select land within a forty-mile limit of its road through Minnesota. In opposition, Fred Wass claims one parcel under the homestead law and H. H. Hoyt and Charles D. Campbell

LOOT SAFE IN THE GLARE OF LIGHT

Bold Cracksmen Work Openly in New York Railroad Ticket Office.

New York, April 27.—One of the most daring burglaries on the records of the New York police, committed Sunday morning at the main ticket office of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, on lower Broadway, has just been announced.

Under the glare of four big electric lights, in a room every foot of which was visible to passersby, on a busy section of New York's principal thoroughfare, the tall safe in the center of the room was drilled, its lock torn away and all the money and tickets stolen. The burglars got something over $250.

Kewaskum, Wis., April 27.—The residence of William Klein and Jacob Schlitz, northeast of here, was completely wrecked by dynamite yesterday and three people injured, one perhaps fatally. William Klein, both eyes blown out, face badly burned and legs and hands badly bruised.

Jacob Schlitz, head and hands bruised.

Miss Theresa Schlitz, head and hands bruised.

The injured were taken to Mrs. John Schlitz's home, where medical aid was summoned. Mr. Klein is in a critical condition.

BETTER CIGARS FROM ISLANDS

Philippine Tobacco Men Agree on Conditions for Exports.

Manila, April 27.—At a meeting of the Cigar Manufacturers' association today it was unanimously decided to cease the shipment to America of cigars of indiscriminate quality and to limit the shipments of the poorer grades. It was agreed to ship in the following proportions:

Superior grades, 35 per cent; mediums, 50 per cent; cheaper grades, 15 per cent.

Steps were taken to maintain this proportion, and it is believed that it will result in a reduction in quantity and an improvement in the quality of the shipments of cigars from the Philippines.

CITY INSPECTOR HAS NO POWER TO CONDEMN COWS

Milk Inspector Owens Pays $50 to Learn This Fact.

Attempt to Overrule Deputy State Inspector Proves Costly.

WHERE DOES CITY STAND?

Where does the city stand in the matter of testing cows for tuberculosis? As matters now stand, is it able to do anything at all? Has the milk inspector an iota of authority? There are the questions now bothering the health department.

The subject is a highly important one, as one cow affected with tuberculosis, can expose hundreds of people, including the babies of the city.

Ex-Milk Inspector R. W. Luxon stated after going through the dairies of scores of small towns adjacent to Duluth, that if he found one tubercular cow his efforts were well worth while. He believed the city amply repaid for the expense and the trouble.

Although the city council last Monday night raised the pay of Milk Inspector Grant E. Owens from $80 to $125 a month, in addition to furnishing a horse and buggy, on the ground that he would be able to administer the tuberculin test for cows, himself, it appears that he is without much authority in this respect, and unable to accomplish the results obtained under the plan formerly followed.

Attempting to go over the head of Dr. John McKay, deputy state veterinarian, in testing and condemning a cow owned by I. Levine at Fourth avenue east and Eighth street, he ran against a snag, which proved expensive. He declared that the cow had tuberculosis, and Dr. McKay claimed that it was all right under the state test.

It is claimed that Inspector Owens was told that if he killed the cow he would do so on his own responsibility. He killed the animal, and the outcome was that he had to pay $50 for it out of his own pocket.

Cows condemned by the state under the state regulations for tuberculosis are paid for by the state. The only person who can condemn a cow for tuberculosis and order it killed is a graduate veterinarian acting for the state which reimburses the owner. It is claimed that Inspector Owens has no real authority in the matter. An effort is being made to overcome these difficulties, but thus far it seems that they have been without success. Dr. Webster, health commissioner, has been corresponding with the state board relative to this subject and is hopeful of reaching a satisfactory understanding.

The plan of the city is to have Inspector Owens test the cows for tuberculosis although he has no power to condemn cows. Wherever he finds a cow which he believes has tuberculosis he will order it isolated and direct the milkman not to sell any of its milk. In this way the city authorities hope to secure satisfactory results.

But those who have studied the subject state that this will do no good. One man said his morning that he will take any cow which is approved by the state veterinarian, although Inspector Owens says it has tuberculosis, and sell milk, taking his chances of prosecution, as he says that he doesn't believe the city could touch him. He claims that the only way is to have all cows tested by the state and killed under the direction of the state officers. In this way the cows are put out of the way forever and the owner paid by the state.

"Supposing," said another interested, "that I had a herd of cows and the city tested it for tuberculosis and claimed that one had the disease. He could order me to put it away somewhere and not sell milk from that cow. I wouldn't sell milk while he was on the ground, perhaps, but the minute he was gone I'd be able to remove that tag and put her right back into the herd. What could he do? He couldn't stay there himself or hire a man to stay here all the time to watch me. So long as that cow is all right under the state test, I would not need to be afraid of anything the city could do. It does not amount to a row of pins as the situation now is, so far as tuberculin matters are concerned."

SPANKED WIFE; IS ARRESTED

Charles Christianson Objects to Better Half Entertaining Visitors.

Because Charles Christianson of Twenty-eighth avenue east and Seventh street spanked his wife soundly and thrashed the man he found with her, she caused his arrest yesterday afternoon, it is claimed.

It appears that Christianson found his better half entertaining another man in his home several nights ago and took the law into his own hands. When he had given the alleged intruder his deserts, speeding him out of the premises with his heavy boot, it is stated that he turned his attentions to his wife. The claim is that he chastised her severely for the alleged indiscretion. But it appears that he succeeded in arousing her anger to the point where she determined to have him hailed before the bar of justice. He entered a plea of not guilty in police court and his trial was set for Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. He was allowed to go in his own recognizance.

YALE AND ARMY NINE MEET ON DIAMOND.

West Point, N. Y., April 27.—The army baseball team faced Yale today for its annual game with more confidence than would be warranted alone by the many defeats the New Haven players have given the soldiers in years past. Hyatt, the West Point pitcher, has acquitted himself so well this year that the army players expected to give the collegians the hardest fight of their career. The fair weather of the past twenty-four hours had dried the diamond, and excellent weather conditions were expected. The game was scheduled for 4 o'clock.

The batting order:

Yale—Merritt, ss; Badger, lf; Murphy, cf; Logan, 3b; Coe, 1b; Corey, rf; McIntyre, 2b; Stillwell, c; Tomners or Freeman, p.

West Point—Lyman, c; Whiteside, 3b; Anderson, rf; Harrison, 2b; Cook, 1b; Surles lf; Milliken, ss; Ulea, cf; Hyatt, p.

The jury in the case of the state against George Booker for the alleged murder of his step-father, Charles Clark, is now complete and the taking of evidence was begun before Judge Dibell this afternoon.

Much notoriety has been given the case, and the task of drawing a jury was a hard one. The work was begun Tuesday morning and finished shortly before the noon hour today.

Many were examined as to their ideas on circumstantial evidence, capital punishment, and whether or not they had formed any conclusion on the case. Some objected to convicting a man on circumstantial evidence and others objected to capital punishment.

The evidence to be presented by the state will all be purely circumstantial, and great care was exercised by Assistant County Attorney Greene in the selection of jurymen.

Booker was indicted at the March session of the grand jury. He is charged with the murder of Charles Clark. The alleged murder took place on the French river road. Booker claims his step-father came to his death after having been hit by one of the wagon wheels and falling over a campfire.

GEORGE BOOKER,
On Trial for Murder of His Step-Father.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

The Second Ward Republican club will meet tomorrow evening in Polish hall, Fourth avenue east and Fourth street, in regular session and will be addressed by Harvey S. Clapp and E. J. Kenney, former assistant city attorney. At all meetings of the club hereafter there will be programs of speeches and music, and every effort will be exerted to maintain interest in the organization at the top notch.

It is said that Joseph Austin of Chisholm, representative in the last legislature will not be a candidate for re-election. Mr. Austin has made no definite announcement to this effect, but rumor has it so. He has a good record as a legislator.

Register of Deeds Palmer will spend the next week on the ranges. He is not going on a political mission, it is announced, but on other business. No opposition has appeared against him and no intimations have been heard that it will appear. Mr. Palmer is a range man, having been a lawyer at Virginia, of which city he was mayor before he took county office.

Judge Middlecoff of the probate court will return to the city tomorrow from the coast, where he has been on public business. County Superintendent of Schools Gilpin, who has been mentioned as a possible opponent of Judge Middlecoff in the primaries, has not made it known definitely that he will run. The return of Judge Middlecoff may start something.

Alvah Eastman, editor of the St. Cloud Journal Press, is congratulating himself on the fact that he has been called a Democrat and lives to tell of it. "The campaign has no more terrors for the Journal Press," he says. The Hibbing Tribune did this thing, he related. The range paper classed the St. Cloud man with the Democrats because he has insisted that it is bad politics for the Republicans to nominate for governor a man whom they do not expect to win in November. Having survived the appelation, Mr. Eastman with safety and credit becomes really a Democrat.

In C. C. Eastman's paper, the Wadena Pioneer Journal, is told in detail the story of how that gentleman became separated from his job as postmaster. William Dower took possession of the office some time ago. The Pioneer Journal remarks that "Mr. Eastman retains his self respect, and Mr. Dower is today the postmaster," which remark indicates the state of mind of the ex-postmaster. In part, the story is:

"Thus the last chapter of a unique political incident was written and closed.

"The incidents leading up to this were indeed unique, and will occupy an exclusive page in the history of Wadena and Wadena county. We will not call it a political contest, for there was no contest, as those who opposed the Dower program learned as matters developed.

"Mr. Eastman and his friends and supporters, who were opposed to Mr. Dower's appointment found before the game progressed very far that they were up against a cold deck. Quite naturally, therefore, they are in a certain frame of mind today, and they are satisfied only by reason of the fact that they know who threw the brick.

"Neither Mr. Eastman nor his supporters blame Mr. Dower for aspiring to the position of postmaster. Their cause for complaint is that Mr. Dower secured the appointment without making good at home, he being the beneficiary of a deal put up three years ago by Senator Nelson and ex-Congressman Buckman, without consultation with a single man in Wadena or Wadena county. He was severely beaten in a legislative contest by Judge Murray in 1904. His election to the legislature in 1906 was through a trick put up by Buckman and others, all of whom are now resting easily on the ash heap in the political dump grounds.

"In 1908 he was again the principal in a deal, but he was beaten by a Democrat in his home precinct. Forseeing that he could not expect to gain further favors from the people in a political way, he secured the services of Buckman, and a secret arrangement was made with Senator Nelson to appoint him postmaster. There is considerable surprise at the course Senator Nelson pursued. The senator ignored entirely his old friends in Wadena county, not even according them the courtesy of replying to letters and telegrams.

"Within the past year an inspector of the postoffice department, after going over the Wadena office, stated that the Wadena office was the best conducted office of its size he ever inspected. No fault whatever could be found with it. This was due to the executive ability of the postmaster and the untiring efforts of his force.

"The fact of the matter is that Mr. Eastman was very shabbily treated. He was the victim of a rotten deal, and knows it. He contents himself with the reflection that perhaps an opportunity will present itself at some time in the future, whereby things may be evened up. If in the early spring of 1906 Mr. Eastman had gracefully submitted to the removal of Mr. Sheets as postmaster at Long Prairie, he would today have been postmaster. He did not do that, and does not now regret the stand he took in the matter. Arthur W. Sheets, now dead, was the victim of a dirty political deal, and had we sustained Buckman in administering the same to him, we would now be postmaster of Wadena."

Disputing J. Adam Bede's asertion that under the primary election system the poor man has no show at all, the Monticello Times lets loose a brief paragraph that raps a number of protruding heads:

"The trouble with J. Adam is he does not know it all—he only thinks he does. The primary law is the poor man's friend. Witness Lindbergh. His opponent was flush with money and corporate support, yet Lindbergh defeated him in the primaries. The primary system ought to be extended. If it were, men like Eberhart would not be in it. As it is, the brewers and the large corporations are going to force the Republican party to nominate him."

Apropos of Frank Day's declaration that John Lind can be elected by a majority of 50,000, without making a campaign, Bob Dunn rises to remark: "Now let us here from some one who has been figuring on Mr. Eberhart's candidacy." And the Roseau Region, commenting on the governor's defense of his attitude toward railroad and liquor interests, asks what he will do "when John Lind buckles on his armour and challenges him in the coming campaign," if he finds it necessary to do a lot of explaining when nobody confronts him.

S. B. Duea of Pipestone, a member of the lower house in the last legislature, will not be a candidate for re-election, but will try to get the senatorship now held by E. H. Canfield. It is said that Senator Canfield probably will hesitate to run for the nomination if Duea enters the field, preferring to let the toga pass by default rather than make a fight for it. Col. Harrison White of Luverne, who was displaced as a member of the house two years ago by Duea, has filed for the nomination. That was a three-cornered fight, A. C. Finke being the other contestant. White's nomination is expected to be won without much opposition. Duea's hopes are based largely on the wish of many Pipestone county people that the senatorship be given that county this year.

In Roseau county it is being urged that the county should not put forward a candidate for state senator for fear such a move would cost it the representation it now has. G. H. Mattson, who was not especially valuable to Northern Minnesota in the last legislature, is expected to try for re-election, and there probably will be other candidates from the county for his seat.

FLICKERTAIL POLITICS

The boom for John Burke, North Dakota's able Democratic governor, for the Democratic nomination for vice president, directs public attention to one of the most interesting features in the political world of the Northwest. Governor Burke's friends argue, and with good reason, that the Democratic nominee for president will in all probability come from east of the Mississippi, and therefore a Western man will have the call on the second place on the ticket. His prospective election as governor for a third term certainly will make him one of the most prominent Democrats of the country, for the Democrat who can do what he has done in such a rock-ribbed Republican state is a man who will interest every thoughtful Democrat.

At the Jefferson day banquet in St. Paul Governor Burke added new strength to his prestige in Minnesota, his speeches on that occasion and the next morning before the state central committee being excellent in tone and characterized by a sturdy sincerity that won his hearers completely. His record as governor of North Dakota has been one of exceptional achievement, and his personal popularity is well known. In fact, Governor Burke has been compared as a man and a politician in the most complimentary way with the late Governor Johnson, who was his good friend.

With Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Iowa backing the movement to make Burke the nominee, the friends of the North Dakotan have every reason to look at the project with optimistic eyes. The governor has a large acquaintance in all of these states.

With conditions as they are in Flickertail Republicanism, there is not the slightest doubt Burke can succeed himself, and it is generally accepted as a certainty that he will take the renomination. When the state committee meets in Grand Forks tomorrow it is probable some definite action will be taken that will give the public a line on what to expect. In his call notifying the members of this meeting, Chairman J. L. Cashel says it will be for the purpose of considering "the reports of the committee selected to see that candidates for nomination would be provided for all congressional and state offices to be voted for at the primary election to be held June 29, 1910.

"There will be other matters of great importance to the party presented at said meeting."

Frank A. Day, chairman of the Minnesota state central committee, is an ardent friend of the North Dakota governor, of whom he said in a letter to Col. A. B. Kerlin of Devils Lake:

"Governor Burke is North Dakota's most valuable political asset today, and I cannot believe it possible that North Dakota will dispense with his services as governor, if he will again consent to serve them."

"The one thing that will be necessary in this year for Democratic success," Mr. Day concludes, "is for Democrats to file for office—the people will do the rest."

Senator Purcell has already announced that he will be a candidate for election to the seat he now occupies at Washington, and George Jones of Edgely and John Bruegger of Williston, prominent and popular Democrats, probably will be nominated for congress.

It is proposed to nominate a full state ticket and take advantage of the shattered condition of the faction torn ranks of the Republican party in the state.

The candidacy of C. M. Cooley for the supreme court has been indorsed by the bar association of Grand Forks county and Mr. Cooley has met with considerable encouragement elsewhere. He is conceded to be amply qualified to serve the state well on the bench.

James E. Jonnson, who is in the field for one of the Republican nominations for congress, has a platform that is not likely to please the standpatters. He says in his formal announcement:

"I believe in the preservation of our country's natural resources.

"I believe in government control of trusts and combinations, who are monopolizing commodities, restraining trade or traffic.

"I believe in a substantial reduction of the tariff on commodities used by people in general; free lumber and wood pulp. In case the revenue received from the tariff does not pay the running expenses of the government the deficiency should be supplied by the income tax.

"I believe in the opening of our rivers for commerce.

"I believe in and will support true economic progressive Republican measures to the best of my ability."

• • •

L. A. Marint, state senator from Billings county, who has been mentioned as a possible Republican nominee for governor, does not feel inclined to sacrifice himself. When in Bismarck several days ago he said that he would not consider the proposal, which has been persistently agitated in the western part of the state. Business engagements would not permit of his entering the race, he said. Mr. Martin is a banker and merchant.

Smith Stimmel of Casselton, who is a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, has discovered at an early stage of the game that it costs money to run for office, and he has come forward with a suggestion that is novel and interesting and calculated to save the candidate from some of the burden of expense entailed by a campaign. In a communication he says:

"A state campaign necessarily involves a canvass of the state to some extent by the candidates, in order that the people of the state may, as far as possible, become acquainted with the candidate for or against whom they are expected to cast their votes; and this canvass should, in my judgment, be more especially for the benefit of the people than for the candidate. To this end, I believe that the primary campaign for the nomination of candidates for state officers should be carried on by the general public, and not by the candidates themselves. In order to do this, I would suggest that the Republican state central committee, for and on behalf of the nominations to be made by the Republicans, arrange for a series of public day meetings at central points throughout the state for the month of June, where the citizens of such communities would be willing to meet the expense of such meetings, to which meetings all regularly enrolled Republican candidates may consider themselves invited, and have a chance to be heard, if they so desire, and in that way give the people a chance to meet and become acquainted with those from among whom they are to select their candidates. I believe that the people would very much enjoy a day of this kind with candidates, and it would enable the candidate to meet a larger aggregation of the people, and at less expense, than they could possibly meet in any other way. This, it seems to me, would be fair for all concerned.

"I would not suggest that such a campaign should be anything in the nature of a joint debate, but that a limited time be given to each candidate present to state his views on any matter of interest in the campaign. The details of such gatherings could be easily arranged.

"It seems to me that the campaign for the nomination of candidates is quite as important as the campaign that is to follow later, and that this is the part of the campaign in which the people ought to take a special interest."

WHITE EARTH, N. D., IS THREATENED BY BAD FIRE.

White Earth, N. D., April 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Almost the entire business district of this city was threatened with destruction when fire originated in a barn on the premises of the White Earth hotel. With a strong wind blowing cinders right into a string of frame buildings, the situation was extremely critical for a time, as the town is lacking in proper fire protection. Two cows and four hogs were cremated in the barn.

Philadelphia, April 27.—Louis Canter pleaded guilty to enticing Dora Rubin, aged 18 years, from New York to this city for immoral purposes, and was sentenced to six years in the county jail.

TO TALK THE MATTER OVER

Leather Workers Will Hold Special Meeting With Employers Thursday.

Duluth Men May Sever Connections With National Organization.

It is probable that after a special meeting of the leather workers of the city to be held Thursday morning at the Kalamazoo hall, they will return to work and the strike that has been going on in Duluth for some weeks, will be over.

In all, there are about 100 men out in the city of Duluth. Tomorrow the employers will meet with the men and it is possible that the dispute will be settled in a manner satisfactory to both sides.

The strike was the result of the demand of the union men that their hours be cut from ten hours daily to nine.

The Marshall-Wells Hardware company and Schulze Brothers are the largest employers of this sort of labor in the city. Both concerns will have representatives present at the meeting to talk matters over with the men.

The leather workers all over the country are out. If the Duluth men decide to go back to work they will sever their connections with the national organization. The national body refuses to allow the men to go back unless the trouble is settled all over the country. The local union, it is understood, has not been satisfied with its national affiliation for some time, and if the members can make terms with their former employers, it is said, that they will drop their affiliation and form a local independent union.

It is stated by some of the local men, that the Duluth concerns were willing in the first place, to shorten the hours, but they objected to being dictated to by outside men.

The local union men claim that they each pay 25 cents a month as dues and that 20 cents of the 25 goes to the support of the national organization. They say they fail to see where they are benefitted by their affiliation and they propose to handle their own money hereafter.

At the meeting tomorrow, the whole matter will be gone over between the men and the employers, and it is expected that the strike will be settled so far as the Duluth leather workers are concerned.

NATION HELPS GROCE'S WIDOW

Knox Orders Aid for Family of Man Killed at Zelaya's Orders.

Washington, April 27.—The widow and four small children of Leonard Groce, who with Leroy Cannon was shot to death some months ago by order of Former President Zelaya of Nicaragua, are destitute, ill and almost entirely friendless in Managua, according to a telegram from Consul Olvares, who states that the consulate is rendering them assistance.

Secretary Knox immediately wired the consul to draw on the state department for sufficient funds to support the widow and children pending future demand on Nicaragua for indemnity. Just when the United States will collect this indemnity, Secretary Knox would not say.

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS HELPING TAKE CENSUS.

Marquette, Mich., April 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Seven of the ten enumerators, who are taking the federal census at Ishpeming, are high school students. The boys do the work outside of school hours five days a week and all day on Saturday. More than the required number of men had applied for the positions, but al except three failed to pass the necessary civil service examination and two days prior to the date of beginning the census the superintendent of schools was called upon for recruits.

The boys took the required test the following day and passed with flying colors. An Ishpeming high school student has also been provided for the work of enumeration in Ishpeming township, and still another one is employed as a stenographer in the office of the supervisor of the census.

THREE DAYS MORE

For Taking the United States Census in Duluth.

HAVE YOU BEEN COUNTED?

Only three days more for taking the United States census in Duluth. The government forces are working at top speed and it is up to the public to give them a clear track. Get ready for the enumerator, if he hasn't called on you yet. Study the list of questions published in The Herald and get your answers ready.

If Jones' family next door has been counted and the enumerator hasn't called on you, perhaps he has missed you. Call up the census bureau in the Commercial club and tell the supervisor about it. If you know of somebody, who is out of the city temporarily and should be included in the population of the city, call up the census bureau and tell the supervisor about it.

Every person counts in taking a census. Duluth is anxious to show its full strength in the final results. Nobody wants any exaggeration, but everybody wants a complete, accurate count, a count that will do the city full justice and put it in its proper classification.

The forces of the government are doing all they can. The enumerators are working as many hours a day as they can and are conscientiously trying to get everybody whose home is in Duluth down on their books. No slipshod methods are being used. Each district is being thoroughly covered and no houses will be missed unless the family is away from home and will not return during the census period. If that is the case, every effort is made to get some information about the family.

Some of the enumerators have finished their work and they are being sent into other districts where there is a doubt of the ability of the enumerator to complete the taking of the census in the district by Saturday night. No chances are being taken. Duluth wants to get into the list of cities of the country with its full strength—no more, no less, and if a careful, systematic enumeration will do it, Duluth will get into its proper class.

QUESTIONS TO BE ANSWERED.

1. Your name in full.....
2. Relationship to the head of the family with which you live .....

(Write boarder, lodger, or servant, or wife, son, daughter, or whatever word describes the relationship.)

20. State whether you are an employer, or a worker for wages, or a salary (employe), or are working on your own account without employing others?.....

(Write employer if you employ any persons other than domestic servants in your own business; write worker if an employe working for wages or a salary; write own account if engaged in any business or occupation, without being either an employer or an employe.)

JAIL SENTENCES FOR RECKLESS CHAUFFEURS

Judge Windom Hands Out Warning in Sentencing Prisoner.

William Hunt Is Fined $50 and Costs for Speeding.

William W. Hunt, chauffeur for Henry Turrish, arrested yesterday for exceeding the speed limit on Third avenue west, was fined $50 and costs, amounting to $56.12, in police court this morning. He paid the fine.

Judge Windom told him that he narrowly escaped a straight jail sentence. The court stated that the only reason that he wasn't put over the hill for ten days straight, was that he wanted to give all fair warning, and he didn't believe in using such drastic measures without giving all a fair show.

Henceforth, however, he announced that chauffeurs brought before him and convicted of driving recklessly will be summarily dealt with, declaring that they will have to serve time in the county jail. Several other chauffeurs were in the courtroom at the time to hear the evidence and he directed their attention to the fact that he meant every word that he said.

"Don't think that because you fellows go flying past me fifty or sixty miles an hour and are not arrested that you are safe," said the court. "My business is not making complaints or investigating crime. I am here to try cases. But bear in mind that when you are brought before me I'll remember you, and I'll know that you are lying if you attempt to say that you have always obeyed the regulations.

"The police cannot stop rank violations of the automobile laws without the assistance of the municipal court. They'll get all the help they need from me. Whenever any chauffeur or man driving an automobile is found guilty of carelessness such as has been prevalent in this city, he will have to suffer the consequences."

Judge Windom then directed his remarks to Hunt's case. He stated that he knew him and recognized the fact that he was a man of mature years, fully capable of handling a machine. "You can probably operate with more safety at twenty miles an hour than many could at eight miles," he explained. "But that is no excuse for the rate you were driving when you were arrested. You were rushing up Third avenue west, one of the busiest thoroughfares in the corporate limits, at about twenty miles an hour, as nearly as I can learn.

"You swung around the corner at First street at reckless speed. Suppose a little girl or boy had been standing there. You would have been unable to see the child and another tragedy would have resulted. At the rate that car was going you couldn't have stopped it in time to avoid a fatal catastrophe."

Snead Case Argued.

Trenton, N. J., April 27.—Argument was heard yesterday before Judge Lanning in the United States court in the habeas corpus proceedings instituted to secure the release from the Essex county jail of Mrs. Mary W. Snead, under indictment in connection with the alleged murder of Ocey W. M. Snead, her niece, who was found dead in a bath tub at East Orange, N. J. No decision was reached.

MAY HAVE TO IMPORT FOOD

Secretary Wilson Talks in New York on General Conditions.

Says Failure of Nation to Support Its Own People Is Possible.

New York, April 27.—Speaking this afternoon at the conference on agricultural conditions in New York state, in the New York Produce exchange, Secretary James Wilson of the department of agriculture urged proper conservation of the soil as the only permanent means of relief from a continuation of the increase in the cost of living.

"We cannot afford to buy food from foreign countries," he said, "and we must see to it that our Western farms produce enough, not only for home consumption, but also to sell abroad and square up the balances of trade."

Secretary Wilson said in part:

"The cost of living calls for careful inquiry into the causes that have operated to b ring about conditions that are new to us as a people. We have had great abundance of food at prices that were lower than most other countries with which we compete in commerce and manufacturing.

Is Disturbing Factor.

"Compensation for skill and labor has been comparatively high in our country; but increased cost of living has become a disturbing factor that cannot be adjusted at present to the satisfaction of those concerned.

"The major part of our people in the East are being fed from the Mississippi valley, and the states of the South draw much from the same source. I am well satisfied that the soils of that valley are being subjected gradually to the same unwise treatment that so seriously reduced the soils east of the Allegheny mountains and south of the Ohio.

"The necessity for education of the farmer is impressed upon our people and steps are being taken in all our states and territories to this end. Sciences are being extended into primary schools in many of our states. Federal and state governments are spending money freely for this purpose and students ar multiplying. The results of research are being printed and a literature of the farm is growing.

Have Overlooked Agriculture.

"The sates east of the Alleghenies are foremost in commerce, manufacture, arts and sciences, wealth and influence. They have overlooked agriculture, permitting their soils to deteriorate and reaching out to the West for food products. The soil robber began his baleful practice there, and has gone westward until the light rainfall regions refuse to yield profitably. The deterioration of Eastern soils would have prevented long ago had there been no cheap rich soils in the Mississippi valley or had demand been closer up to supply. Western lands are dearer and have gone beyond the reach of poor people. The lands of the East and South are reduced in productive power, but they are cheap, they are convenient to good markets, they can be improved and they will be, but the methods by which a farm is improved is quite different from that by which it was reduced. Ignorance permitted the soil to become unproductive; the highest intelligence is required to bring back fertility.

Importation of Food.

"Importation of food will bring about a change in our economies, a revolution of our policies, which may be avoided by better farming and a comprehensive view of the situation by those who deal in big things, whether carrying, commerce, manufacturing or finance.

"Our people are not grouped to advantage. Too many grew crops during the last half of the nineteenth century. Farming was a poor business during that period, and did not invite people. The abundance of meats and grains and low prices for them gave little encouragement to the young farmer to devote his life to agriculture. The farm went to the renter and poverty, because the renter rarely had the capital to maintain conditions that would keep up fertilty. He had a short lease and no inducement to improve.

"Whoever rents land to be handled this way abandons his farm there and then. It becomes poorer every year, until it ceases to yield profitably.

"Every state should organize to conserve fertility of its soils."

D., April 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Finding the circumstances surrounding the death of her father, Jacob Green, a traveling man, in the city hospital so peculiar that she deemed an investigation neecssary, Mrs. Harry Corris of Chicago had a post mortem performed. ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL NEEDS MONEY FOR NEW ADDITION

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL.

St. Mary's hospital needs the money—every cent that the energetic workers can collect next Saturday, which is the "tag day" for the benefit of the institution.

The big building, which the Sisters of St. Benedict have occupied since 1898, has been found too small for the needs of Duluth. Patients are turned away almost daily for lack of room and that is a condition that neither the people of Duluth nor the sisters want to continue.

The new addition, which the sisters plan to build just west of the present hospital building, will have a frontage of seventy-two feet on Third street. It will provide quarters for many patients and will enable the sisters to care for all who appeal to them, whether the patients are rich or penniless. There will be a children's ward in the addition, something that has long been needed in Duluth.

Those having the "tag day" in charge are anxious to raise a large sum to show that the people of Duluth appreciate the work the sisters are doing. The corps of workers will be large enough to cover the entire city and they will make a thorough canvass. No contribution, large or small, will be spurned. The amount of the contributions will be left to the generosity of the givers. The sisters will be thankful for every cent and each contribution will assist in relieving some suffering and enabling the sisters to do well a great work among the ill and injured.

BODY FOUND IN THE RIVER

Rudolph Anderson Who Disappeared March 10, Met Death By Drowning.

Floater Discovered By Steel Plant Workers Is Identified.

Found afloat in the St. Louis river yesterday afternoon by workmen at the steel plant site, the body of a man, identified as Rudolph Anderson, 45 years old and a laboror, was taken to the undertaking rooms of M. J. Filiatrault, Central avenue and Ramsey street, where burial will take place as soon as arrangements are made by his friends.

A slip of paper, evidently from an envelope received by himself in the mail, was the only thing found on his person that served as means of identification. The paper bore the name of Rudolph Anderson with the address of 2828 West Huron street. It was postmarked Feb. 19 of this year.

Inquiries were made today by the authorities at 2628 West Huron street and it was learned that Anderson formerly had received his mail there. He boarded with Andrew Anderson at 2826 West Michigan street, who identified him at the morgue this afternoon. During the early part of the winter, he had lived in the West end and had worked at one of the coal docks. About the last of February he left for New Duluth to work for a contractor at the steel plant site.

When the authorities got into communication today with friends of Anderson at the steel plant site, it was learned that he has been missing since March 10. He was boarding at one of the boarding houses at New Duluth and one day did not show up for work nor did he return to the boarding house to get his belongings. The incident is now recalled by some of his fellow workers.

There is no indication of foul play in connection with the drowning of Anderson. An autopsy was conducted over his body last evening by Dr. David Graham wich showed that he had met his death by drowning and that the body revealed no marks of violence. The body has been in the water about six weeks and had begun to decompose.

Anderson was a single man and had no known relatives in Duluth. He has a brother residing in North Dakota and a sister, Mrs. Johnson, living in St. Paul. They will be notified of his death. A letter sent March 12 from Sweden from his brother John has been received since he was missing. The envelope, which was found in his pockets, was tucked away and might easily have been missed. The only other article found in his pockets was a snuff box. He wore a dark gray coat, and a pair of overalls.

Coroner McCuen viewed the body and decided that no inquest is necessary. The workmen who discovered the body were employed on the new bridge at the steel plant site.

ON THE IRON RANGES

VIRGINIANS ARE VERY INDIGNANT

Brutal Attack Upon Special Officer Wilcox Has Aroused Public Feeling.

Virginia, Minn., April 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—A reward of $750 is offered by David F. Foley, chief of the Oliver Iron Mining company's police department, for the arrest and conviction of one of the men who is alleged to have done most of the cutting in the assault upon Policeman Harry Wilcox last Sunday night.

The name of the man is not known but a description of him is given as follows. A native of Austria; 5 feet 7 inches in height; weight about 150 pounds; long hair; high cheek bones, resembling an Indian, and wearing a dark suit of clothes. Five of the seven men alleged to have been implicated in the assault are in the city jail, the fifth, Joe Sankovitch, having been arrested yesterday.

Wilcox is still in a serious condition but the physicians have hopes of his recovery. The public is incensed over the outrageous assault and a threatening attitude is evinced toward the men who had a hand in affairs. The general opinion is that the guilty parties should receive the full limit of the law.

Ways and means are being devised to stamp out the "blind pigs" existing in some parts of the city and at the mining locations, and a strong effort will be made to accomplish this end. Officers are still scouring the country for the missing man and will not abondon the search until he is found.

FOUR MINERS ARE IN AWFUL PERIL

Riding in Skip and Nearly Precipitated to Bottom of Shaft.

Chisholm, Minn., April 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—J. A. Kennedy, Ray Shape and two others had a narrow escape from an awful death recently at the Hartley mine. They were being hauled from the bottom of the 200 foot shaft in a skip. The engineer failed to hear the bell that should have warned him to cease hoisting and then slowly, but surely ascending skip, was drawn to within three inches of the hoist. Capt. Smith heard the cries of the men and rushing into the engine room pulled the levers and stopped the machinery just in time to save the men from being precipitated to the ground ninety feet below or possibly into the open shaft below. It was a considerable time before the men could be rescued from their awful position.

CHOICE MESABA IRON RANGE PROPERTY SOON TO BE DEVELOPED.

Iron Mountain Mining company of this city is arranging to continue the development of its property in section 20-58-19, adjoining the townsite of Buhl. This property has been leased to the company by August Fitger, P. S. Anneke and John Q. A. Crosby, who are the fee owners.

Mining men of the range say that the property will develop into a big mine, for the reason that it is surrounded by Frantz, Culver and Sharon mines, and drilling on the property has demonstrated that it contains the same formation as the mines adjoining which are big producers.

The company is capitalized at $300,000 and there are 300,000 shares at the par value of $1.00 each. Only so much of the treasury stock will be sold as will be necessary to develop the properties held by the company. Every dollar derived from the sale of the treasury stock will be used wholly and entirely to the development of the properties and its kindred purposes. The company has no paid officers and is free from all debts.

MRS. E. L. RAAB DIES AFTER NIGHT OF TERRIBLE AGONY

Sensational Suicide Plan Ends Fatally After Hours of Suffering.

Took Fatal Dose of Poison in Husband's Room at Hotel.

After hovering between life and death all night, Mrs. E. L. Raab, formerly of Eveleth, who swallowed several bichloride of mercury tablets in her husband's room in the St. Louis hotel yesterday afternoon, died at St. Mary's hospital at 11:45 this morning.

Mr. Raab, against whom a suit for divorce was pending and who was summoned after his wife's attempt to commit suicide was discovered, accompanied the dying woman to the hospital and was with her when she died.

A carefully laid plan to commit suicide so that her dead body would be found in her husband's room in the hotel, failed to work out only in that the attempt was discovered before death had resulted from the fatal poison. Subjected to awful agony by her own act, the woman moaned so loudly that a maid passing in the corridor heard her. The maid notified the management and physicians were hastily summoned. The woman was hurried to the hospital and the resources of medical science were exhausted without avail. After a night of terrible suffering, she died just before noon.

Domestic Troubles Cause.

Domestic troubles are given as the reason for Mrs. Raab's tragic act and the sensational manner in which she carried out her plans.

Her husband is a well known resident of Eveleth, where he has been prominent for years. He was among the first of the settlers on the range and came prominently into the public eye for his share in the Cedar Lake iron cases, which were fought in the courts for years. He has also been a candidate for the state legislature several times. Mrs. Raab's wedding to Mr. Raab was her third matrimonal venture. Her first husband was Shoto Loring of Los Angeles and her second husband was John Howenstine, one of a well known pioneer family of that name at the Head of the Lakes. Her last marriage took place in Duluth three years ago. She is a sister-in-law of Mrs J. H. Harrison of Park Point.

Of rather a literary turn of mind Mrs. Raab wrote much poetry of a somber character. What is alleged to have been somewhat of a gloomy outlook on life was enhanced by much sickness. Shortly after her marriage she had a narrow escape from death following an operation for an ulcerated tooth.

She started her suit for divorce less than a year ago in Owatonna, but it has never come to trial. Brooding over an exaggerated list of wrongs and sufferings is said to have caused her to make up her mind to take her life in the rooms of her husband at the St. Louis hotel, the intention evidently being that he should find her corpse when he entered to retire.

Suit in Courts a Year.

She came to the hotel yesterday from Shakopee, where she had been taking mud baths for heart trouble. She had made her home there since instituting the suit for divorce against her husband.

Entering the hotel she approached the desk with the announcement that she was Mrs. Raab and asked for the key to her husband's room. It was not in the box and she was provided with a pass key, with which she gained admittance. Shortly afterwards she swallowed the deadly poison. Had not the maid heard her moans, her plans would all have been successfully carried out. She had evidently prepared to die and outlined each step of the process.

The letter to her husband asked him to take care of their adopted 2½-year-old son, who is at Owatonna. The letter to the nurse who has had charge of the boy contained instructions as to his care and also money for that purpose.

SEES FRENCH MIMIC WAR

Roosevelt Watches Sham Battle By Troops of the Republic.

Also Visits Art Gallery and Signs Photographs for Pauline Chase.

Paris April 27.—Col. Roosevelt this morning saw a portion of the garrison of Paris perform war operations on the field of Vincennes, outside the gates of that town.

Accompanied by Gen. Dalstein, military governor of Paris, American Ambassador Bacon, M. Jusserand, French ambassador at Washington, and Maj. T. Bentley Mott, military attache at Paris, he drove in an automobile to the famous Chateau of Vincennes, which was built in the twelfth century and is now used as a barracks. Entering the keep he was received with military honors.

Sees Technical Methods.

Here the party, with the exception of M. Jusserand, mounted horses, and, escorted by a platoon of lancers, rode out to the maneuvering field, an open space one and a half miles long lying between the chateau and the forest of Vincennes where a series of evolutions were executed rapidly, under service conditions, in order to give Mr. Roosevelt an opportunity to observe the technical methods of the French army.

Maneuvers simulated an attacking army consisting of a regiment of Chasseurs-a-Pied, a regiment of dragoons, two battalions of infantry and a battery of artillery, in pursuit of a retreating army whose retirement was being protected by three field batteries, a battalion of Zouaves and a battalion of dragoons.

Makes Thrilling Spectacle.

The attackers advanced in open formation under protection of the guns, making frequent rushes, the machine guns attached to each unit firing at the end of every rush. As the rear guard of the retreating army fled before the charge of the dragoons, the spectacle was a thrilling one.

Col. Roosevelt warmly congratulated Gen. Dalstein upon the dash and go displayed by the troops and the admirable fashion in which the operations were executed.

When the maneuvers were concluded the troops defiled before Gen. Dalstein and Col. Roosevelt while the massed bands played the "Star Spangled Banner."

Returning to the embassy for luncheon Mr. Roosevelt stopped for a few minutes at the Salon des Artistes Francais, which will be formally opened on Saturday. Mr. Roosevelt came especially to see George Gray Barnard's group, "The Life of Humanity," which he created for the Pennsylvania state capitol. The jury has given these groups the place of honor, and Mr. Roosevelt felicitated the American sculptor upon his achievment. Accompanied by the president and other officers of the Salon, the former president then made a hurried inspection of the other works in the statuary section.

Signs Name to Photos.

At the request of Pauline Chase, Mr. Roosevelt today autographed a series of his photographs which will be sold at the Actor's fair in New York. He said he had already contributed a gun which he had used in Africa for the fair.

Mr. Roosevelt today accepted the honorary presidency of the American Section of the Franco-American committee, a delegation from which called upon him yesterday.

Sees Aeroplane Flight.

Yesterday, for the first time in his life, ex-President Roosevelt saw an aeroplane flight. It was a very short one, and the aeronaut, Emile Dubonnet, had a narrow escape from injury. Col. Roosevelt journeyed to Isay-Les-Moulineaux as the guest of the Academy of Sports. There a large crowd had gathered, including cabinet ministers and noted aviators. Unfortunately a strong wind was blowing, and it seemed as though the promised flight would have to be abondoned.

Not wishing to disappoint Col. Roosevelt, Dubonnet volunteered to go up in the face of the gale. The ex-president was deeply interested in every detail of the start and he pressed forward as the machine left the ground. The aeroplane had hardly gone 150 yards when it came down with a swoop, almost capsizing as it struck the ground. One of the wings was broken, but Dubonnet was not hurt. Col. Roosevelt rushed forward and offered him his hearty congratulations.

STATE DOCUMENT LIST PUBLISHED

Library of Congress Puts Out New Periodical for Use of Officials.

Washington, April 27.—Another noteworthy publication under government supervision has made its appearance in the form of a periodical list of current documents of the states, territories and insular possessions of the United States. It is published by the library of congress and is entitled "Monthly List of State Publications."

In the first issue, which has just been published, J. David Thompson, calef of the division of documents of the library, says:

"It is hoped that the publication in this form, while serving the library of congress as a record of accessions and an acknowledgment of receipt, will at the same time meet the needs of libraries, legislative reference departments, public officials and others interested in state activities."

Each state library and state and territorial officials who co-operate will be furnished with a copy of the new publication, but beyond these there will be no free distribution. Others desiring the list will be accommodated at a nominal yearly subscription.

UNREST SHOWS IN CHANGSHA

Hunanese Gentry Refuse to Recognize the New Governor.

Changsha, China, April 27.—The governor urged foreigners not to return for thirty days to the districts where native rioting has occurred, but a number have disregarded his warning. The city is quiet, but a feeling of unrest still exists among the natives. Although the Hunanese gentry assert they will refuse to recognize the new governor, the latter declares he can control the situation.

Some Fear Felt in Pekin.

Pekin, April 27.—Reports of the rioting in Hunan province, though suppressed by the native papers, have caused unrest among the servants and coolies, who are said to be leaving Pekin in fear of an uprising in this city. The local authorities give assurance that there is no danger of an outbreak here.

STELLA WOODS TALKS AT KINDERGARTEN MEETING.

St. Louis, Mo., April 27.—Reports of officers and committees of the International Kindergarten union were made at this morning's session of the annual convention. Prof. Edwin A. Starbuck of the University of Iowa, Miss Laura Fisher of Boston and Miss Stella Woods of Minneapolis will speak in the afternoon session.

Worse Than Bullets.

narrated took place two months after the death of Col. Swope. The court overruled the objection.

"Did you ever before sell cyanide of potassium to a physician?" queried Prosecutor Conkling.

"Never," the witness answered.

Hyde the Only Purchaser.

"Did you ever sell in capsule form to anybody but Dr. Hyde?"

"No sir."

Mr. Williams said the customary method of selling the poison was in a solution form, which photographers used.

Attorney Walsh asked but one question on cross-examination—if the poison was ever sold in lump form. The witness said it was not.

John Massaman, another of Breckein's clerks, was next called and corroborated the sale of cyanide to Dr. Hyde on Sept. 13.

Mere man stands little show of getting a seat at the trial these days unless he comes early, very early, and avoids the rush of women.

A woman is backing the prosecution and the majority of the witnesses are women, which probably expains, in a measure, why so many women attend the trial. The women spectators all want to see Mrs. Swope and Mrs. Hyde.

Few Men Attend.

Barring attorneys, there are seldom more than a score of men to be found in the spectators seats. Lawyers are given preference by the marshals in admitting spectators.

At the opening of each sesion the halls are crowded with women. Many women have been present at every sesion of court since the selection of the jury began more than two weeks ago, and the majority of them bring their lunches and remain in their seats all day in order to retain their places.

One old woman pleaded with tears in her eyes to be admitted. She was refused. She whispered to the marshal that she would send him a nice present if he would only admit her to the courtroom. He admitted her. The present came next day by messenger. It was a cigar.

INSURGENTS COQUETTES?

what do our friends mean? Are they in earnest, or are they simply flirting and coquetting with us? Is it merely a temporary engagement, or is it a permanent love affair?

"Is the senior senator from Indiana, for instance, embracing us simply for the ecstacy and transport of the moment, or is he willing to unite with us in the holy bonds of holy political wedlock? I would like to know from him what his future intentions are. Whenever we have voted with him I have noticed that he cast a radiant smile, that is full of meaning, in our direction; but is this merely the symptom of a momentary passion, or is it the token of permanent affection?"

"Thrilled by Recitals."

"I do not know how the rest of my colleagues feel, but I am becoming weary of being fondled and caressed, only to be rejected and deserted when the supreme moment arrives. When I listen to the siren voices of the intrepid and dashing insugrents from Iowa, I am thrilled with the rehearsal of the crimes of the Republican party. I knew it all along before they told me, but they have recited it with such dramatic fervor and with such harrowing details, that the indignant blood has surged through my veins, and they have my profoundest sympathy for belonging to a party that is governed by such demoralizing influences."

Mr. Rayner formally invited the insurgents to come into the Democratic camp.

"We offer you a party that is perfectly pure and that has passed beyond the stage of temptation" he said. "We want you and want you badly."

Through many sleepless nights Mr. Rayner said, he had thought over his proposition. At first he had been of the opinion that the Democrats might themselves solve the problem by going over to the insurgents, but their experience in connection with the railroad rate bill had been such that they could not pursue such a course with assurance of safety.

Deserted by "The Ship."

"It will be recalled," he said, "that in the railroad rate debate, under the leadership of ex-President Roosevelt, we joined hands with the insurgent forces of the Republican party. The last words the ex-president said to me, when we were conferring over the critical situation, were: 'Now, don't give up the ship.'

"Mr. President, I took his advice and did not give up the ship, but the ship gave me up. The night before the vote was taken, the president was out in a lifeboat with the senior senator from Rhode Island and the junior senator from Massachusetts. When the vote was taken we discovered that upon the evening before the president had ordered these two sturdy sailors to man the lifeboats, and before he stepped into it he had scuttled the ship and made for the shore in the company of these distinguished mariners.

"Now, we do not want any more combinations like these. We want the insurgents to come to us, and we will pilot them to a safe deliverance. Let the senior senator from Indiana not stop with administering a circuitous blow beneath the belt; that is mere mutiny; that is not rebellion. That is magnificent, but it is not war."

POLITICAL PROPHETS SAY ROOSEVELT WILL TAKE DEPEW'S PLACE

widely discussed, though no one was willing to take the matter up directly with the president. In view of the efforts that are being made in some quarters to array Col. Roosevelt against Mr. Taft, it would manifestly be a delicate thing at this time to broach the subject to the president or to attempt to secure an opinion from him.

Could Help Taft.

Friends of the administration, however, who are still confident that Mr. Roosevelt will lend aid to the president, pointed out today the fact that, as a United States senator, the returning African hunter would become a power in the administration and his support in the upper branch of congress would mean a wonderful strengthening of Mr. Taft's hands.

the others, under the timber and stone act.

Terminal Question Raised.

The controversy grows out of the question as to whether the railroad terminated at Duluth, Minn., or Ashland, Wis. The railroad had filed on the tracts east of Duluth before the question of terminus came up. When the department ruled that the terminus was at Duluth, the government cancelled the selection of the railroad to these parcels. The individual claimants then filed upon them. The Hoyt and Wass applications were accepted, but the Campbell application was rejected.

Finally when the supreme court decided that the terminus was at Ashland, the department approved of the selections of the railroad. Suits were brought in the federal courts by Hoyt and Campbell. A decision was given in favor of Hoyt but against Campbell. In the state courts a decision was given in favor of Wass on the strength of the Hoyt case. All these cases have been brought to the supreme court for review.

TUG TOSSED BY THE GALE

Captain of Zenith Tells of Harrowing Experience During Storm.

Stood for Eighteen Hours Without Rest, at the Wheel.

Some idea of the storm that raged over Lake Michigan last Friday and Saturday can be gleaned from an interview from Capt. A. A. Stannard of the tug Zenith of Duluth, which had a most harrowing experience in the fierce gale.

The Zenith left Chicago for Duluth last Friday with a barge in tow. The weather was fair when the tug left the Chicago harbor. Not very long after the voyage had begun Capt. Stannard saw that trouble was in sight, but believing that the storm would not be too severe for the little tug, refused to turn back. Before the afternoon was half over it was plainly apparent that the storm would be too severe for the tug.

The interview of the captain will show how severe was the storm.

"We were beaten out of our course the first night after we left Chicago," said Capt. Stannard, "and from that time on it was simply a matter of saving the lives of the crews of the two vessels. Near Holland, Mich., the boats parted and life savers rescued the crew of the barge, and the vessel was towed into Holland."

The Zenith returned to Chicago after a continuous battle with the storm of sixty hours. The tug was sighted by the steamship Harvard several miles north of Chicago and towed into port.

"It was one of the worst storms which I have ever been caught in," continued Capt. Stannard. "The wind came up like a tornado from the northeast Friday afternon, and by night it seemed as if the tug was doomed. She has powerful englnes, but they did not seem to be able to do much, and the two vessels wallowed in troughs of water between waves which seemed mountain high. There was one time for a stretch of eighteen hours that I stood in the pilothouse and held the wheel all alone, and I tell you it was a tough job. It took all my strength to keep the tug nosed in her course. The wheel veered at every fresh bombardment of the wind. We lost the barge Saturday night She was manned by Capt. Knox alone. I didn't have any idea what happened to her, although I did not fear as much for her as for the Zenith. The barge is a stout craft, and I figured that she could keep afloat.

"Soon after we lost the barge things began to happen for us. We shipped water, and all our crew were kept busy bailing. Then the coal crib gave away and the coal came rolling down to the engine, threatening fire. We had to work like madmen stowing that coal away. When the Harvard sighted us Sunday morning we were the happy boys. I heard later that the barge had been rescued."

MORE VESSELS JOIN BLOCKADED FLEET.

Sault Ste Marie, Mich., April 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The blockaded fleet below the locks was increased during the night through the arrival of the vessels which had been held up below by the storm. The blockade will undoubtedly continue until Saturday or Sunday, when the American locks are expected to open.

The tug Gazelle caught fire yesterday and before the flames could be extinguished, a $1,000 loss was sustained. There was insufficient steam in the boilers for the hose and a bucket brigade had to fight the fire.

STEAMER IOWA IS RELEASED.

So far as known the boat was not damaged by its experience.

The Iowa was taken to Racine and will probably be dry-docked at Manitowoc.

MANY BOATS BRING COAL

Docks at Head of the Lakes Almost Cleared During Winter.

Railroads Will Attempt to Move Supply West Early.

Coal cargoes make up the bulk of the west bound lake freight business at the present time. One of the reasons for the great activity in the coal-carrying trade is the fact that there is a scarcity of coal at the Head of the Lakes and great supplies of coal at many of the Erie ports.

There was a large list of coal arrivals yesterday and today, with the report of more at the Soo. The rate on coal cargoes is not very high at the present time, and with the probability that the coal rate will increase with the rapid increase of business that is expected, shippers are making the most of the present situation.

As stated in The Herald some time ago, the docks at the Head of the Lakes are practically cleaned out. They have not been in such good condition to receive coal for many years. Until the docks here and in Superior get a very heavy supply of fuel, coal men here do not believe that the movement in coal cargoes will show any signs of decrease.

Coupled with the present condition of the coal docks at the Head of the Lakes, there is the report that the railroads of the Northwest will make an especial effort early this fall to get a supply of coal into the Western states.

The Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Omaha made a special effort to accomplish this last fall, but were not entirely successful in their efforts. The coming fall it is said that redoubled efforts will be made in this attempt. Naturally this report being received here has had its effect upon the coal situation at the Head of the Lakes, and will probably result in an early heavy coal business.

The outfit of the Northern Dredge & Dock company has arrived at Ontonagon, Mich., where the work will be completed on the harbor. "CHIMES OF NORMANDY" Boat Club Opera Delights Large Audience at the Lyceum.

Local Talent Presents Old Favorite in Most Creditable Manner.

"The Chimes of Normandy" rang out last night with a tinkling, silvery tone that delighted the ear, while the optic sense was overjoyed by the array of feminine loveliness, not to mention the scenic investiture of the clever offering, which will be seen again tonight.

Few operas have been seen here during the current season that have contained better singing voices than the amateur cast of the production that was staged under the auspices of the Duluth Boat club. Not only did the company contain vocal strength, but the acting was better than the brand generally expected from those aspiring thespian of the simon pure amateur ranks.

There was but little drag in the performance of last night. For a first night show, it went off splendidly. The performance was a credit to both the producers, Messrs. Howell and Tyler, and also and more so, to the amateur talent of the city. There are few cities that could have produced talent better than that shown last evening.

Mrs. Harriet Nobles Webber is—one hesitates to find just the right word—bewitching, delicious or dainty, which you will, or all. Mrs. Webber has a spontaniety that is refreshing. She is naive and has an infectious comedy touch that would bring a laugh from even a Cannon supporter.

The young woman in question was all tied up in the character of Serpollette. Her mispronounciation of French would even get a raise from a newly rich matron in her first siege of society.

Dr. Emil Bromand is not very tall, but really he was every inch a hero. That mustache was so cute, and the doctor has a voice that fits the role of a hero to the very smallest detail. Dr. Bromand had several solos, and his duet work with Miss Rae Potter was received with hearty and loud-voiced appreciation.

There was a northwest storm signal hung at the right of the proscenium, but when the doctor got into the heroic work he paid no attention to this. He was a hero to the last, and in those little love touches with which the part is prolific the doctor was great. He showed an ease and easy stage presence that was surprising for an amateur. One could elaborate on the doctor's work, but lack of space forbids.

Miss Rae Potter has a voice that would be a credit to any one in professional circles. Her singing was perhaps the feature of the performance. She has a range that is surprising; her phrasing is exceptionally good; and added to her very excellent singing is an easy and gracious stage presence. Miss Potter's role could hardly have been in more capable hands.

A. E. Bjorquist has a voice that is clear and sweet. In his speaking part he also possessed an uprising inflection that brought ripples of mirth from the audience. Mr. Bjorquist received several encores for the very good work he did.

Louis Dworshak in the part of Gaspard had the opportunity for some acting, of which he made the most. His scene in the chateau in the second act was good and received warm commendation from the audience. Mr. Dworshak also had some vocal work that was in keeping with the work of the other principals.

Don Cole had the role of the Registrar. One might say that the role of the Registrar is a taxing part. However, Mr. Cole taxed the village folks only, for his work was pleasing and easy, free from affectation, and his singing was very good. Mr. Cole's makeup was also very good.

Ray Abbott as the Bailiie furnished a bit of comedy that was appreciated, although his work could hardly be classified as that of the expressed school of acting.

Then there was the company. Its size makes individual mention impossible. It can only be said that the work of the chorus was excellent. The ensemble singing was better than that heard here in professional offerings, and this statement doesn't stretch the truth in the interests of home industry.

One of the features that should not be overlooked was the ancestral armor. The armor was mishaved last evening, and moved off the stage before the given time. It was one of the best things the ancestral armor did.

DANISH AUTHORITY ON DAIRYING MAY SPEAK HERE.

Prof. Bernhard Boeggild, the famous Danish authority on dairying and milk supply, who will visit the United States during May, June and July, will probably speak in Duluth. The Duluth Commercial club is making an effort to induce the Danish-American association to put Duluth on Prof. Boeggild's itinerary. He is connected with the Royal Danish Agricultural College of Copenhagen, Denmark, and will deliver a series of lectures at a number of universities and agricultural colleges, at the same time studying American methods and conditions. Prof. Boeggild will also visit Danish-American settlements of the Middle West and Northwest, delivering lectures in Danish.

Enjoy Your Meals

By Simply Eating a Little Pleasant Tablet After Each of Them.

A Tablet Digests a Meal—Trial Package Free.

When digestion is perfect the fluids necessary to this process come naturally to the aid of the stomach. They are of right proportion and do their work speedily and well. When indigestion and dyspepsia are prevalent, these same juices come slowly if at all, are weak and insufficient or are filled with strong acids and alkalies.

When such a condition exists each meal is a hardship upon the digestive organs. The meal should strengthen the juices, but on the contrary it weakens them, so that man by the very act of eating causes conditions to arise which of themselves bring pain and loathing for the next meal.

By eating one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets you mix the tablet with your saliva and it goes into your stomach a strong, vigorous fluid, many times more powerful than the natural digestive juices. These tablets are made up from natural vegetable and fruit essences and are composed from Hydrastis, Golden Seal, Lactose, Nux, Aseptic Pepsin and Jamaica Ginger. There is the formula and one grain of it will digest 3,000 grains of food in any stomach. Beside digesting the food it will give the blood the power to enrich the digestive fluids so after a time nature will take care of itself. Though you have no stomach trouble one of these tablets after each meal is a powerful assistance to nature and is an excellent habit to make.

Go to any druggist and ask his opinion of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. We will abide his answer if he be an honest man. They sell for 50c per package. Send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

MARK TWAIN LED CHARGE ON MULE

Old Friend of Humorist Relates Incident of War Times in Missouri.

Grand Forks, N. D., April 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Capt. J. R. Parsons of this city was well acquainted with the late Samuel Clemens, "Mark Twain." Capt. Parsons first met him on the trip down the Mississippi river on which Clemens was a pilot. Parsons frequently would go up to the pilot house for the opportunity of a conversation with the young pilot and passed many enjoyable hours with him.

Later Clemens and Parsons were both residents of Hannibal, Mo., and from that place went together into the service of the Confederacy under Gen. Mulligan. The captain relates an interesting incident of a gallant charge which Clemens made at the head of his company. Orders had been received to go into camp on the opposite side of the river, and with an intimation that there was plenty of "grub" at the new camp, Clemens, who was mounted on a mule, without waiting for instructions started for the river on his mule pell mell, yelling that company orders were to follow him.

He plunged into the river without a halt and succeeded in piloting his mount across after a long swim and made a raid on the camp supplies without waiting for the other members of the company. Soon after Clemens went to Nevada and into newspaper work and Parsons was detailed for recruiting service and they never afterward met.

Mr. Knudsen will immediately begin building a creamery here, and is now looking for a crew of men to assist him in the speedy erection of the much-needed and desired establishment. The creamery will be equipped with the latest improved machinery. The factory will be located on Fourth street, near the A. F. Murray property. Mr. Knudsen is also figuring on manufacturing ice cream for the local trade at least.

State Forestry Board Starts Future Forest Near Brainerd.

St. Paul, Minn., April 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state forestry board has just completed the planting of 20,000 Scotch pine seedlings on the Pillsbury reserve near Brainerd. The seedlings were planted at the rate of 2,000 to the acre, thus covering fifteen acres. This makes over 500,000 pine that have been planted by the board in the last few years. The cost of the seedlings was $3 per thousand, which with the express from the nursery, made the cost $107, plus the work of planting.

Scotch pine was the only kind that could be secured from the nurseries. The seed comes from Europe. Gen. C. C. Andrews says that the nurseries can get seed from there more easily because the people have learned to take care of it. The Scotch pine, he says, makes almost as good trees as the white or Norway pine.

WHAT'S BACK OF INSURGENCY.

Attorney General Wickersham, in behalf of the administration, having undertaken to read the insurgents out of the Republican party, Senator Clapp, who is a fairly recent recruit but is working industriously at the business of insurgency, spoke his mind about the Wickersham challenge during a speech in the senate yesterday.

He said that if Mr. Wickersham were taken at his word, the effect of his speech would be to read out of the party the greater part of its following.

Senator Clapp told the truth. Men like Wickersham who look upon insurgency in congress as a slight local disease of the party organization are like doctors who treat symptoms and disregard the deepseated constitutional ills that make the symptoms. If the great majority of the rank and file of the Republican party were not insurgent because of their sickened disgust with the atrocities of the system that rules the party, there would be no La Follettes, no Cumminses, no Beveridges, no Murdocks and no Lindberghs. These so-called insurgent leaders are not, in fact, leaders at all; they are men who have seen the handwriting on the wall, who have heard the mutterings of the people, and who are following, not leading, the trend of public sentiment.

If every insurgent in congress were wiped out by the wrath of the Wickershams and Cannons and Aldriches, the situation would remain unchanged. The people still would be insurgent, and more wrathful and determined in their insurgency than before.

What is back of insurgency is a deepseated and far-reaching discontent among a people which has found that its servants are treacherous and that its public business has been prostituted to the service of a greedy few. With that discontent is a growing purpose to change this situation, a purpose which cares little about party organizations or party names, but a great deal about results.

A CHANGE IN THE WEATHER.

For many years The Herald's daily story of the weather has appeared on this page. Within the past week it has been moved to the local pages, and augmented by a daily map to which the attention of readers is directed in the belief that they will find it interesting and profitable.

This map, which is to replace the map which has in the past been circulated to a small extent through the community, puts the story of the weather in a nutshell. It may seem a bit complicated to some at first glance, but it isn't a bit complicated. It gives the whole situation at a glance, and by its use weather conditions anywhere in the country can be ascertained.

For instance, during the recent unseasonable cold snap, there was much public interest in the extent of the cold weather. The map shows each day the boundaries of the belt in which freezing weather occurs. Yesterday freezing weather was confined to two small areas, one in the southeast and another in the southwest. The day before that the freezing belt extended across the country and far into the south. These "isotherms," later on, will outline the extent of territory covered by 90-degree weather.

The circles, with accompanying figures, tell the weather conditions at all points. A plain circle means clear weather, a circle half dark means partly cloudy, and a circle all black means cloudy. All these points are explained on the map. It is worth while studying, and after it has once been mastered, a glance will tell the story every day.

THE TUBERCULOSIS PATIENT.

The other evening a local story in The Herald told the story of a sufferer from tuberculosis who is taking care of himself and his associates by heeding essential rules, and who finds himself shunned because his careful efforts betray his condition.

As he should, this man carries a "spitting cup," and expectorates into it instead of upon the sidewalks or street car floors. Thus he prevents any possibility of contagion.

Yet because he does this wise and thoughtful thing, he reports that his friends avoid him and that strangers, when they see him use his sanitary methods, walk widely by him as though he were a leper.

Nobody can blame this man for protesting. Those who have forced him to protest are working, without their knowledge, to their own undoing. It is obvious that if this man neglected reasonable precautions, and expectorated wherever he happened to be, he might pass as a fairly healthy person, and nobody would avoid him. If he looks ill, in all probability few would suspect his ailment to be tuberculosis.

By taking the precautions described, this man makes himself as safe a companion as anybody. By neglecting them, he would make himself a walking peril. Yet the attitude of his friends will force him, unless he is of uncommonly strong character and possessed of unusual regard for the welfare of his neighbors, to abandon his precautions and do as the ignorant do.

It is to be hoped, for the sake of the winning fight that is being made against consumption, that the absurd superstition behind the fear this man's commendable caution arouses will quickly be outgrown. This case makes it clear that education is needed a little outside of the lines of the educational program carried on by the anti-tuberculosis organizations. The fact that tuberculosis is contagious has been established, and that is much to the good. What needs further to be established is the fact that it is the careless tuberculous person who is dangerous, and that the careful patient is as safe as a healthy person.

"WHY IS A MISSIONARY?"

Our old friend who signs himself "Lakesider," and who contributes more or less sapient but always piquant thoughts on things in general to the Open Court from time to time, demands to be told "Why is a missionary?"

He informs the public that his father was a good churchman and a contributor to missions, and that he himself, when grown to man's estate,—we are glad to know that "Lakesider" has reached man's estate,—"joined the great army of missionary supporters, blindly and unthinkingly," because "I inherited my religion, like I did my politics, and that's about all I did inherit."

If "Lakesider" inherited the kind of religion shown in his communication last night, he didn't inherit much. Because civilization has not yet grown perfect, he would deny barbarism the present benefits of civilization. Because the Christian religion hasn't yet solved all the problems of civilized humanity, he would withhold it from the benighted heathen. Reasoning backward,—which would be just as logical as "Lakesider's" reasoning forward,—one must reach the conclusion that Christianity is a mistake and civilization a sham, and that there never has been any real progress in all the world.

These are very superficial observations with which "Lakesider" endows the world, and it is not to be wondered at that, as he says, he "purposely withheld this letter until after the laymen's missionary convention had adjourned." His delay was a bit of discretion that does his intelligence credit. If he really wanted to know the reason for missions, why didn't he inquire while the convention was in progress? There were men at that convention much better fitted to answer his question than any mere editor.

"Lakesider's" argument that the naked savage in the jungle is as well off as the average dweller in civilization is the opinion either of a very young or of a very flippant person. Civilization is progress; barbarism is stagnation. Out of progress and civilization grows the flower of human hope, rooting though it does in the noisome depths of civilization's nether side. Out of barbarism and stagnation grows nothing but brute ignorance and vileness, unless civilization is planted there.

The Christian religion, whose torch it is the noble purpose of the Christian missionary to carry into the dark places of the earth, is the germ of all enlightenment and progress. It hasn't yet brought about perfect equality and a fair distribution of the benefits of civilization; but that is not because it is defective, but because it hasn't been practically applied. That there is hunger in Rome and London and New York and Paris is not the fault of the religion of Christ, but it is the fault of those who have failed to apply it to economic conditions. If the Golden Rule were the basis of all law, and its spirit the purpose of the relationship between men, there would be no hunger in civilization and few dark places in the world.

The pages of history are full of the noble acts of missionaries, and the story of human progress is full of their splendid achievements. To win the world for Christ is a splendid ambition, and all over the world today missionaries are suffering and sacrificing to that end.

If "Lakesider" had said that efforts to Christianize barbarism should be accompanied by stronger efforts to Christianize civilization, and especially to Christianize industry by the leaven of the Golden Rule, he would have stood on more solid ground. At it is he has only given vent to unreasonable and unreasoning prejudice and misunderstanding.

BJORNSTJERNE BJORNSON.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson, who died yesterday, was not only the greatest living Norwegian author, but he was a great creator whose work is the world's possession, not that of a single nation. He delved deeply in the rich mine of real humanity, his work inspired, as all great work must be, by a fundamental faith in humanity and an abiding belief in democracy. Though Ibsen's is a more commanding figure in the drama, Bjornson's genius was broader and better equipped than even Ibsen's. Isben was a great dramatist; Bjornson was a great dramatist, a great novelist, a great poet and a great publicist.

DISCORD IN DIVORCE LAWS.

In his letter to The Herald, published last evening, James K. Hackett, the actor, presents his side of the divorce case in which he figured recently, and incidentally points out, without intending to do so, one of the beauties of the discord of state laws on the subject of divorce.

Accompanying the divorce decree was a legal order forbidding Mr. Hackett to remarry. Coming from the judge who granted the divorce, one might suppose that order would settle it. Not so. Says Mr. Hackett: "The prohibition to remarry, as voiced in the decree, is merely a legal form and technical point under the laws of New York state, and does not prohibit my remarriage at any time in any other state or country."

This is true, probably. In New York Mr. Hackett and the ex-Mrs. Hackett are no longer married, but Mr. Hackett is still married enough so that he cannot marry again. But Mr. Hackett could go over the line into New Jersey and marry again, and the marriage would be regarded as legal in that state. If he took his new wife back to New York, under the law of that state their marriage would be as though it never had happened, with all the disagreeable complications of a relationship between man and woman not recognized by the law. In other words, if Mr. Hackett remarries in another state, he will be a married man in that state, but in New York he and his wife will be considered as living in an unlawful relationship.

All of which seems to be a pretty fair reason why some effort should be made to harmonize the divorce laws of this land; not in the interest of Mr. Hackett and the possible future Mrs. Hackett, but in the interest of decency.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

THE FIREMEN'S CASE.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Kindly allow me space in your open court column to express my feelings as regards our fire department. In the city briefs of The Herald of Saturday evening, April 23, was a brief headed "Superior men better paid." Our city is a great deal larger than the city of Superior. Our city is making greater strides toward being the largest city in the Northwest, while Superior is hardly advancing at a snail's pace. Yet, while we are enjoying this great boom in the growth of our city, we have forgotten entirely our public servants. We have forgotten that our firemen are poorly paid. The city of Superior pays its firemen a salary of $85.83. Superior gives the men twenty-four hours off duty in every seven days. Their vacations are divided into a summer vacation and a winter vacation of seven days each. In Duluth the firemen get paid at the rate of $80 per month. They get one day off in every ten days, with fourteen days' vacation, the vacation to be taken between the first day of April and the first day of October. The Duluth fireman must pay more for house rent, more for groceries, fuel and clothes; he must have a tailor-made uniform at a cost of $30. Just think for a suit of clothes to work in he must pay $30. How many men in Duluth pay $30 for their working clothes? And at that he does not get the salary that his brother fireman gets across the bay.

Why is it? There must be something wrong somewhere. Why do not the city counsel or the board of fire commissioners look into the matter. Why cannot a city of this size pay its firemen a fair wage? How can they be expected to keep up with the rapid growth of this city when foodstuffs and wearing apparel are soaring at top-notch prices? Why can they not have better "offs?"

Do the citizens at large think that the fireman is well paid at $80 per month, when he must spend so much of his wages for uniforms, boots, nightpants, rubber coats, helmet, belts, etc.?

Is it not time that the public spirited citizens of this city demand that the firemen be given a raise in wages and better time off? It is for the best interest of this city and everybody in it that this should be done. It is for a greater Duluth. "Do It for Duluth." Yours truly, thanking you in advance.

WELL WISHER.

Duluth, April 25.

TRADER CAR SYSTEM IS SUGGESTED FOR DULUTH.

To the Editor of The Herald:

More than twenty years ago I had a pamphlet printed showing that the Duluth method of getting farm products, (or marketing), not only made it very high priced, but that the money thus expended went so far from Duluth that it never got back again, operating on the city something like the hook worm on the vitality of the Georgia cracker.

My proposition was to authorize market cars to operate between city and country, bringing in country produce and taking back in return city supplies in retail quantities. But it (my proposition) met with a hostile reception and I dropped it.

A change of sentiment appears to have taken place. Many people who opposed me now say that I was right, and ask me if I have any pamphlets left, so that I have concluded to outline in part my system for their benefit.

My suggestion would be to secure concessions from the railroads in favor of car traders owning and operating their own cars; let the roads give them the privilege of transporting garden, dairy and poultry products, also railroad ties, pulpwood, fence posts and cordwood at a merely nominal rate for loco motive power and switching charges, say for a period of twelve or fifteen years. Let the city provide a siding at some suitable place on which the cars could stand free of charge until they disposed of their loads.

Make the toll so low that the trader could afford to load up with cordwood, in case no higher class commodity could be obtained.

The effect of this would be to give each settler within the prescribed limit, (say within forty miles of Duluth), a source of revenue on his own farm sufficient to keep him going until he had his land cleared and could raise crops. The long winter would be a period of profitable use of his axe.

The railroads would get their compensation from the concession by having the forests along their lines converted into fields. Say 1,200 or 1,500 farms within forty miles of Duluth, which, when under cultivation would furnish a profitable freight and passenger traffic.

I have seen the trader car system in operation, and vouch for it as a profitable arrangement for the city, country and railroads as well.

These traders could inaugurate and carry on a flourishing business which would not be practicable if undertaken by a combination of country merchants, city merchants and transporters, dividing the business among them.

I believe it would be the means of converting the forest around Duluth into a thickly settled highly cultivated country in a very few years, after which the concession for nominal rates could be annulled, or the rates raised.

When a "railroader" some fifty years ago, I had the opportunity to study the operation of this system of business, witnessed its success, and believe it is just what is needed to open out the regions about Duluth.

ANOTHER TAKES UP CUDGELS AGAINST "MAGNETO."

To the Editor of The Herald:

Referring to the "Auto Owners' Side of the Case," in last evening's paper: If the much abused auto owners have so much trouble with their brakes and get confused, etc., in operating them, why not have a law whereby they will be compelled to come to a complete stop at all crossings in the business district, just as the street cars do? If this was carried out, they would not be able to get up such speed between crossings as to necessitate their using their brakes at all. This, of course, is simply a suggestion. Might also add in this connection, that the business district is no place to show your friends, who are so eager for a ride—as it was intimated in the article in question—how fast your machine is capable of going.

As to the pedestrians walking right in front of moving autos, etc., intentionally, don't believe there are very many people who are so anxious about being killed or seriously injured, as to stand in the path of automobiles that run at such a clip as they do in this city. The teams don't seem to have any trouble in this respect. M. R.

The People's Inning.

New York Press: Some day the American people may abandon in despair the experiment of their republic, either to set up a king in Washington or cheerfully to accept a system of minor sovereignties under the empty forms of democracy. In the latter case the president and the speaker will hold office for life, with power to pick their successors. Reincarnated Platts and Quays and Hannas will rule their states by warrant from Washington, and brutal ability to seize power by sufferance of the people will be the only limit to concentration of authority in the hands of the few. Yet that pessimistic prospect seems still very remote, for nearly every time that any phase of the broad issue of Democracy vs. Despotism is raised, the American people vindicate their fitness to rule by assuming the rulership. They are putting down the mightiest from their seats in every case where might is not founded on the right of the people to control their affairs.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Statesmen Are Needed.

Worthington Globe: "Down with the politicians and nature fakirs" is the cry of the day. The country is in need of statesmen. Men who will stand by the people after election as well as before. Men of integrity and ambition to do something. Men who do not seek the plaudits of the press and people and the "vainglory in foreign wars" but men who are applauded because deserving. Men who are willing to do something for their country's sake and whose soul's ambition is not "how much is it worth to me?" We want men who do not think they have a job for life because they have held office for several years. Their offices may need investigation and when the bump comes it will be hard to save the pieces. We are in favor of house cleaning.

Bob May; Others May Not.

Fairmont Sentinel: Even the temporary and permanent chairman of the Republican state convention have already been selected by the powers that be. The delegates will meet, ratify the slate and platform already prepared by Ed Dar and Bill Grimshaw, adjourn, pay their hotel bills and go home.—Princeton Union.

And we suppose Brother Dunn will go home from the state convention and holler his head off for the straight ticket.

Bob Dunn for Speaker.

Park Rapids Clipper: It has been suggested that R. C. Dunn of Princeton be elected to the legislature and made speaker of the house. Such a turn of the political wheel of fortune would mean that the people would get a square deal and that there would be something doing at the next session in the way of good roads legislation, reapportionment, state development, etc.

Party Treason Often Is Patriotism.

Sauk Rapids Sentinel-Free Press: To read some of the standpat exchanges we would think that men were bound to political parties by solemn oaths of allegiance as sacred and inviolable as the foreigner takes when he applies for citizenship in this republic, and that criticism of the 'head of the party" was a crime to be classed with treason or piracy on the high seas.

A Blast from Bob.

Princeton Union: Some of the little hireling newspaper editors are working overtime to convince the bosses that they, the little hirelings, are earning their hire by damning Bob Dunn and other Republicans who do not worship at the shrine of the accidental governor.

Insurgents Serve the People.

Le Sueur News: It is a mistake to suppose the insurgents in congress are leading the people. They are merely serving them. They hear the voice at home and obey. They are trying to earn their salary by obedience, even if nothing stands to their credit on the record sheet.

A Dangerous Precedent.

Mankato Free Press: John Carter's verses having obtained his release from the penitentiary, poets are springing up in almost every prison in the country.

The People Want Results.

Warroad Commonwealth: The Republican bosses seem to forget that the people want certain things and don't care at all what party they get them through. But the bosses will wake up the morning of the 9th of next November to find that the people have forgotten, to a great extent, that there ever was a Republican party.

The Succession in Rhode Island.

Boston Traveler: Following the authorized announcement of the coming retirement of Senator Nelson W. Aldrich, a natural curiosity arises as to who is likely to succeed him. Because of the prominence altogether disproportionate to its size that Rhode Island has attained in the direction of senate affairs for the past score of years, the identity of the new senator will be a source of greater general interest than would be the choice of a representative to the upper branch of the congress from almost any other state.

Unless Rhode Island changes its methods greatly during the next few months it will be safe to say he will be a man of wealth and almost equally certain that he will not be a man to set the senate buzzing with excitement upon his arrival. How many people outside the state know today the name of this junior senator? Yet George Peabody Wetmore has held his seat for several terms. Rhode Islanders do not know him very well, because he does not live in Rhode Island, except for that brief period in the summer during which rich "cottagers" open their residences at Newport. He is a New Yorker, chosen to represent Rhode Island at Washington because he was amiable, a millionaire and willing to take his opinions from Mr. Aldrich or Gen. Brayton without confusing argument.

The Rhode Island machine has not been noted for the high degree of ability it requires from its candidates. For many years—until the growth of Democracy and Republican insurgency forced the leaders to meet the situation squarely—it had a procession of governors who were never accused of being mental giants, but whose pocketbooks responded cheerfully to the exigencies of the campaigns. Unless there is a totally unexpected uprising on the part of Rhode Island Republicans, it is to be feared that the state will succeed Aldrich with another Wetmore, whose voice is heard on the senate floor only in rollcalls and requests for leave to print.

How to Ask and Have.

"Oh, 'tis time I should talk to your mother,
Sweet Mary," says I.
"Oh, don't talk to my mother," says Mary,
Beginning to cry;
"For my mother says men are deceivers,
And never, I know, will consent;
She says girls in a hurry who marry
At leisure repent."

"Then suppose I would talk to your father,
Sweet Mary," says I.
"Oh, don't talk to my father," says Mary,
Beginning to cry;
"For my father, he loves me so dearly,
He'll never consent I should go—
If you talk to my father," says Mary,
"He'll surely say 'no. "

"Then how shall I get you, my jewel,
Sweet Mary," says I;
"If your father and mother's so cruel,
Most surely I'll die."
"Oh, never say die, dear," says Mary;
"A way now to save you I see;
Since my parents are both so contrary--
You'd better ask me."

When Mooney Stings the Ball.

When Murphy bunts, and gets to first,
We cheer his feat with pride;
The ball twists slowly down the line
And never rolls outside.
When Casey makes a sacrifice,
His deftness moves us all.
But oh, the real hi-hi-ing comes
When Mooney stings the ball!

For Mooney has a nervous way
Of handling his bat.
The pitchers hate to watch his eyes.
They don't know where they're at.
He stands there ready with the stick
Upon the sphere to fall,
And, oh, the crowd lets out a yell
When Mooney stings the ball.

Yes Mooney was designed by fate
To make the pitchers mourn.
The foxy inshoots and the wides
He lets pass by with scorn.
He stands regardless of the crowd,
The strikes, the umpire's call,
Until the sphere floats o'er the plate—
Then Mooney stings the ball!

It moves us when the centerfield
Pulls down the fly he's cursed.
It thrills us when the shortstop's throw
Cuts off a man at first.
But, oh, the fierce excitement when,
The bases filled, we all
Leap up, and howl, and dance, and yell,
When Mooney stings the ball!

PUDD'NHEAD WILSON'S MAXIMS.

By Mark Twain.

These maxims are for the luring of youth toward high moral altitudes. The author did not gather them from practice, but from observation. To be good is noble, but to show others how to be good is nobler, and no trouble.

Noise proves nothing. Often, a hen who has merely laid an egg cackles as if she had laid an asteroid.

Truth is the most valuable thing we have—let us economize it.

It could probably be shown by facts and figures that there is no distinctly native American criminal class, except congress.

We should be careful to get out of an experience only the wisdom that is in it, and stop there; lest we be like the cat that sits down on a hot stovelid. She will never sit down on a hot stovelid again—and that is well; but also, she will never sit down on a cold one any more.

There is a moral sense and there is an immoral sense. History shows us that the moral sense enables us to perceive morality and how to avoid it, and the immoral sense enables us to perceive immorality and how to enjoy it.

Man will do many things to get himself loved; he will do all things to get himself envied.

It is by the goodness of God that in our country we have those three unspeakably precious things: Freedom of speech, freedom of conscience and the freedom never to practice either of them.

Man is the only animal that blushes—or needs to.

The universal brotherhood of man is our most precious possession—what there is of it.

Prosperity is the best protector of principle.

Let us not be too particular. It is better to have old, second-hand diamonds than none at all.

There are several good protections against temptations, but the surest is cowardice.

By trying we can easily learn to endure adversity—another man's, I mean.

It takes your enemy and your friend working together to hurt you to the heart—the one to slander you, the other to get the news to you.

True irreverence is disrespect for another man's god.

The man who is ostentatious of his modesty is twin to the statue that wears a fig leaf.

There are two times in a man's life when he should not speculate: When he can't afford it, and when he can.

There are no people who are quite so vulgar as the over-refined ones.

CLAPP ON WAR PATH

Minnesota Senator Attacks Railroad Bill and Party Leaders.

Praises Roosevelt and Scores Wickersham---Interprets Recent Elections.

Washington, April 27.—Senator Elkins got the railroad bill under way in the senate yesterday much more promptly than usual, and a half hour after the body convened Senator Clapp was on the floor pouring hot shot into the measure.

He said that in the beginning the senators were told the acceptance of the bill without condition was to be the test of party loyalty and that it must go through without debate. Notwithstanding this edict, some important amendments had been made, he said, and the supporters of the bill had been compelled to meet debate with debate.

Introductorily Mr. Clapp made some reference to the leadership in the Democratic party, and was interrupted with an inquiry from Mr. Stone as to the Republican leadership in the past few years.

Would Not Yield to Aldrich.

Senator Aldrich sought to reply to this inquiry, but Mr. Clapp refused to yield to him for that purpose. That pleased the Missourian, who remarked: "The Minnesota senator is among those who do not call upon the senator from Rhode Island to answer for them."

Senator Clapp said in part:

"Theodore Roosevelt never sent such a bill as this to congress. He never dictated. He stood for concrete sentiment and proposed legislation to meet it. He flourished the big stick in conformity with American sentiment."

"We have fallen on strange times," said he, "when Republicans can no longer discuss national legislation except at the banquet board. We were told that the test of party loyalty would be the passing of this bill. I believe the American people will justify us in staying here and performing our duty by perfecting this measure."

The origin and development of the bill were reviewed by Clapp, who then continued his political observations. He said the Democratic party failed because of autocratic leadership.

"When has there ever been a time when there was a more autocratic leadership than during the last two administrations?" inquired Senator Stone of Missouri.

Praise for Roosevelt.

Thereupon Clapp launched into praise of Roosevelt, continuing:

"Next to Abraham Lincoln, he was nearer the point than any other president. It mak-s no difference whether he be in the jungles of Africa, or in Europe, or at home, he will always be a living, vital force in the affairs of this country."

The criticism of congress by Attorney General Wickersham at Chicago was read by Clapp, who referred to the federal incorporation bill drawn by Wickersham, and asked where the "59 per cent idea" in all his bills originated.

"The council that put its disapproval on that bill," said Clapp, "was held in every home from Maine to California."

Various propositions framed by the "party council" to which Wickersham referred were recited by Clapp.

"Who commissioned the attorney general to read men out of the party?" he asked. "Who ever heard of him as a Republican until he entered the cabinet? Who are the men he has read from the party? Those who have fought its battles for forty years; not the men who gathered around a table at Delmonico's and fixed the standards of party loyalty. There is only one way a little minority can read the majority out of the party, and that is to get out ourselves."

He said that it was, in effect, a reading out of the Republican party of the main portion of that party, and that the attorney general was very sorry for it now.

Moses and Prophecy.

"I hear a name associated with prophecies—Moses. I have never heretofore attempted them, but I will prophesy here and now that there will never be a repetition of this sort of speech by Republican administrative officers," said Senator Clapp.

Senator Clapp said that were every progressive in the senate and house to sign a pledge relinquishing their interest in that movement, there would still remain the sentiment of progression. He declared that this sentiment was sweeping the entire length of the country. The result of recent elections, he said, showed that the people were indiscriminately burying the Republicans as a protest against the policies of the regular leaders.

"This illustrates," said Senator Clapp, "the danger of the Biblical tenet that the rain falls both upon the just and the unjust."

BJORNSON IS DEAD IN PARIS

Noted Norwegian Author Finally Succumbs to Attack of Disease.

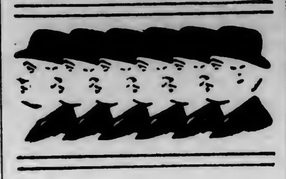
Paris, April 27.—Bjornsterne Bjornson, the Norwegian poet, novelist and dramatist, reformer and advocate of universal peace, died here last night, surrounded by his family. His end was peaceful.

The last serious illness of the novelist extended over nearly a year. He was brought to Paris in the early part of last November for special treatment, accompanied by his wife and daughter, a physician and nurses, and during part of the journey traveled with the king of Denmark in the king's private car.

In Paris, however, he was unable to receive the treatment for arterio sclerlosis, from which he was suffering, but, notwithstanding this, he showed marked improvement for a time, due entirely to his wonderful vitality. Again last February his death was expected momentarily, but the crisis passed, leaving him less able to withstand the next attack. During the last week it was apparent that he could not hold out much longer. Prior to his death he was unconscious for some hours.

Born in 1832.

Bjornsterne Bjornson was born at Kvikne, Osterdalen, Norway, Dec. 8, 1832. His father was a clergyman. He completed his education at the Universities of Christiania and Copenhagen, and first became known as the author of some articles and stories which he contributed to newspapers. In 1857 he returned from abroad and was first director of the theater in Bergen, and afterwards for a short time editor of the Journal Aftenbladt, in Christiania.



As a journalist Bjornson expressed strong republican opinions, which aroused considerable public excitement. Finally he was condemned to a year's imprisonment for treason, but escaped to Germany, and afterwards to America. He returned to Christiania in 1882, when he once more began the work of antagonism against the government.

Ole Bull appointed him to the directorship of the Bergen theater, and in 1858 he put on the stage "Hilte Hulda" and "Mellem Slagene." Other notable plays written by him are "Kong Swerre," the trilogy of "Sigurd Slembe" and the tragedy of "Mary Stuart." His comedy, "Hanske," was translated for the English stage in 1894.

First Novel in 1857.

Bjornson's first novel, "Sinnoeve Solbakken," appeared in 1857, and on the celebration of its fiftieth anniversary at Christiania the novelist received an enormous number of greetings from all countries. It was followed by "Arne," a sketch of Norwegian country life; "A Happy Boy" and "The Fisher Maiden," both stories of the peasantry.

As a lyric poet Bjornson took high rank. He was a voluminous writer, and in all his works strove to become a vehicle of national feeling, seeking to give expression to the Norwegian spirit. He was regarded as one of the most stimulating influences for the revival of Scandinavian literature.

One Case Where Consumer May Not Be "The Goat."

The announcement made by the trust means in effect that it will pocket a "loss" of between $2,000,000 and $3000,000 annually. The consumer and the retailer will not suffer, and neither will their be any demoralization of trade.

WOMAN MAY BE NAMED.

By Governor Eberhart as Member of Board of Visitors.

St. Paul, Minn., April 27.—No action has been taken on the resignations of Doctors S. G. Smith and C. L. Green, who have left the state board of visitors.

The places will doubtless be filled in the near future. The Women's Federation of Minnesota appealed to the governor for representation on the board. The federation says that a large number of inmates of the state institution are women and that it is highly important that a woman should be on the board. It was hinted that in all probability Governor Eberhart will name a woman.

Dr. Smith refused to add anything to his statement sent to the governor. In a postscript to his letter of resignation he said that his action was taken without consultation with Dr. Greene.

It was said at the capitol that Dr. Smith had been piqued by the action of the board in removing Mrs. C. K. Goodnow, the board's stenographer, and by the report made by the board of control on the situation at Rochester. This Dr. Smith denied.

Alton, Ill., April 27.—Thirteen-year-old Nina Anthis committed suicide in school yesterday afternoon, in the presence of her teacher and thirty schoolmates, by drinking carbolic acid. She left a pathetic note on her desk, in which she said her heart was broken because her foster-mother scolded her, and asked that she be buried with a favorite doll and a band ring she wore.

MICHIGAN MEN GATHER

Visiting Faculty Members Are Entertained By Duluth Alumni.

Financial Needs of University Are Discussed By Speakers.

A score of University of Michigan men, faculty members and local alumni, attended the banquet given in honor of the visiting educators in the Duluth Commercial clubrooms last evening, the guests of honor being Dean Mortimer E. Cooley of the engineering department, Dean John O. Reid of of the literary department, and Wilfred B. Shaw, general secretary of the alumni association. The banquet was an enjoyable affair.

Following the banquet, the Michigen men adjourned to the assembly room, where speeches were made, with William J. Olcott in the chair. Both assemblages were notable for the thorough good humor that prevailed.

The purpose of the trip being made by the faculty members has been to bring the alumni throughout the country into closer touch with the university, it being recognized that the greatest asset possessed by such an institution is the men who have graduated from its halls and in later life are exerting their influence to keep up the standard of the school.

Dean Reid in his speech called attention to the financial condition of the university, comparing it with that of the university of Minnesota. Michigan has an annual budget of only $1,300,000, while Minnesota will within the lifetime of students now attending the university have a fund of approximately $120,000,000. Michigan has a genuine enrollment of 5,300 students, which is more than any other university.

"We wish the alumni to know the facts and think them over seriously," he said. "The people who have given large amounts of money to Harvard and the other universities have not been alumni, generally, but persons who have been interested in the university through the alumni."

Dean Reid said that he and his associates are not on a begging tour and are not asking the alumni for 15 cents or any amount, but merely seek to impress them with the needs of of the university so that great results will be attained.

"We are not penniless by any means," he said in closing, "but if we are to continue to be the university we have been in the past we must have assistance."

Dean Cooley, who also emphasized the university's needs in a financial way, referred particularly to the boiler plant, the condition of which was dangerous to life, the boilers having been in use from thirty to forty years, although the average life of a boiler is about twenty years. Money is needed also for a science building, for providing graduate work and scholarship.

Secretary Shaw closed the program with a talk explaining stereopticon pictures of the university building and campus and their surroundings.

PROSECUTOR TO CARE FOR GIRL

Albert Wolter's Companion Will Have Home With Frank Mass' Family.

New York, April 27.—Kate Mueller, the young woman on whose scant earnings Albert Wolter lived, is to have happier life than the miserable one she shared in a squalid apartment with the man who murdered Ruth Wheeler.

Frank Moss, assistant district attorney, who obtained Wolter's conviction, has taken pity on the girl, and is to receive her into his own home, where he and Mrs. Moss will care for her until her future is assured.

During the Wolter trial it was brought out that Wolter lived from what money the Mueller girl was able to obtain by working in a bakery.

Free from Wolter's spell, the girl has repented and longs to break loose from her old life.

All White People.

Manager Martin of Al. W. Martin's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," has hit upon an innovation that bids fair to revoutionize the current productions of the well known but very popular drama. In his employment of white actors and actresses exclusively, he has attempted something that has been scorned by other managers as an attempt at the impossible, but white people have proven their ability in every part of theatricals to depict the colored men themselves.

FILES SUIT AGAINST TRACTION COMPANY.

James B. Walker, father of Deputy County Auditor J. O. Walker, has commenced action against the Duluth Street Railway company for $10,000 for injuries alleged to have been sustained while alighting from a car on East Fourth street one day last week. He claims in his complaint that the car started before he had reached the ground. Mr. Walker is 78 years old, and as a result of the accident, he claims, he sustained a broken hip joint.

EUGENE DEBS TO VISIT DULUTH

Former Socialist Candidate for President to Speak Here.

Eugene V. Debs, Socialistic candidate for president of the United States at the last general election, will speak in the Lyceum theater tomorrow night.

Mr. Debs is one of the most eloquent orators on the public platform. It is expected that he will devote considerable attention to the Fred Warren case. Warren, who is editor of the "Appeal to Reason," published at Girard, Kan., was fined $2,000, and given a jail sentence for statements made about the government and Theodore Roosevelt, then president, in connection with the imprisonment of Senator Burton of Kansas. Warren's publication is the most radical of all American papers of Socialistic tendencies. Warren is at liberty on bail. His appeal will be heard before the United States Court of Appeals at St. Paul in May.

In view of the recent victory of the Social Democrat party in Milwaukee, Socialistic principles are attracting more serious attention in the United States than ever before. Mr. Debs will probably discuss the causes which contributed to the overthrow of the other two leading parties in Milwaukee.

"AMERICAN IDEALS."

J. H. Hearding Delivers Interesting Address at Endion M. E. Church.

J. H. Hearding, assistant general manager of the Oliver Iron Mining company, spoke on "American Ideals," illustrated with sketches from the lives of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, at the meeting of the Men's Club of the Endion Methodist Episcopal church last night.

Dr. E. L. Tuohy told of the warfare that is being waged in Duluth against tuberculosis. He indicated how the disease can be prevented and cured. He told of the efforts being made by the tuberculosis commission to secure a county sanitarium. Great benefit from such an institution would accrue, he said.

VAUDEVILLE ACTRESS MAY HAVE TO DON TIGHTS.

Albany, N. Y., April 27.—The question of tights entered into a theatrical case decided yesterday by the court of appeals. Because Miss Henrietta Lee refused to appear minus skirts in a vaudeville sketch with her husband, James P. Morrison, they allege Curtis & Seamans, managers of a Brooklyn theater, terminated their contract. They sued, and a jury awarded them $4,822. The appellate division affirmed the judgment, but the court of appeals reversed it and granted a new trial.

REPRESENTATIVE MILLER ON HUGHES APPOINTMENT.

Washington, April 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative C. B. Miller of the Eighth Minnesota district speaking of the appointment of Governor Hughes to a position on the supreme bench said: "The Hughes appointment is fitting and proper and one that will commend President Taft to the confidence of the American people. It shows that when the president is in a position to act by himself he meets the wishes of the people."

New York, April 27.—Annexation of New Fpundland to the United States or Canada is a visionary project, according to Sir Edward Morris, premier of the island, who expressed this view at a farewell dinner given in his honor by countrymen at the Hoffman house previous to his departure for The Hague today.

RAPS "COMIC SUPPLEMENT"

Magazine Writer Says It Encourages Lawlessness and Irreverence.

The May issue of Good Housekeeping magazine contains a scathing arraignment of the present day "comic supplement," the writer declaring that it "makes for lawlessness, debauched fancy and irreverence."

"With the end in view of speaking intelligently, and with the forlorn hope that some glimmer of true comedy might be found to temper an already disapproving frame of mind," the writer continues, "I did what several others have done, who have been called upon to lift their voices in protest against this innocuous sheet—I secured copies of the Sunday supplement from all parts of the United States and I spread them out upon the floor, and I made what?—a carpet of hideous caricatures, crude poetry and poverty of invention, perverted humor, obvious vulgarity and the rudest coloring. And that is the carpet upon which the children of the United States play every Sunday morning—'the new children's hour,' as Mr. Scheffauer has aptly styled it.

"We pride ourselves upon our national sense of humor, and we are throttling it in the coming generation as effectually as may be. As one editor points out: 'Americans have suffered many stupid things to go on; but nothing must seem to a foreigner so at variance with American sagacity and good sense as the cutting down of our forests to make wood pulp for the vulgarization of the children of our country. We are exchanging our noble woodlands for cheap and tawdry sheets with no redeeming feature of wit, humor, good sense or wholesome entertainment.'

"In the comic supplement is a distressing poverty of invention, the glorification of the self-sufficient 'kid,' the smarty, the up-to-snuff type of children—the worst of the all-too-prevalent type of forward child. The child who lives by practical joking is found in its pages, and the one to whom nothing is reverent and nothing can awe. Its so-called fun consists chiefly in making game of old people, who are always the victim of the young hero, and seemingly imbecile in their inability to counter the resource or marvelous ingenuity displayed by the smart kid; some wretched animal or harmless individual is being ill-treated or torn to shreds; parents are hoodwinked, or their authority is discountenanced; awful females travesty the marital relation; grandfathers and grandmothers are outraged. When children figure in the supplement they are invariably shapeless, inane caricatures of the fun-loving, mischevious, bubbling, sane American boy and girl.

"There is a broad field for humorous treatment of a kind to amuse and interest children, and scores of popular illustrators are proof of the loving affection in which they are held by children."

The writer suggests four remedies:

"1. Do not buy the paper.

"2. If this is impractical, then make it your business to keep the supplement out of sight. It can very easily be extracted from the bulk of the paper and destroyed.

"3. Every man and woman can register an individual protest in the office of the newspaper which sends the supplement to the house.

"4. Every man and every woman can call their neighbors' attention to this menace to sweet, sane childhood."

The conclusion reached in the article is this:

"A little more editorial energy, a little more sense of editorial responsibility, and possibly the expenditure of a little more money, will substitute for the present indefensible vulgarity of the so-called comic supplement decent drawing and decent text."

HEYBURN WANTS MEATS DATED

Packers Object on Ground That It Would Hurt the Business.

Washington, April 27.—Senator Heyburn, chairman of the senate committee on manufactures, which is conducting hearings on the Lodge bill to regulate cold storage, suggested that the bill be amended so as to require all stored meats to be stamped with the date the animal was killed, the date stored and the date removed from storage.

The suggestion was opposed by John H. Morrell, a pork packer of Ottumwa, Iowa; John S. Munce, Richmond, Va., and R. S. Sinclair, Cedar Rapids, Iowa. They said the placing of these dates on meats would result in confusion, in that the public did not understand that cured meats were improved by storage. The packers also complained that they had to compete with meats shipped to foreign countries, where the dates are not required, and American-dated products would be discriminated against.

HIGH COST DUE TO SHORT WEIGHT

Secret Agreements on Prices Also Blamed By Food Probe Witnesses.

Washington, April 27.—Short weight packages and secret agreements between wholesalers and retailers are largely responsible for the high cost of living, according to statements of witnesses before the house committee investigating the subject.

Dr. William C. Woodland, health officer of the District of Columbia, told of short weight bread, flour and other necessaries of life. Representative Moore, Republican of Pennsylvania, chairman of the committee, introduced what purports to be printed copies of letters passing between wholesalers and retailers showing that those parties were banded together to restrict the sale of articles of merchandise to those who proved to be "satisfactory competitors."

Col. W. C. Haskell, superintendent of weights and measures, declared that every one of the 300,000 barrels of flour sold in Washington were short four pounds each of the advertised weight, and that Washingtonians were paying annually $42,000 for flour which they never received. Other items were in proportion, he said.

Nearly every package sold in grocery stores, he said, was short four ounces, according to the investigations of his officers.

LABRADOR TIMBER LAND BOUGHT BY NEW YORKERS.

St. Johns, N. F., April 27.—Labrador timber lands, covering an area of 18,580 square miles, have been transferred by three St. John men for $250,000 and 49 per cent of the proceeds of the future development to a syndicate of Americans, most of whom are New York residents. Pulp mills will be erected at various points by a $25,000,000 corporation.

Mrs. Housewife:—There's a Happy Medium in Everything

Anything that is overdone or underdone is not good.

This is especially true of baking—and it is just as true of baking powder. If you use the cheap and Big Can Kinds you are getting quantity at the sacrifice of quality. It cannot be as good—or as economical as Calumet—the medium price kind. If you use the High Price Kind, you are paying tribute to the Trust—the quality is no better.

The Cheap and Big Can Kind

In this can you get more substance but not more baking powder. It is great in quantity only—not in economy—not in satisfaction.

Here's the "Full Value" in BAKING POWDER

Calumet, in the Standard 1 lb. can, sells at a moderate cost—but is great in all 'round satisfaction. You use less of it—it makes the baking lighter, purer—more delicious. One baking will prove its superiority—try it. Ask your grocer and insist on Calumet. Free—large handsome recipe book. Send 4c and slip found in pound can.

The Trust Kind

Great in price, little in quantity and the quality is no better—good.

SPORTING NEWS OF THE DAY

AS SEEN FROM THE SIDE LINES

(BY BRUCE.)

Charley White, Maybe.

There is an underground rumor which sayeth Charley White will be the third man in the ring when Jeff and the Senegambian meet. Like other incidents connected with the fight, there is something mysterious about the selection of White.

Tracing the rumor along toward the root, it is said further, that Jeff and the cakewalk artist have already agreed to disagree, apparently, over the selection of the referee, and that Charles will be selected as the compromise man.

Will some one step out in the bright glare of publicity and explain why there is so much mystery about the coming contest. The whole thing looks so very funny. The stuff that is being sent from the Jeffries camp is quite sufficient to make any one sniffle at the suspicion bush that grows in front of every man's door.

And, Tom and Jerry, as the time for the fight draws nearer, it may be said that there is a growing feeling that Johnson will win the fight. There are two ways to look at the fight; yet the right way is to believe the mill honest and stake your choice on the logical winner.

All this stuff about Jeff being ready to fight at the present time is the merriest rot. He has a blood disease, and this fact has been known by a number of people for a long time. He was advised to go to Carlsbad for this reason alone.

He is not the Jeffries of old. It will require a long siege to get him into fighting condition. Any man who has been out of the game for a long while —who has dissipated and abused a wonderful constitution, is going to have an awful time in coming back into the stretch and making even a decent fight.

Johnson is in his prime. He has forced even people who despise him for his principles to admit that he is a great fighter—just how great none of us knows. On this line of argument, taking into consideration that Jeffries has dissipated hard, as men of his disposition often do, and further taking into consideration the fact that we don't know whether Jeffries could ever beat Johnson—it sure does look like the negro, much as many of us hate to admit it.

Further Explanation.

The return from Hancock.

Nothing like the return from Elba.

In other, and more explicit words, Chris Person is with us.

His explanation is simple and to the point. The Rounavaara person wanted no honest wrestling where there was a chance for his meal ticket to lose; therefore he demanded that Person tie his hands financially in order that he could not afford to win.

This paper has said some true things as they have turned out to be in the past about this Karl Lehto. It might be said that at the time the statements were printed, they were obtained from the very best sources. Many people wrote letters to the writer, in petulant anger because the truth was told.

Therefore, there is some satisfaction at this time in exposing the devious methods of Dr. Rounavaara. He was shrewd enough to grasp the possibility of making some money out of the Finn, but lacked the ability to engineer his way through a maze of mischievous match making.

He has been exposed. There is no regret about that part of it; the only regret is that wrestling should have been killed.

Dr. Rounavaara played fast and loose with many people in the Copper country. He told many Finns to bet on Lehto, quietly slipping them the tip that Lehto would win in two straight falls. The people betting on Person were being duped by the doctor, as he thought when the match was made.

He will have to stand the consequences of his exposure.

Cousin Curley.

Curley Ulrich, the blonde beau of Superior, is hot on the trail of Jack Dougherty of Milwaukee. Since his victory over Dr. Clapper of Hibbing, the Superior fighter is looking for more worlds to conquer. When all has been said in regard to the case of Curley, you have to give it to him for his willingness to fight and also his willingness to take punishment. The Curley boy will fight, and will fight hard, at that.

Kidding Kindly Kids.

For some reason or other the "Kid" on the Superior Telegram is losing his pep. He is not rushing into the battle with the impetuosity that characterized his former attacks on everything and everybody. During these days before the outbreak of real baseball playing the wrath of the little one was one source of amusement that never failed to cause at least one ripple.

The series of "How I Win" articles by Carl the fireater at least served to dig up some hidden history. How sad and wistful that ticket must have felt, being neglected for four days in the quietness of a depot at Winona! And then there were so many little sidelights cast on the game.

It was almost like reading some of the returned Sherlock Holmes stories, otto would make a splendid Dr. Watson, while little Carl would fit snugly into the fat part of Sherlock Holmes. He has delved deeply into baseball lore, has Carl, and nobody from rube towns like La Crosse and Winona need attempt tell Carl at what street to get off. When the next census is completed Superior will have been numbered among the real cities of the Northwest.

There is a movement on at the present time to have Carl write an introduction to the autobiography President John A. Elliott is getting ready for the publishers. It will be an edition de luxe, and copious copies will be sold to Koepping and in Superior.

As a delegate to The Hague peace conference, little Carl would make Auntie Carnegie look like William the Conqueror before they robbed him of a close decision.

Get Armor Plate.

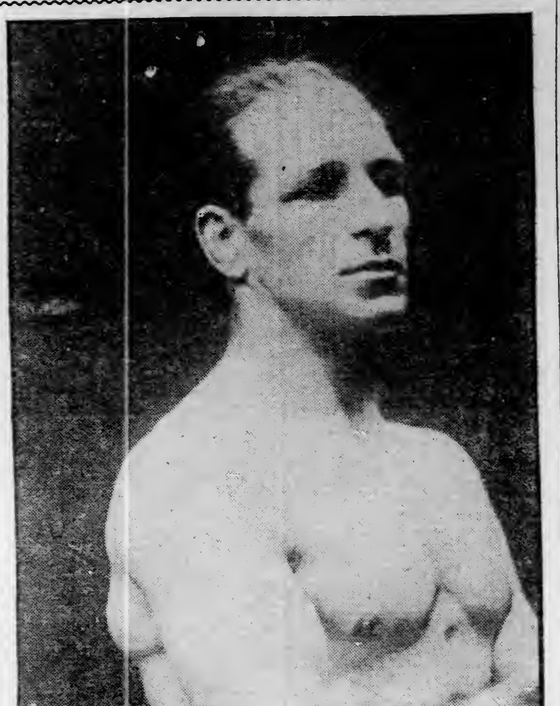
When Steve Ketchell enters the ring with Samuel Adams Langford tonight, it is reported he will wear a tiny band of elephant's hair around his wrist—why of course he will wear more—this is simply for a charm, one that is supposed to ward off danger and bring luck to the wearer.

The charm was given to Ketchel by Edgar Bahr Bronson, the African hunter. All of which suggests the query, why didn't Eddie get a rhinoceros hide for Ketch?

What good is that thin black line of hair going to do to the Ketchel boy? It may so charm Langford that he will be drawn into close touch with Stanley—and then—ah, the white race shudders.

Heres hoping that Steve pastes the Senegambian in the pantry early in the affray and leaves the building with the certificate of bright young victory hung on a beaming countenance—it such a thing could be done.

How About This?



A press dispatch says Langford won't stall in his match with Ketchel. If he doesn't, the question naturally arises, will it be a horse on Ketchel? —— horse—stall—diagram.

Bat's So Tough.

Bat Masterson, the whilon tamer of bad men in the wild and somewhat wooly West, for the West was largely given over to sheep, dear, has come out with the statement that Jeff will surely whip that Johnson man.

It is not very safe to dispute or to argue with Mons Masterson. He is one of dem gun toters that you all has read about. They do say that he would sooner shoot than eat; but as he has been eating rather regularly in New York of late and shooting but little, why this above statement may be somewhat overdrawn.

LATEST PICTURE OF THE VETERAN, JOSEPH CHOYNSKI

JOSEPH B. CHOYNSKI.

Joe Choynski has arrived in the Jeffries' camp to help Jeffries train for the big mill with Johnson. Choynski is one of the intelligent products of the prize ring. He is well educated, knows every angle of the boxing game and is a good fellow personally. But whether he possesses a sufficient amount of iron will to compel Jeffries to follow his instructions to the letter remains to be seen.

SUNDAY BALL IN NEW YORK

Bill Legalizing Sunday Games Between Amateurs Passes Assembly.

Albany, N. Y., April 27.—A bill legalizing Sunday baseball by amateurs between 3:30 and 6:30 o'clock p. m. passed the assembly yesterday by a vote of 77 to 67. Cheering greeted the result. Speaker Wadsworth, who played first base for Harvard when in college, surrendered his gavel to speak in favor of the bill.

"I do not believe," he said, "that this sort of thing violates the Sabbath. I believe it makes for the betterment of men, and that is my conception of following in the footsteps of the Divine Master.

"I would rather have my boy shouting at the top of his lungs when Casey's mit closes over the long fly in the outfield—two out—than having him loafing around street corners Sundays, telling stories, ogling women or debauching himself with beer in the saloons.

"To my mind, it is very clear that the great God-fearing American are ready for, and are going to have, a more liberal Sunday."

JEFF WORKS HARD TO MAKE UP FOR VACATION.

Ben Lomond, Cal., April 27.—James Jeffries made up for his vacation of Monday by working with redoubled energy yesterday. He declared he felt in a working mood and allowed himself little let-up. He worked on all the indoor strength building devices and put ginger into his tasks.

A six-round boxing bout with Sam Berger was planned for the afternoon, but Jeffries' work in the morning was so warming that his trainers did not want to heat his blood any more and the bout was postponed. The skin trouble on Jeffries' back is disappearing rapidly and his trainers expect to eradicate it in two days more.

Jeffries spent the afternoon hours working with the laborers on the river dam which sprung a leak Saturday. Until the leak is stopped, boating and swimming are impossible and as these are among the fighter's favorite pastimes, he will put in much of his time helping at the dam.

MINNY LEAGUE NOTES

Bad weather prevented the first game between Ottumwa, Iowa, and Superior, but yesterday, despite adverse weather conditions, the second game of the series was played, it resulting in a 4 to 1 victory for the Central association team—the team which finished last in that association last season, by the by.

Payne has not returned to the Superior team and his absence has undoubtly weakened the O'Dea aggregation. Payne is a valuable man and made a good showing while with the team. He has a grievance, and unless the soothing duke can coax the Payne person from the drab humor he is in at the present time, he may not be seen at Minny League park the present play period.

Landry is also somewhat peeved. He has asked the former duke of Duluth for his release, offering to purchase his freedom from the team on the other side of the harbor. Whether O'Dea will part with the Landry lad, is a question that is causing ceaseless comment in the Superior corner store.

But even with the absence of the two players mentioned the team is playing good baseball on the present trip. The defeat yesterday can be laid much to the fact that Superior has not played for some time. Yesterday's game was the first engagement in nine days.

McGraw has played good baseball for O'Dea, and if he can maintain his stride after the start of the season, he is practically sure of a regular berth. Gray, Vogt, Bancroft and Caldwell, the former Eau Claire player, have also showed good form.

O'Dea has wired Superior that he is on the trail of a catcher. The player is with one of the Central association teams at the present time. The Duke is negotiating for the release of the player, who, if secured, will relieve Chaffee of the heavy backstop duty he has been doing.

Winona has decided to give Ray Saveland his liberty, oh joy, if the reports from that town are correct. It reads like a melodrammer. Thusly does the story go:

Ray left his posish in the Pabst brewery and journeyed clear to Winona to hold a heart-to-heart conference with Uncle Joe, the naughty man who steals innocent little boys. Ray related his troubles to Joe, and the hard visage of Uncle Joe was seen to relax as the tearful tale was unfolded.

Throwing his arm over the shoulder of Saveland, Joe exclaimed, in a husky voice, that he would consider the case deeply, in all its details. The Winona press has taken the incident as indicating a turning point in the career of Joe, who, by the way, is getting to that age when he should be thinking of reform.

Saveland is a clever player, but he has pointed out to Uncle Joe that he has larger salary offers than the one made him by Winona. He claims he has a chance to go up higher, and maybe this opportunity will be granted.

According to a message from Winona, "Red" Moore, that relic from the dark days of Capt. Kidd, will not be with Winona the present season. Killian, it is said, will continue to take his regular turn behind the bat and Stark, a promising player, will also don the mask and wind pad. Moore will probably play the present season with one of the teams of the Wisconsin-Illinois league.

The lineup of Winona in the first game with Regina, was: Stark behind the bat; Curtis at first; Koepping at second—Superior please copy; De Witt at short, and Goodman at third. McNutt, Graves and McCarthy were in the garden.

Some of the vets, as you will see, have been disposed of and some new faces are in the field.

Smiling Jack Corrigan of Rochester has a number of promising players in his squad. "Ducky" Stewart of Chicago and Koke of Kansas City have been signed as catchers. Many local fans will remember that Stewart was with Houghton in 1908. He has also played with Madison and the semi-professional league of Chicago.

Pitcher McNeill was with Lethbridge last season. Corrigan was in the Canadian league last season and has reason to know of the ability of McNeill.

Corrigan has a large squad on hand, and as soon as the grounds at Rochester are in shape will take his men there for the final workout.

Silent Joe Safford of the La Crosse team has released Ellis Ludwig, Spaid, Dana and Schoenur. He is gradually weeding out his squad, keeping those players who have so far shown that they are real honest-to-goodness baseball players. Some of the boys have had very hard work in convincing Joe of this salient fact.

Red Wing, like Duluth and Superior, has struck a bundle of atmospheric antagonism. All of the games scheduled on the way home from Chicago had to be cancelled because of the weather conditions. Then came the weather peeve and the loss of the roof of the grandstand and part of the $10,000 fence around the park. The Red Wing management is out about $650 on the rampage of the weather.

A tag day plan has been innaugurated to offset this financial loss. On the opening day loyal fans will allow themselves to be tagged for one dollar's worth.

Wausau may secure Art Bues of Racine. The player is trying out with Wausau at the present time and may be purchased outright from Racine. Shortstop Johnson, formerly with Racine, is also trying out with Wausau.

The following from the Wausau Herald, is simple and to the point:

"That President Elliott has no authority to interfere in the matter of Superior's charges against Manager Killian of the Pirates is a well known fact, but still the sporting editor on one of the Superior papers continues to demand that he step in and compel Killian to release Player Koepping of Superior. While the action of Killian was an infringement on the unwritten rules of baseball, it was not a violation of any of the written rules, consequently President Elliott has no right to become a party to the fight. By keeping away from the trouble Mr. Elliott is proving again that he understands his position and is the right man at the head of the Minny league."

ELLIOTT WIRES PERMISSION

Gives Consent for Pre-Season Series Between Duluth and Superior.

President John A. Elliott of the Minnesota-Wisconsin league has wired permission to A. W. Kuehnow for the playing of a pre-season series of games between Duluth and Superior. The series between the two teams at the Head of the Lakes will probably start next week.

Regular umpires will be assigned to the series. Ollie Anderson will probably be one of the indicator holders to work.

Duluth will be home the latter part of next week, if the present plans are carried out. If the present weather continues the team may be home before that time. Superior, too, may decide to come home before the scheduled time.

The series between the two teams will be one for blood, as there promises to be a very great degree of rivalry between the two teams the present season.

DIRECTORS MAY PROBE SUPERIOR CLUB CHARGES.

Through the La Crosse Leader-Press, President John A. Elliott has stated that, in the event of the Superior club preparing a formal protest against the playing of Koepping by Superior, he is willing to call a meeting of the directors of the league to act on the matter that has caused no small amount of agitation.

There is, however, very little likelihood of the meeting being called.

The Superior Telegram a last admits that the case is one not covered by any specific baseball rule. This fact has been generally known for some time.

If there are additional charges to be made against Joe Killian by the Superior club, as intimated, then the suggested meeting may take place. In the Koepping case, however, there is absolutely no peg to hang a reason for a meeting upon.

Koepping has been secured by Winona, and the player is the property of that club. The method by which Koepping was secured may be condemned, as it generally is; but the fact remains—Koepping cannot be taken away from Winona unless Winona is willing to part with the second baseman.

ZBYSZKO WINS FROM "THE NORTHWEST CHAMP."

New York, April 27.—Zbyszko, the Polish wrestler won from Mort Henderson, known as "the Northwest Champ," in two straight falls at the Grand Central Palace last night.

The first fall was secured in 4 minutes and 30 seconds, on a right-arm lock and heel hold. It took the Pole 20 minutes and 30 seconds to win the second fall, on an arm-lock and body hold. Five thousand persons watched the contest.

Cheney Goes Back.

Cincinnati, Ohio, April 27.—The Cincinnati National league club yesterday sold back to Indianapolis of the American association, Pitcher "Larry" Cheney, secured from the latter club by the locals last summer.

APPENDICITIS KNOCKS JIM SAVAGE OUT.

Boston, Mass., April 27.—Appendicitis knocked out Jim Savage of New York before he could enter the ring at the Armory Athletic association last night for the main bout with Jim Flynn of Boston, and the match was called off. Leo Houck of Lancaster, Pa., fouled Frank Perron of Pawtucket, R. I., in the third round of their bout, and Referee Smith awarded the decision to Perron.

WILL TRAVEL THE SHORT ROUTE

Ketchel and Langford Due to Come Together in Philadelphia.

Tonight at Philadelphia there is going to be a fight that may have a decided influence on the middleweight championship of the world.

Stanley Ketchel the present title holder, and Sam Langford, who has long looked with greedy eyes on the title held by Ketchel, will clash. On the pure and unalloyed dope of the encounter, Langford should win. But the short route must be taken into consideration.

Don't ever get the idea that Ketchel isn't tough; he is. He is one of the toughest fighters developed in the middleweight ranks since the days of Bob Fitzsimmons. It will require a wonderful fighter to beat him in six rounds.

Langford has shown that he is just such a fighter. Whether he will show his best form against Ketchel this evening is another matter for deep conjecture. He holds Ketchel in awesome respect, and for 'that reason the six-round route looks very short.

If Langford wins he will naturally take over the title held by Ketchel. Then Papke may have to fight the Senegambian. Again if Langford wins, it will sure look bad for the supremacy of the white race in matters pugilistic.

Both men are sluggers. Langford can hit just as hard, if not harder, than Ketchel. He is also supposed to have the greater science of the two. Steve is a rather wild, hit or miss fighter, and if he comes milling in that way to Langford, he is very liable to be straightened up and perhaps put out.

It should be a great battle—one that will be watched with interest all over the country, for the contest of this evening is one that has been agitated ever since Ketchel came to the front.

NEW BASEBALL LEAGUE FORMED IN MICHIGAN.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 27.—The Michigan stae league of baseball clubs was organized here yesterday afternoon with Manistee, Ludington, Muskegon, Cadillac, Traverse City and either Greenville or Holland as the sixth club. Tom Jones of Grand Rapids was elected president. Application for protection under the National agreement has been filed. The season will open about May 28.

MURRAY'S CLAIM FINALLY ADJUSTED.

Philadelphia, April 27.—The claim of William J. Murray against the Philadelphia baseball club was adjusted here yesterday at a meeting between Thomas J. Lynch, president of the National league, Former Manager Murray and officials of the local club.

The terms of the settlement of the claim, which was for the uncompleted term of his contract as manager and for back salary, were not made public.

Draw at Buffalo.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 27.—Jimmy Clabby of Milwaukee and Buddy Lavin of Buffalo boxed ten rounds here last night. A draw would have been the verdict if decisions were allowed.

Sailor Beats Alho.

Sailor Jack returned from Ironwood last night, where he defeated Ed Alho, the Finnish middleweight in easy fashion. He is matched to meet Matt Kangas, the man who was beaten easily by Chris Person.

WILL DECIDE DATES.

Motor Boat Committee to Schedule Racing Events for Season's Sport.

A meeting of the motor boat committee of the Duluth Boat club will be held next week, when the dates for the events for the present season will be decided upon. The date for the holding of the open regatta, will also be decided upon at this meeting.

"Bill" Jones will go to Lake Geneva, Wis., in the near future to look after the tryouts of some of the uniform model boats that are being built there by designer Simmons.

The tryout will be held some time next week. After the tryout some of the boats will be immediately sent to Duluth.

Duluth Gets Daggert.

A. W. Kuehnow has purchased Third Baseman Daggert from the South Bend team. The player made a very good record with the Indiana team last season and is considered a very good man.

The team at the present time is in Rockford, where the weather is anything but favorable. A few days of the present kind of atmospheric conditions and the squad may be toted home by Darby O'Brien.

McNamara After Match.

It is reported that John T. McNamara, manager of the Amphidrome of Houghton, will offer a purse for a meeting between Person and Lehto. It is said that both men are anxious for the match. Whether the public is, after the expose of last Saturday, is another question.

The Houghton man is reported to be willing to go ahead with the match. It is not generally believed that Lehto was implicated in the attempt to fix the match scheduled for last Saturday.

MILWAUKEE LOSES ITS MUNICIPAL PLANT CASE.

Madison, Wis., April 27.—The city of Milwaukee has lost the municipal light plant case. The supreme court of Wisconsin yesterday upheld the lower courts in their ruling on the injunction secured by T. J. Neacy, preventing the erection of a plant.

The court in effect held that the question was put to the voters with not sufficient clearness in the matter of stating the objects of the proposed bond issue for the establishment of a plant.

HOW HE CURED BLOOD POISON

I didn't find out I had contracted Contagious Blood Poison until it had made considerable headway. I had heard a great deal of the value of S. S. S. as a blood medicine, in fact had a friend who had cured himself of the same disease through its use, so as soon as I discovered the nature of my trouble I began taking it. I got along splendidly from the very first and my recovery was steady. When I first began the use of S. S. S. my face was so full of sores and eruptions that I could not shave. Other parts of my body were similarly affected, but there is now not a blotch, pimple or any other sign of the disease. I was cured by S. S. S. and I know I am cured to stay cured as this was several years ago. There is nothing that equals S. S. S. for Contagious Blood Poison and I always recommend it in such cases.

WALTER WEBER.
No. 430½ Fourth St., Evansville, Ind.

The acknowledged virtue of S. S. S. as a blood remedy induced Mr. Weber to commence its use when he found he had contracted Contagious Blood Poison. The good results he obtained is just another demonstration of its value as a cure for this disease.

Contagious Blood Poison is the most powerful and destructive of all blood disorders. Its virus permeates the entire circulation and this explains why any one afflicted with this malady usually finds its symptoms manifested in every portion of the body. From head to foot the insidious poison breaks forth. The hair and eyebrows come out, the mouth and throat ulcerate, skin eruptions and sores and ulcers break out on the body, the bones ache, glands in the groin swell, and frequently the nails on hands and feet are affected.

The only possible way to cure Contagious Blood Poison is to remove the cause by purifying the blood. This is just what S. S. S. does; and it is the only medicine that absolutely and thoroughly cleanses the circulation of every particle of the germs and virus of the disease. Mercury, Potash, etc., are often used by despairing sufferers in the hope that such strong treatment will kill the poison. But this cannot be done; the disease may be checked temporarily and the symptoms improved, but the old poison is slumbering in the blood, and when the treatment is left off the disease always returns.

The ability of S. S. S. to cure Contagious Blood Poison comes from its blood purifying properties. It goes into the circulation and removes every trace of the poison, makes the blood pure and healthy, and leaves no dregs of the virus to break out later on. S. S. S. is made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, each of which has a direct and specific effect in purifying the blood. S. S. S. does not contain a particle of mineral in any form to upset the stomach, affect the bowels, or inflame any of the delicate membranes of the body. It is Nature's blood purifier, potent and healthful, and so valuable are its tonic effects that when S. S. S. has rid the circulation of the Contagious Blood Poison the entire system is left in fine physical condition.

No Spring Medicine Needed

Robinson Thermal Baths Clear the Blood and Prepare System for Hot Weather.

Eczema and other skin diseases are caused by the accumulation of impurities in the tissues and blood. Drugs do not eliminate this poison. The most they can do is to ease the pain and itching for the time being.

The Robinson Thermal or Turkish Bath has a remarkable effect on eczema, and all skin troubles. A tremendous amount of poison is extracted from the system through the pores, whenever a Robinson Thermal Bath is taken. Cases have been known where eczema or a bad case of pimples and boils have been almost entirely cured after a twenty-minute bath taken at home. The terrible itching and burning stops, the blotches heal, and the disease disappears.

Mrs. I. Bailey, 184 Joralemon street, Brooklyn, was treated for years by the best physicians in Brooklyn and New York for rheumatic gout and eczema without being benefited. Physicians told her not to take the baths, as she had heart trouble, but she was determined to try the Cabinet, and has taken four baths a week for the past year, and today she is free from both rheumatism and eczema.

Remarkable results occur in nearly every case of rheumatism, lumbago, kidney and blood troubles, dyspepsia, throat and lung trouble, nervous prostration, insomnia and constipation.

Robinson Thermal Baths can now be taken at home at a cost of but a few cents each, and with almost no trouble at all.

They are the best spring medicine, for they quickly restore the thick, heavy blood and bring renewed energy and vim.

The only way to take these thermal baths is by the use of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinet. The results are a real Godsend. If you are sick from any cause, it will have an almost miraculous effect upon your system. If you are well, it will keep you so.

The Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinets are a remarkable invention. They are now on exhibition and for sale in Duluth at A. E. Swedberg, White Swan Drug Co., Lyceum Pharmacy and Lenox Drug store—2 stores; W. A. Abbett—3 stores; A. C. Le Richieux—3 stores; Holmberg Drug Co., Superior; H. J. Cameron, Superior; A. J. Lindgren, West Duluth; Red Cross Pharmacy, Superior, Wis.

If you cannot go and see these Robinson cabinets, send your name and address to the Robinson Manufacturing Company, Suite 16, Snowflake Bldg., Toledo, Ohio, for full illustrated information, free.

TWO SHOTS ARE FIRED

East End People Aroused By Commotion at Early Morning Hour.

Officer Captures Prowler After Spirited Chase Through Alley.

People living in the vicinity of Twelfth avenue east and First and Second streets were treated to a little unwelcome excitement at about 4:30 this morning when, after a spirited chase and the firing of two shots, Officer Wanvick captured John Sarich and took him to the police station.

Sarich was prowling around in the vicinity of Twelfth avenue east and Second street when the officer saw him. He called to him to stop, but Sarich said he didn't have time to talk. He was carrying a suspicious looking bundle, so the officer started after him.

Sarich broke into a run, with the officer after him. The pursued turned into the alley between First and Second streets, going east from Twelfth avenue east and the pursuer was right behind. Wanvick fired two shots in the air and Sarich dropped his bundle and his revolver to lighten his load, but he was unsuccessful in his attempt to escape.

The shots and the commotion attendant to the chase aroused the neighborhood. Frightened women and perhaps equally frightened men thrust their heads through open windows and wanted to know if anybody was murdered.

After the officer had assured the people that no damage had been done, he led his prisoner to the police station, and the neighborhood subsided into slumber again. It was afterwards found that the bundle carried by Sarich consisted of a night shirt and two suits of underwear, which had been stolen from the clothes line at the home of M. H. McMahon.

Sarich pleaded guilty in municipal court this morning to carrying concealed weapons and was sentenced to sixty days in the county jail.

STEEL DIVIDEND NOW 5 PER CENT

Common Stock Payment Is Raised at the Quarterly Meeting.

New York April 27.—At the quarterly meeting of the United States Steel corporation yesterday it declared a regular dividend of 1¼ per cent on the common shares thereby increasing the rate from 4 per cent to 5 per cent annually. In a statement to the directors, Chairman Gary announced that any additional disbursements hereafter made on the common stock will take the form of "extra dividends."

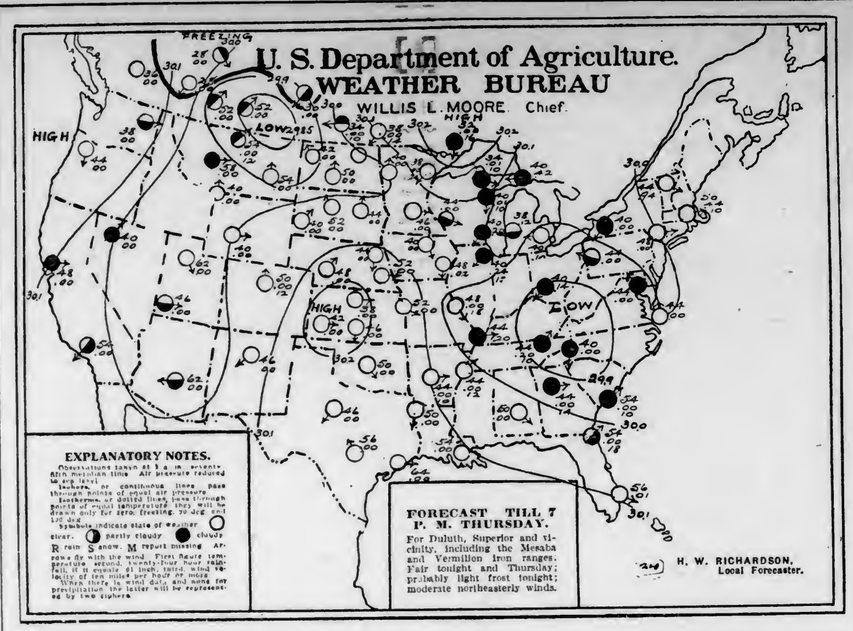
The action of the directors was in line with popular expectations although the course of Steel common in the late session of the stock market seemed to reflect some uncertainty on this point.

Earnings for the quarter ending March 31 last amounted to $37,616,876, with net returns of $31,593,194. These figures are likely to cause some disappointment, as conservative forecasters had fixed gross returns at not less than $39,000,000.

The directors report unfilled orders on hand March 31 as 5,402,514 tons.

Statement by Gary.

The following statement was given out by Chairman Elbert H. Gary:



"The finance committee recommends to the directors the declaration of the dividend of 1¼ per cent for the quarter ending April 1. During the nine years of the existence of the corporation ended April 1, the net earnings over and above all interest charges and dividends at the rate of 7 per cent on the preferred stock, have averaged about 8½ per cent per annum on the common stock, while the dividends actually paid on the common stock have averaged only 2.3 per cent.

"It is now believed conditions justify an increase of the common dividends to the rate of 5 per cent.

"As the membership of the finance committee and of the board of directors may change from time to time, no policy for he future can be fixed, but it is the opinion of the present members of the finance committee that if and when hereafter earnings will justify further increases in distributions they should be declared in shape of extra dividends."

DEAD WOMAN'S JEWELS FOUND BY ACCIDENT.

New York, April 27.—The disappearance of $100,000 worth of jewels of the late Mrs. Theodore Octavia Moss, widow of a theatrical manager, has been solved by a freak of chance. The missing jewels were found yesterday by the accidental touch of a secret spring, which released a door in a pedestal in the former home of Mrs. Moss on Madison avenue.

FAIR

If anybody could ask for a more beautiful spring evening than last evening, there must be something wrong with his conceptions of the beauties of nature. One must look at Duluth weather from the Duluth viewpoint. If one lives near the equator, he would consider last evening, as it was in Duluth, decidedly chilly. But for Duluth, it was all that could be desired. The bright spring weather continues, but light overcoats are still the proper thing.

A year ago today was fair, but not very warm.

The sun rose this morning at 4:59 and it will set at 7:12, giving fourteen hours and thirteen minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"The Eastern disturbance has moved its center from Lake Erie to the region immediately south of the Ohio valley. During the past twenty-four hours further rains resulted over the lake region, Ohio and Middle Mississippi valleys and New England states. A ridge of high pressure extends from Lake Superior southwestward to Kansas. The Pacific coast high pressure has increased somewhat and has caused a return to freezing conditions in Alberta and Saskatchewan. The Alberta low pressure has advanced its center to Southeastern Montana and has caused warmer weather in that state, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Colorado, Utah, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas.

"Fair weather is indicated for the Head of the Lakes during the ensuing thirty-six hours."

General Forecasts.

Chicago, April 27.—Forecasts for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Thursday:

MEMORIAL DAY PLANS

Citizens' Staff Will Work for Solemn Observance This Year.

B. P. Neff Is Elected President of the Civic Body.

At a meeting of the Citizens' staff of the Grand Army of the Republic, held last night at the Commercial club, it was decided to make greater efforts than ever to make Memorial day this year more solemn than ever.

The Grand Army men resent the making of the day one of sports, picnics and amusements. They think that it is one day in the year that should be passed as quietly as possible in remembrance of those who served through the Civil war.

For many years they have tried to have the day passed more quietly and of late years their efforts have not been in vain. Even as long ago as the years that the big bicycle races of the year used to be run on London road each Decoration day, they resented the making of it a day of sport.

They will request that business so far as possible be suspended and the day given over generally to the remembrance of the old soldiers.

The Citizen's staff of the Grand Army of the Republic now numbers about 300. An effort this year will be made to increase it to 500 members.

Officers were elected last night as follows: President, Bentley B. Neff; vice president, S. S. Williamson; secretary, H. L. Dresser; treasurer, John E. MacGregor; executive committee, E. R. Cobb, F. W. Jolitz, and Hon. J. D. Ensign; membership committee, J. E. McGregor, chairman; E. B. Dunning, Harvey S. Clapp, W. J. McCabe and H. W. Lanners.

Lieut-Col. F. E. Resche was elected to act as marshal on Decoration day. He was authorized to appoint his staff.

At the Commercial club on May 4, at noon, there will be held a meeting of all the officers and the committees at which time all further arrangements and final plans for the celebration of the day will be made.

OWNERS OF SEALING SHIP THINK HER SAFE.

St. Johns, Nfld., April 27.—A report brought to this city by the sealing steamer Booths that the Aurora, another vessel of the fleet with a crew of 187 men, had not been seen since the first of the month, is not regarded by the Aurora's owners, C. T. Bowring & Co., Ltd., with alarm. In a statement today the owners said they were not uneasy and expected their vessel would return to port next Monday. They said she was a staunch ship and that ice conditions this season had been more favorable than for many years.

The steamer Kite, which arrived on Sunday, was unreported for thirty-six days.

RHEUMATISM EPIDEMIC

Prescription by Prominent Doctor Claimed Positive Cure.

Those who have tried this say it has no equal for quickly curing chronic and acute rheumatism and backache. "Get one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound and one ounce of Toris compound. Then get half a pint of good whiskey and put the other two ingredients into it. Take a tablespoonful of this mixture before each meal and at bedtime. Shake the bottle before using." The good effects are felt the first day. Any druggist has these ingredients on hand or will quickly get them from his wholesale house.

NO ATTACK MADE ON THE EXCHANGES

Wickersham Defends Federal Investigation Into Cotton Pool Affairs.

Washington, April 27. — Attorney-General Wickersham today made this formal defense of his department's investigation through the New York grand jury into the alleged cotton pool:

"The action of the government in instituting the investigation before the grand jury in New York, concerning an alleged cotton pool, should not in any way be construed as an attack on legitimate operations of any of the cotton or produce exchanges in the United States.

"The proceedings, being on before a grand jury and not yet completed, manifestly cannot, with propriety, be discussed at the present time."

Sales Managers Meet.

The regular monthly meeting of the Duluth division of the National Association of Sales Managers was held last night at the Commercial club.

Alfred Hanchett Jr., advertising manager of F. A. Patrick & Co., read a paper on "Original Prospects," after which a general discussion was entered into on the subject.

Bentley F. Neff, the delegate to the national convention at Chicago, made a report. The Duluth division expressed its appreciation of the recognition its delegate received at the hands of the national body.

Through the summer months the association will meet at luncheon instead of at 6 o'clock. The regular monthly meetings are held on the fourth Tuesday of each month. W. H. Ratterbury, sales manager for the Kelley-How-Thomson company, has the paper for the next meeting.

REORGANIZE DEPARTMENT.

Illinois Central Has Practically Completed Work.

Chicago, April 27.—Announcement of the practical completion of the reorganization of the operating department of the Illinois Central railroad, was made here late yesterday. The reorganization includes the wiping out of the Birmingham and the New Orleans terminal divisions, the former becoming a part of the Tennessee division and the latter a part of the Louisiana division.

Thomas J. Foley, formerly assistant to the vice president, has been made assistant general manager.

LIVE PARROT EVIDENCE OF MURDERS BY POISON.

Sandusky, Ohio, April 27.—Murder by poisoning is believed by the authorities to have caused the death of Charles Callahan and his wife, whose bodies were found in their bed here. Two gas burners and a gas heater, all open, at first made it appear that the couple had been asphyxiated, but the suspicions of the coroner and police were aroused by the discovery of a live parrot in a cage near the bodies.

THOUSANDS GOING TO WELCOME ROOSEVELT.

New York, April 27.—The reception committee which has in charge the welcome home of Theodore Roosevelt in June is being swamped with applications from organizations in many parts of the country which want to participate in the land and naval parades and other features of the celebration. Capt. Arthur F. Cosby, secretary of the committee, says that the latest news is from Nebraska, to the effect that Mayor Dahlman of Omaha and 300 citizens had chartered a special train which would bring them here on June 18 to take part in the festivities.

German musical societies with 8,000 members and Italian societies with 5,000 more will take part.

GETS OFF EASILY.

North Dakotan Accused of Manslaughter Is Given One Year.

Towner, N. D., April 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Finding that they had insufficient evidence on which to bring about the conviction of H. P. Johnson, on a charge of manslaughter, which was lodged against him some time ago, following the death of a Russian in his place of business at Kief, local officials changed the charge to that of blind pigging and the prisoner was sentenced to a year in the state penitentiary, it being his second offense on that charge.

The death of the Russian occurred as a result of a bet made by Johnson that he could not drink ten glasses of whisky without getting drunk. The Russian drank about three glasses and then fell dead.

PROBLEM PLAY BARRED

As Class Production By University of North Dakota.

Grand Forks, N. D., April 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Although it took the members of the senior class of the state university nearly a month to select a class play, it took President F. L. McVey and Miss Ella Fulton, dean of women, about an hour to decide that a change had been made. The play selected, "His House in Order," was somewhat in the nature of a problem pay, and the president and dean of women quickly came to the conclusion, in looking it over, that such a play was not appropriate for presentation as a class play in the state university.

In consequence of that fact, "The Lady of Lyons," has been selected, subject to the approval of President McVey.

CHIPPEWA FALLS WOMAN FOUND DEAD BY HUSBAND.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., April 27.—Last evening at 6 o'clock, when Col. L. J. Rusk of this city arrived home, he found his wife lying dead in the middle of the floor of her sewing room. Death was due to heart failure and had happened some time in the afternoon, she being alone. Mrs. Rusk was about 45 years of age and prominent socially. Her sudden demise was unexpected.

Socialistic Mayor Overworked.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 27.—Mayor Emil Seidel, this city's Socialistic executive, must curtail his work to prevent a physical breakdown. He has had such a strenuous time during the first week in his office that his friends have become alarmed, and have urged him to decrease the pace he has started.

It has been necessary for him to do considerable night work, and in spite of the long hours, he has not been able to catch up with all the work before him.

Ellendale, N. D., Summer School.

Ellendale, N. D., April 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Announcement is made by President W. M. Kern of the state normal-industrial school here, that a three-week summer term for the benefit of the teachers in this section of the state will be held this year. EARLY PAVING WORK.

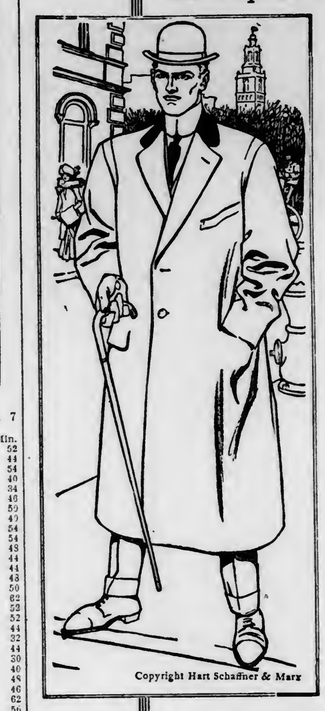
Contractor McDonnell Makes New Record in Grand Forks.

Grand Forks, N. D., April 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—A new record for early paving work was established here yesterday when Contractor P. McDonnell of Duluth put a force of men at work laying concrete. Mr. McDonnell has a big contract in this city, and there are several other contractors also interested, and they all propose to finish the work early. In past seasons the work has not been commenced until late in the spring and the opening of operations at this time is in the nature of a new departure.

YOU NEED NOT BE BALD

How to Stop Dandruff and Give New Life to Your Hair.

Of all nourishing tonics that give life and vitality to the follicles and roots of the hair none is more widely used than the Beta Canthol tonic—perhaps because it can be made at home at small cost.



There is no excuse for dandruff—no excuse for dull colored and dry hair—no excuse for falling hair—no excuse for at least half the bald heads you see. A good hair tonic used once or twice a week will prevent dandruff, invigorate the hair follicles and keep the hair beautiful, abundant and glossy.

Just get from your druggist one ounce of Beta Canthol and one-half pint of alcohol; mix with one-half pint of warm water. Or put the ounce of Beta Canthol in a pint of bay rum. Either method of mixing will please you, for it is the Beta Canthol that keeps the scalp healthy and puts new life into the hair.

Always Found Together

CONCERNING WOMAN.

Simultaneously with the announcement that the club women of the nation are organizing for the suppression of—or—tight-fitting garments designed especially for the lower limbs comes the news from Wellesley college that after years of modesty, that college for the larger education, has removed the ban, in other words the lid is off, and she who would in the year's dramatics assume the role of a swashbuckling hero, or who would ape John Drew's delicious languor, may, with propriety and the full sanction of the faculty, appear in garments that will carry out the idea—that is, trousers.

Heretofore, if a maid would be a man, in a Wellesley production, bloomers were the nearest approach to the bifurcated garments that men affect allowed. For instance, if she were a college fusser she was allowed a dress shirt, the proper sort of vest, a long tailed coat and—bloomers.

Regular masculine trousers were considered not quite chaste.

There is joy at Wellesley at the freer state of things.

"It was quite too ridiculous," said one of the Duluth girls who once tried to give a serious impersonation of a man at Wellesley—in bloomers, of course. "None of us could ever see the sense in it. What were they afraid of? Did they think for a minute that all the rest of humanity thought that normally we walked about with just our feet attached to the bottom of our skirts? Why everybody knows we have le—"

"Ahem," said the reporter, who was a modest youth.

"I'm terribly glad," said the old grad, "that they can wear real trousers at last. Think how the world does move. When I was there," she said with a reminiscent gaze into space, "everybody thrilled when they thought of real trousers in amateur theatricals. I wish I were back," she sighed.

Of course it is quite understood that this custom isn't extended for class room work. Only just when the girls are appearing as men in amateur theatricals.

Miss Hazel Owens will entertain in compliment to the bride tomorrow evening at her home on Cambridge street.

DRAMA LEAGUE

Is Launched on Nation-Wide Career.

The Drama League of America was organized recently at Chicago with several people known to Dulutnians prominent in the organization. Mrs. Frances Squire Potter, formerly of the faculty of the University of Minnesota, and who has lectured here, is secretary of the association, Prof. William Norman Guthrie, who delivered a course of lectures on "The World Drama" in Duluth last autumn, is a vice president, Dr. Richard Burton, who has lectured here and who is of the faculty of the Minnesota university, is also a vice president; and other officers are Mrs. Otis Skinner and Prof. Louis K. Anspacher. The president is Mrs. A. Starr Best.

The Drama league proposes to abolish tights in stage productions, to do away with suggestive costuming and to drive orgiasm from the footlights by enlisting, as a fighting force, 10,000,000 American women, associated either directly or indirectly with women's clubs.

Fifty women were present, representative of the Drama Club of Evanston and Chicago women's clubs. The organization is to be composed of delegates from women's clubs all over the country. Sity-five thousand women are affiliated with women's clubs in Illinois alone.

"We are not here to talk about tights or costumes of any sort," said Mrs. H. W. Duncanson. "The plan is not to attack, but to direct. This is a constructive and not a destructive organization. We have the approval of the principal theatrical managers in our efforts."

Mrs. Meaker declared that the influences of women over the drama in America was powerful, but unorganized. She added:

"We are not attacking the managers. We seek and are obtaining their cooperation. We realize that theatrical men must play the plays the public will pay to see, and our intention is to labor with the managers for an improvement in public ideals of the drama. We find that all the most prominent producers are only too anxious to aid in a reconstructive process."

The new league has strong support in New York and Boston. Letters of encouragement have been received from all the leading dramatic stars of the American and English stages.

A branch of the Drama league will probably be organized in Duluth in connection with the course of lectures by M. Papot to be given during May.

REGRETS ARE IDLE

By HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD.

Last year's toothache does not hurt us; it seems as though it hurts someone else; in truth, it seems as if that tooth might have been saved. Last year's affront makes us smile to think we should have been such fools as to mind it; the misery we endured a twelve-month since, in our old bonnet, from the contumelious stare of somebody in a Paris hat, is now, in the distance, too infinitesimal for us to condescend to remember.

But then it is quite possible that we have a new hat ourselves this year, that nobody is affronting us, that our teeth are in fine order; we should not dream of allowing ourselves to be unbalanced by such trifles anyway now. What are they to be compared to the sore hangnail of the present moment, to the sudden cracking and unexpected shininess of our best silk, to the bill with no money to pay it!

Yesterday's troubles vanish in the perspective of two narrowing lines, today's hover just before the sight, and shut out everything else. We cannot, to be sure, forget the facts of the past troubles, but all their sting and anguish is over and gone.

Of course, we are not speaking of the real and significant griefs, the vital sorrows of the past, the unveiling regrets, the losses never to be made good—events whose meaning has entered into our being, and incorporated itself with our soul. Those things die only when we do, and will not. It may be, die even then, for their discipline may have been the thing we needed most, and nothing that is really valuable and necessary for us can ever be lost out of our possession.

In "My Summer With Dr. Singletary," Whittier says: "The present will live hereafter, memory will bridge over the gulf between the two worlds, for only in the condition of their intimate union can we preserve our identity and personal consciousness."

Blot out the memory of this world, and what would heaven or hell be to us? Nothing whatever. Death would be simple annihilation of our actual selves and the substitution therefor of a new creation in which we should have no more interest than in an inhabitant of Jupiter or the fixed stars. Still, although memory may thus be the vital current of our identity, we doubt if we shall carry into any life whatever memory of the teasing, little details of our annoyances, although their effect forever in countless touches on our natures, like the fret of that ceaseless dripping which wears a stone.

It is, indeed, only the exceptional nature, and often the morbid one, that is able to recall pain, that is saddened by its recollection, but we can all of us thrill again with the recollection of old joys; and the optimist might well argue, from experience of the truth, that pain is perishable, but joy is immortal.

Perhaps if we recognized this more forcibly, the petty provocations, the little, teasing troubles, that are so "tolerable and not to be endured," while we are laboring through them, would cease to make the present uncomfortable, would wear less detestable aspects as they came, would no longer excite, in the rebellion against them, our ill temper, malice, hatred, and all uncharitableness, and would make less final impressions upon our nature than even now they do; we might refuse to be provoked or teased by them, and remembering the evanescence of pain and vexation, and the permanency of joy, we might yet learn a lesson from the trees of the forest that heal their wounds with precious gums; from the oysters that mend their shells with pearls.

LORE OF THE KITCHEN

Appetizing Ox Tail Stew.

To make an enticing oxtail stew, joint an oxtail and put it in a stewpan with sufficient cold water to cover. Bring it to the boil, then add a clove, six pepper-corns, salt, herbs, and a sliced onion. Simmer for two hours, then put the oxtail on a hot dish. Thicken the liquid with flour and add a little lemon juice. Reboil and strain through a fine sieve over the dish on which the oxtail is served.

An Excellent Pudding.

Take six ounces of flour, two ounces of butter, two ounces of lard, a quarter of a pound of sugar, one egg, one tablespoonful of milk, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one saltspoon full of salt and vanilla flavoring if liked. Beat butter and lard together with the sugar. Whip the eggs—yoke and white separately—add to creamed butter, etc., and beat well. Now add the flour into which has been mixed the powder and salt. Add vanilla to milk and beat all ingredients together into very thick paste. Grease well a pudding basin, a quarter full of strawberry or raspberry jam. Put in the mixture and steam for two hours.

Cauliflower au Gratin.

Here is a dish to make the mouth water. Break a cooked cauliflower into flowers, put a layer in a shell of Edam cheese and cover with cream sauce. Alternate layers of cauliflower and sauce until the shell is filled, having the last layer sauce. Sprinkle with buttered cracker crumbs, and set the shell in the oven to brown the crumbs. Serve a scraping of cheese with each portion of cauliflower.

TRY THIS DINNER

Tomato Bisque.

Stew one pint of canned tomatoes for one-half hour. Add one-half teaspoonful of soda, stir until the froth disappears and strain. Set the tomatoes back upon the range and add one-half teacup of fine cracker crumbs, one level tespooon salt, one saltspoon white pepper or paprika, or neither, and one tablespoon of butter. Then stir in a pint of boiling milk. If desired, add some onion extract. This formula will make a nutritious and delicious soup if followed exactly. Hot toasted crackers go well with this soup.

Meat—Braised Veal.

Take a piece of the shoulder weighing about five pounds. Remove the bone and tie up in good shape. Put a piece of butter the size of half an egg, together with a few shavings of onions into a kettle and let it get hot. Salt and pepper the veal and put it into the butter. Cover and put over a medium fire, turning occasionally until the meat is brown on both sides. Then set the kettle back where it can simmer slowly for about two and a half hours. If the juices of the meat, together with the butter, do not make sufficient gravy to cook it in, add one or two tablespoonfuls of hot water from time to time.

Vegetables—Celery With Parmesan Cheese.

Fill a well-buttered baking dish with celery cooked in a cream sauce, in which grated Parmesan cheese has been mixed. Sprinkle the top with bread crumbs and grated cheese, dot with butter and bake till a golden brown.

Dessert—Orange Shortcake.

One pint flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon soda, one teaspoon cream of tartar, one-quarter cup of butter, one egg, one scant cup of milk. Mix the dry ingredients. Beat the egg, add three-fourths of a cup of milk and the butter melted. Stir this quickly into the flour and use more milk if needed. The dough should be just stiff enough to be handled. Divide into two parts and roll each to fit a shallow tin plate. Bake, and when done split open and spread with butter and sweetened oranges. Peel and divide the oranges, remove the seeds and thick inner pith, and cut each section into three or four slices. Put the two cakes together and cover the top layer of fruits thickly with powdered sugar.

LORE OF THE KITCHEN

Tasty Baked Pudding.

Take six ounces of flour, three ounces of suet, four ounces of sugar, grated rind of half a lemon, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one egg, and a gill of milk. Mix all together, pour into a well-buttered pie dish and bake one hour.

Advantage of a Casserole.

A casserole is a heavy earthenware dish with a cover. A substitute for it can easily be improvised by using a heavy earthenware dish with a heavy plate for the cover. A casserole presentable enough in appearance to be put on the table serves the double purpose of baking and serving dish.

Celery in Salads.

Celery must be carefully handled when used in making salads, for it so lacks in absorbent qualities that it requires coaxing. Yet, if it stands in the dressing a moment longer than the required time it wilts and the salad becomes a failure.

READY FOR THE ROAD

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

When contemplating a trip from home, whether it is to be a long or short one, it is wise to count the cost, ascertain the best routes, and make as close a schedule of the time to be spent on the journey as you can.

Approximately you may estimate the expense of any given trip, but, having done so, your comfort and peace of mind will be greatly enhanced if you add something for a margin. In going anywhere beyond your ordinary bailwick it is proper to provide for illness or other contingency which may delay and largely increase your outlay.

To have just enough, with nothing in the background to draw upon, may do for youth and inexperience in the happy-go-lucky season of life, but few of us, when past youth, dare to take the risks that boys and girls survey so lightly. Better take a cheaper trip or forego a costly one, than to be stranded without means in a city of strangers. By means of maps, railway guides and the various trips outlined by tourists one may obtain an accurate notion of where, how, and when to go to any point on the globe.

A gentleman who recently with his wife went around the world, visiting many foreign mission stations and traveling by every sort of conveyance, according to the ways of the country in which he happened to be, made the trip in fourteen months, arriving at his home in New York only twelve hours later than he had planned before starting. Judicious planning will enable one to travel without fuss or fretting on the way.

Set out on a jurney expecting to have a good time. People who forbode disaster are on the ragged edge of anxiety every moment. To anticipate is to look for something beautiful around the next corner, to watch eargerly for something new, curious, or charming, whenever one enters an unfamiliar region.

The responsibility of conveying a traveler safely rests with those who have sold him a ticket. Captains, conductors, engineers and the many men who manage trains, or sail ships, are charged with the duty of landing passengers in good shape at the objective point on their tickets.

A great deal of confidence may be reposed in the average man. Accidents do happen, but the percentage of accidents as compared with the immense aggregate of successful travel is extremely small. I take it for granted that those who read this commit themselves daily to the care of the Father in heaven, who neither slumbers nor sleeps, and who has given his angels charge concerning his children, that no evil befall them. On the road or at home God's child may say, "I laid me down and slept; for the Lord sustained me."

The pleasure of any journey is marred, if not ruined, by the presence of fear in the heart. Sanctified common sense must be a part of every traveler's outfit.

IN THE NURSERY

Encourage, But Don't Flatter.

Phenomenal children sometimes develop into young nuisances because of parental pride that cultivates the child's self-esteem rather than the talent which makes it "the cutest child in town." If the child really is smart do all you can to call its particular gifts into play; but don't make a perpetual exhibition of them and don't let the little one think it is a wonder. It is not wise to describe a child's clever deeds nor to quote its bright remarks in its presence. One bad result is apt to be that the act or or the speech may be repeated with tiresome frequency, just to win admiration.

Guard Against Sickness.

It is a mistaken notion that children are bound to have certain diseases before their childhood ends, and that the sooner they have the measles or the whooping cough, or any of the ailments that children are supposed to be heir to, the better it is. That is true in one way, for the trouble will be over. But it is better to avoid the trouble altogether, if it can be done. For that reason it is wise to keep the children away from places where there is any suspicion of infection, and a physician should be consulted immediately there is any indication of disturbance in the child's system that cannot be accounted for.

Breaking a Child of the Bottle.

Sometimes it is as hard to wean a child from the bottle as to wean it from the mother's breast. Whether the difficulty be the force of habit or juvenile obstinacy the remedy in either case is simple. The bottle must be put away out of sight and the milk given in a cup. There is very likely to be an outcry and a contest more or less prolonged, but the child's hunger and the mother's patience will prevail in the end.

Avoid Anger in Punishment.

If it is necessary to punish a child occasionally be sure it is never done when you are angry. Do not allow misconduct to continue until you are so provoked by it that your punishment of the child is vindictive or other than corrective. In that case you are apt to make the child feel resentful rather than repentant, for the little ones, somehow, perceive where the trouble is.

THE EVENING STORY

THE BLACK PEARL ROBBERY

By Ferdinand Courtnay.

Taylor Mansfield, the detective, had finished a leisurely breakfast and was about to arise from the table when he heard the shouts of newsboys in the street crying their wares with unwonted vigor.

Calling a servant, Mansfield sent for a paper, and then, lighting a cigarette, glanced at the page to learn what important bit of news had caused the commotion.

Under a glaring black headline on the first page the detective read:

"SENSATIONAL MURDER IN MAIDEN LANE.

"An extraordinary crime was discovered this morning in the jewelry and curio shop of Mr. Lazarus Rosenthal in Maiden Lane when the proprietor opened for the day's business.

"When Mr. Rosenthal arrived at his shop at half-past nine o'clock he found the door of the streng room open and the electric lights burning. Entering the vault, Mr. Rosenthal stumbled over a dead body. Subsequent identification leads to the belief that the murdered man was Henry Minns, who was, until a fortnight ago, employed by Mr. Rosenthal.

"Mr. Rosenthal informed the police that the vault door had been opened with a skeleton key and a priceless jewel, the priceless pearl of Bahrein, is missing.

"A search of the dead man's clothing did not reveal the jewelry and the police are of the opinion that Minns must have had a companion and that they quarreled over the loot and Minns was killed.

"The pearl was the property of Curtis Ryan, the Steel millionaire, who had placed it with Mr. Rosenthal to be sold."

Mansfield had no sooner read the story than his telephone bell jangled.

"This is the United and General Insurance company," said a voice. "Can you come to our office at once?"

"Immediately," replied Mansfield, and replaced the receiver.

Nearly an hour later the detective stepped into Rosenthal's shop. Two policemen were on guard at the door and two others were guarding the vault, where the dead body lay untouched, awaiting the coming of the coroner.

"You don't mind if I nose around a bit, do you, captain?" asked Mansfield, showing his card.

"This is our case," growled the captain.

"But I represent the company which insured the gem," explained the detective.

"All right, go ahead," replied the policeman grudgingly.

Stooping over the corpse, Mansfield gently felt the skull. With an exclamation of surprise, he noted that the blow had crushed it to a pulp. Three feet away stood a hireous Indion idol with an iron hand, gripping an iron club, upraised as though to strike. Upon the base was a Hindoo inscription. Mansfield copied it very intently. Then he made a close scrutiny of everything in the room, questioned the proprietor and examined the idol minutely.

"I'll be back shortly," he said, as he called a cab and drove uptown rapidly.

When Mansfield returned again, the coroner had inspected the body and all traces of crime were removed.

"We haf nodings else for you to see," exclaimed Rosenthal as Mansfield essayed to enter the vault.

"Just a minute," said the detective, and as a customer enterd then, Rosenthal did not demur.

Hastening to the idol, the detective took the paper containing the inscription from his pocket.

"H'm, Pali, the sacred language of India," he muttered. "And as Prof. Burt says this idol is the God of Death and the translation reads: 'In my heart are treasures, but seek not, for death keeps them safe.'"

Taking a stout piece of cord from his pocket, Mansfield tied it to a ring, hidden in the scrolled carving on the breast of the image. Stepping back, he pulled sharply, and the breast fell outward, but at the same moment the metal arm fell with crushing and terrifying force. Mansfield ran forward, reached within and found, as he had expected, a jewel boy. Hastily removing the lid, he saw the gleams of the famous black pearl.

"It was not difficult at all," explained the detective several hours later, after Rosenthal had confessed the robbery of the jewel, and he sat in the offices of the United and General Insurance company.

"I got my first start from the fatal blow. It was harder than a human being could strike, judging from the crushed condition of Minns' skull.

"Minns was formerly an English soldier in India, and I presume there he had heard of this idol which was supposed to contain fabulous wealth, although the death-dealing of its right arm was not fully understood.

"My friend, Prof. Burt, translated the inscription for me. It was evident that Minns had tried to rob his old employer alone, although I felt reasonably sure that he was not after the black pearl, because he did not know that Rosenthal had it.

"Rosenthal found Minns' dead body, I reasoned. Even in his fright and excitement, his cunning asserted itself, and he thought to rob his client of the jewel. If I had found the interior of the idol empty, I would not have accused Rosenthal. But Minns could not have placed the jewel within the metal bust, because he was dead before the thing had fairly opened.

"Rosenthal's protests against my investigation strengthened my suspicions. It merely required our accusation to make him confess."

"Well," exclaimed the manager, handing Mansfield a fat check, "it will be a long time before I feel like putting faith in human nature again."

"Oh, human beings are not so dangerous," replied the detective laughing. "They are not half so deadly as some idols I know."

HOUSE WAS STRIPPED

Thieves Took Everything But the Piano, Says Dominick Cartisano.

Made a Clean Sweep While He Was Out of City.

While Dominick Cartisano was away from the city on a business trip, his place of residence, 715 South Fifty-seventh avenue west was entered and everything, with he exception of a piano was stolen. John Biotti of No. 1 South Central avenue and Nicholas Pauline of 221 South Fifty-sixth avenue west were arrested at noon today on a charge of being implicated in the theft.

When Cartisano returned to his home this week, he was somewhat surprised to find the walls of his house bare. Pictures had been taken down from the walls, rugs and carpets from the floor, heavy stoves and beds purloined, in fact everything but the piano stolen. No definite charges have been placed against the two men under arrest, but it is understood that one will be held for grand larceny and the other for receiving stolen goods.

Cartisano, it is claimed, is the man who harbored John Moribito, the Italian who shot Mike Talarico last summer in a quarrel over the refusal of Talarico to give his daughter's hand in marriage. Morobito, it is claimed, was nursed by Cartisano until he was able to leave the city.

John Biotti, who will probably be charged with receiving stolen goods, has for many years kept a candy store at Main street and Central avenue. A few days ago, his son Anthony, was arrested for implication in a theft at a candy store belonging to Peter Santere and was sent to the Red Wing reformatory for violating his parole.

The case against Pauline will probably be the more serious. It is understood that Pauline and Cartisano are related and that prior to the latter's departure from the city, he left the house in charge of Pauline. Several of the missing articles have been found in Biotti's possession. Biotti claims that he purchased them from Pauline.

Cartisano had a search warrant issued yesterday and the West Duluth police entered Biotti's home and found many of the missing articles. A list of some of missing goods follow: One sideboard, two small center tables, one mattress, seven pillows, two blankets, two bedspreads, five rugs, two rocking chairs, one large clock, one grind stone, two iron tubs, one wash boiler, one box tools, one heating stove, one mackinaw coat, one dish pan, one guitar, two bread pans, one set dishes, one set kitchen utensils, one stair carpet, one lot wearing apparel, two umbrellas and one lace of statuary.

Biotti and Pauline will be arraigned in municipal court this afternoon.

SUIT AGAINST MATCH COMPANY

Father of Lilly Wicklund Asks Damages to Amount of $5,000.

Conard Wicklund, as father of Lilly Wicklund, has begun suit in district court against the Union Match company for $5,000 for injuries alleged to have been sustained by the girl while she was in the employ of the company last December.

In his complaint the father states that while engaged in her duties, that of sweeping up about the match machines, the girl's hair became entangled in a shaft. The shaft which was revolving, pulled the girl toward the machinery and her hair was torn out by the roots and the scalp loosened before the macaliney could be stopped, according to the complaint.

He also states that she has been in ill health ever since the accident occurred. He claims that she cannot sleep at night and that she has endured much physical pain as the result of the accident.

WANT RIVER RESTOCKED

A petition, asking the state fish and game commission to restock the St. Louis river with pike spawns, is being circulated in the western end of the city and Fond du Lac and New Duluth.

The supply in the river has become depleted in the last few years, and unless the river is restocked it is thought that the pike will become extinct.

This is the last year that the fish commission will take any pike spawn from the river. According to John Mattson, a local warden, the commission is getting enough spawn from other streams.

The muddy condition at the mouth of the St. Louis prevents the pike from returning to their spawning grounds in the spring, and every year the number of pike caught grows smaller.

According to Mr. Mattson, the pike in the river are not as good as those caught in the lake.

STAGNANT POOL CAUSES COMPLAINT.

Residents living on Thirty-ninth avenue west, between Oneota and Magellan streets, are indignant because the board of public works does not attend to a stagnant pool which has formed in the street in front of their homes.

About thirty-five families have homes facing the street on one side of which there is a pool of water which had been standing for some time. Sewerage has collected there and the street is in a filthy condition.

Numerous complaints have been made to the board, but as yet no action has been taken.

The boy's father died a short time ago, and some property has been left in his name. The mother says that he is a coo kby trade, has dark brown hair, brown eyes, and is of short and stocky build.

VERDICTS FOR THE PLAINTIFFS

Northern Pacific and City Lose in Personal Injury Actions.

Two sealed verdicts were opened in district court this morning.

For injuries which his son, Edward, sustained when he fell off the sidewalk on Fourth avenue west between Third and Fourth street last fall, Thomas Dillon, the father will receive $300 from the city.

The Dillons claimed that the railing which was old and worn, gave way and as a result the boy sustained a fractured leg. In his complaint he asked for damages to the amount of $2,500.

Louis Backman who sued the Northern Pacific for injuries sustained when he fell in alighting from the company's gasoline car at Fond du Lac, got a verdict for $200.

Backman claimed that the car started before he had a chance to alight in safety, and claimed negligence on the part of the railroad company.

The dances will be given on Tuesday evening of each week and the music will be of the best, for the Third Regiment band will play.

MADE IT WARM FOR COLLECTOR

Mrs. James Murphy of Fifth avenue west and Third street gave Joe Rosen, a collector, a warm reception yesterday when he called at her residence.

She paid $7.50 in police court yesterday afternoon after being found guilty of assault.

When he appeared on the porch, she slammed the door in his face. He persisted. She told him to "skidoo." He refused. Then, she claims, he kicked down the door, breaking the lock. Whereupon Rosen stated that she attacked him with a rock as big as a man's head. He swore out a warrant charging her with assault and she was tried in police court yesterday afternoon.

CONTRIBUTE GENEROUSLY

Duluthians Respond Nobly to Call From Anti-Tuberculosis Committee.

The First Day Brings in Subscriptions of $334.50.

Speedy and generous has been the response of Duluth people to the appeal of the Anti-tuberculosis committee for funds to carry on the work of this philanthropic organization during the next year. There has already been received the sum of $334.50.

As the appeal was issued Monday, this speaks well for the attitude of the people of the city toward the anti-tuberculosis work.

Accompanying the contribution of Arthur C. Nelson was a note to the committee, saying:

"Sorry I cannot give more to this worthy cause, owing to the death of my beloved wife, who succumbed to the white plague. Believe me, I want to thank the anti-tuberculosis committee for obtaining and keeping Miss Lee, as she has been a great help to us."

Another communication came from H. B. Gouth and is self-explanitory. It is dated at Pine City and reads as follows:

"In looking over the Saturday Herald I see the appeal for funds for the coming year of the anti-tuberculosis committee. Therefore please find inclosed $10 to help your noble work along. I am at present confined to the sanitorium at Pine City for tuberculosis. I have been confined to my bed until last Thursday, since then I have been up and around and am feeling fine, in fact, I have gained two pounds since I got up.

"If you see any of my friends at lodge or elsewhere, just tell them I have got the fight won and will be back to Duluth in a short time looking like a 2-year-old.

"Trusting this money will reach you safely and may help some poor soul, I beg to remain, yours very sincerely, "H. B. GOUTH."

STEADY DECLINE IN COPPERS

Market Has Weak Tone and Sags Throughout the Session.

The copper market today was subjected to heavy short selling, as well as liquidation, by frightened holders, and the market declined steadily from the opening. In some issues there was a show of resistance, but it was quickly swept away. The rallies were only temporary. North Butte lost 2 points from the opening, Lake 2 points, Amalgamated 2½ points, Calumet & Arizona 1 point, and Steel common declined 2 points.

The increased dividend in Steel Common had been partly discounted before it was announced, but speculators took advantage of the declaration, and the stock opened strong, 1⅛ points higher than yesterday's close. It slowly sagged, however, with occasional fitful rallies. The stock was sold short all the way down. It opened at $84, gained ¼ point and declined to $83, sold at $83.87½ and declined to $81.87½, selling at $82 at the close.

Professional sentiment is bearish. There seems to be a concerted effort on the part of professionals to put stocks lower as the resistance is not especially stubborn. The only support the market encounters is occasional short covering and congestion from overselling.

The local market was quiet. The annual meeting of the Duluth stock exchange will be held at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Butte-Ballaklava sold at $9.50, Copper Queen at 39 cents, Cordova, full paid, at $1.12½ to $1.18¾, Shattuck at $25.50 to $25, Butte & Superior at $1.93¾ to $2 and back to the opening, Calumet & Sonora at $19.50, Carman at 94 cents and Sierra at $3.31¼.

Amalgamated sold at $74 down to $71.37½ and up to $71.50, Butte Coalition at $21 to $21.25 to $21, Calumet & Arizona at $64 to $63, Giroux at $8 to $7.50, Greene at $8.75 to $8.87½ and back to the opening, Lake at $53.50 to $54.50 to $51 to $51.50, North Butte at $35 to $35.50 and then down to $33, Superior & Pittsburg at $12.75 to $13.

The Moonlight Mining company in which several Duluthians are interested, will begin developments on an extensive scale on the property which is in the Coeur d'Alene district of Idaho. The property is a lead-silver proposition. The tunnel of the Trade Dollar company will be utilized by the construction of a tunnel from the Moonlight property to connect with it. The Moonlight is said to carry the veins of the famous Hercules mine. An assessment of 1 cent a share on the outstanding 1,200,000 shares has been made to defray the cost of the tunnel.

SUPERIOR

STANDARD OIL IS TURNED DOWN

Superior Council Refuses Permit for Erection of Storage Tanks.

The Standard Oil company was refused a permit to install and maintain storage tanks near the bay front on the St. Louis river by the Superior council last evening. The resolution to grant the permission was voted down 11 to 9.

The refusal of the council to grant the permit was not a surprise. At a past meeting officials of the company were given to understand that unless some concessions were made to Superior by the oil concern no permit was to be granted. The council asked the company to make Superior its distributing center.

The council, in a resolution passed last evening at the instigation of Alderman Kennedy, decided to investigate into the proposed plans of the Soo road in the matter of running its ore tracks to the docks on St. Louis bay front.

A motion was made directing the city attorney to inquire of the railroad commission whether the company had made application for a certificate of necessity or had plans of its proposed work.

MILLIONS IN STOCK FRAUD

Promoters Are Sued in Wyoming and Action Brings Out Grave Charges.

Cheyenne, Wyo., April 27.—Through a suit in the United States court here against promoters who have been negotiating stocks and bonds of fifteen different corporations, the capital stock of which aggregates more than $31,000,000, was made public today what is alleged to be a great fraud. The promoters are said to have obtained millions of dollars by the sale of stocks.

THIRTY MATCHES APIECE DAILY.

The American people use up the enormous total of 700,000,000,000 matches a year. It is the general belief that matches are the by-product of planing mills and other wook-working factories, but as a matter of fact the best grades of two-inch lumber is used for matches, while sash, doors and blinds are the by-products of the match timber sawmills.

In a single year the manufacturers cut 225,000,000 feet (board measure) of pine in the Great Lakes region, and one of the 150 odd factories used up 200,000 feet of sugar or yellow pine logs every day. The deduction is that in common with other industries of the United States depending upon existing forests the matchmakers are within sight of a shortage in the wood supply.

When the present timber holdings have been depleted, says the Technical World, they, of course, cannot be duplicated in a generation, and the people of this country may have to get along with fewer than twenty-five or thirty matches a day each, as at present. In their insistent way they will probably demand that the practice of Germany and France be followed, that foresters plant and grow timber especially for matches.

CLOSE SHOWS AN ADVANCE

Wheat Market Is Weak Early in Session But Recovers.

Flax Prices Are Off Under Pressure of Selling and Offers.

Duluth Board of Trade, April 27.—The market became oversold today toward the close and was also subjected to moderate buying in the distant months, induced by bullish crop reports. The market recovered from its early decline and closed higher than yesterday. May was ⅝c up and July was ⅝@¾c up. May opened at $1.06½ asked and sold at $1.06, $1.06¼, $1.06, $1.06½, $1.06¼, $1.07⅜, $1.06¾, $1.07⅞ and closed $1.07⅞ bid. July opened with offers at $1.07 and sold at $1.06¾, $1.07, $1.06⅝, $1.06, $1.07⅛, $1.06⅞ and up to $1.08½, closing $1.08½ asked. September closed $1.00⅜ bid.

Flax was weak, being subjected to considerable selling pressure. Reports from the Northwest indicate that durum seed in some places is rotting in the ground, and that it will be replaced by flax. Seeding in flax has started in some localities in North Dakota. The acreage will be greatly increased. The country made scattered offerings of flax to arrive in September and October. Trading in the near option was moderate and was relatively weaker than the deferred months. May flax opened at $2.39 asked and sold at $2.38, $2.35¼, $2.36, $2.35¾, $2.36¼ and closed at $2.36. July opened at $2.33½ asked and sold at $2.33, closing at $2.29. September opened at $1.77 asked and sold at $1.76, $1.70 and back to $1.75, closing with offers at $1.75. October was offered at $1.67, sold at $1.65½, $1.64½ and $1.65¼, closing at $1.65½ bid.

Oats closed ⅛c off. Few people believe that the recent freezing weather damaged oats to a noticeable extent. The cash demand in the East is reported to have improved. Rye and barley were unchanged. Durum closed ¼c up, and cash wheat was on a parity with May.

Lower cables and heavy selling at the opening caused a sharp decline in wheat in the early hours today. Toward noon the market firmed on buying by shorts, who were prepared however to flood the market with selling orders on the slightest signs of further weakness, and scattered accumulation of the distant months which gave a semblance of opposition to the decline.

The foreign situation was exceedingly weak. La Plata and Manitoba offerings were liberal at a decline and Russia and Australian offers were heavy. Cables were weak, also, on account of lower American and Buenos Ayres futures.

The bears up to noon did not exert much pressure on the market after the early hour. They held themselves in readiness however to force further declines if a favorable opportunity was presented. On account of mixed crop gossip the bears are more timid than they otherwise would be. Fair buying in the Chicago September option helped to steady the market around midday. Profit taking by shorts who sold on the last turn of the market contributed to the strength at midday.

The accumulation in the deferred months received some impetus from the report of Secretary F. D. Coburn of the Kansas state agricultural board. He gave the abandoned acreage as 1,940,000 bu and the condition 76 per cent compared with 88 per cent a year ago.

Most reports indicate that the recent freeze did not damage wheat either in the Southwest or the Northwest. The bulls sent out messages from scattered localities, however, claiming serious damage. The Herald's reports from many places in the Northwest indicate that damage was exceedingly light if any damage was done. Heavy frosts occurred in the Northwest in May of last year, but the crop was not as far advanced as it will be this year.

Bullish sentiment is still centered in the distant months. The bulls maintain that the winter wheat is deteriorating daily and the extent of winter wheat killing is becoming more apparent as the season advances. There is moderate buying of the deferred months on all breaks and this helps to steady the market on the declines. For the next few days the market may be a weather proposition, some traders think, but those bearishly inclined hold to their belief that values will eventually work lower. While the shorts have little trouble in forcing the market downward they have had some difficulty in buying back their stuff and this has made them proceed with caution, especially as the market is inclined to a considerable extent by the crop situation which is hedged about with considerable uncertainty.

If rains do not fall in Kansas and Nebraska the trade may be expected to encounter drouth reports from the Southwest. No rain fell in Kansas yesterday and the bulls say that if moisture does not materialize in a few days the market will have to deal with a drouth situation that will strengthen further the technical position of the future months.

Last year Duluth sold a large amount of wheat to Chicago for delivery on Chicago May contracts. This year, however, there is no bull movement in May wheat. Chicago stores are exceedingly small and there is a fairly large long interest out, but the situation is not of such a nature as to offer hope to the local market. There is plenty of spring wheat in store here, but there is no demand for it. Deliveries on May contracts here probably will be the largest in the history of the market.

Guy Warren thinks Duluth will not need within 5,000,000 bu of as much spring wheat this year as last year as no export business is being done and the prospects do not indicate that Chicago will need to draw on this market as happened last year.

One of the surprising features of the market is the heavy receipts of wheat at Winnipeg. Receipts are so large at that market that they become immediately a general factor of considerable importance. Canada has plenty of wheat for her own uses and for export to the continent and the United Kingdom, which is another argument in favor of lower prices for American wheat. With Russia shipping heavily and offering liberally at lower prices the foreigner is in a position to ignore American wheat entirely.

Broomhall cabled: Wheat at start showed heavy undertone, with offerings large and pressing for sale. As a result there was free realizing, which carried prices down ⅝ to ⅞d. Following opening, heavy pressure, mainly by way of profit taking continued, and values lost an additional ⅜ to ⅝d. Selling developed owing to weakness in American, Canadian and Buenos Ayres markets and the pressure on both Manitoba and La Plata which, were freely offered at a decline. Continental demand noted yesterday had entirely disappeared. European crop advices continued favorable, and both Russia and Australia were offering freely, with distant cargoes tendered at 3d decline. At midday market was weak 1 to 1¼d lower than yesterday. Corn opened dull, unchanged. Later there was a decline of ¼d in sympathy with break in wheat and owing to pressure of La Plata spot. Cargoes of wheat arrived off coast, nil; awaiting orders four, in distant position easy and offered at 3d decline. Corn dull demand limited.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Fresh Break of More Than a Cent at Wheat Opening.

Chicago, April 27.—A fresh break of more than one cent in wheat occurred today notwithstanding the sharp downturn of the market yesterday. Better weather conditions were chiefly responsible. In addition the foreign market reports had a decidedly bearish tinge. There was little support, a considerable percentage of what there was coming from pit traders seeking for quick profits.

May wheat which closed at $1.08⅜@1.08½, opened at $1.06¾ to $1.07½, sold down to $1.06½, rallied to $1.07¼ and fell back to $1.06¾. The slump in September was not so marked, the opening price being about ½c to 1c down at 99c to 99⅜c.

As a result of the official Kansas report showing a heavy abandonment of area sentiment underwent a decided change and shorts stampeded to cover. Much of the early loss in May was recovered while a net advance was scored in July and September. The close was strong with September ⅛@½c up at $1.00⅜.

Corn started sharply lower on general commission house selling. The grain unloaded was supposed to be largely that which was bought in sympathy with the recent strength in wheat. May corn opened ½c to ¾c lower at 58½c to 58⅝c and sold down to 58⅜c.

Later corn recovered in sympathy with wheat and the close was firm with September ⅛@¼c higher at 63¼c.

In the oats pit holders threw their grain overboard and the local crowd pounded the market. May opened ½c to ¾c lower at 41⅜c to 42c, and sold down to 41⅜c.

Provisions turned strong after an easy opening. It was said that packers were buying. First prices were generally 2½c to 27½c down, but the rise carried September pork to $21.25, September lard to $11.97½ and September ribs to $11.72½.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Wheat Turns Very Strong on Report From Kansas.

Minneapolis, Minn., April 27.—Wheat late today was very strong on a bullish report of Secretary Coburn of Kansas, whose figures indicate Kansas will yield about 64,000,000 bu. The early session was easy. May opened ⅝c below yesterday's close and early declined ½c. From this the low point there was a gradual advance and just before the close the near option sold 2¼c above the early low point and closed 2¼c above. Local elevator stocks decreased 250,000 bu for four days. Minneapolis today received 119 cars of wheat against 114 cars a year ago; Duluth 39 cars against 27, and Winnipeg 255 against 75.

May opened $1.05½, high $1.07½, low $1.05, closed $1.07¼; July opened $1.06¼@1.06, high $1.08@$1.08⅛, low $1.06, closed $1.08. September opened 98⅛c, high $1.00, low 98@98⅛, closed 99⅞@$1.00.

The flour market continued dull, but steady. Shipments remained light and prices unchanged. Demand was slow and millers complained of the lack of shipping directions. Shipments, 34,034 bbl. First patents in wood f. o. b. Minneapolis, $5.20@5.40; second patents, $5.00@5.20; first clears, $4.05@4.15; second clears, $2.80@3.10.

Cotton Market.

New York April 27.—Cotton opened steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 7 points, a better response to the Liverpool strength being prevented by better weather reports and a renewal of yesterday's selling account, under which late months eased off to within a point of last night's finals during the first few minutes. There was a good demand, however, from leading buyers, influenced by claims that from a favorable outlook recent bad weather had placed early crop prospects in a doubtful condition.

Futures closed steady; closing bids: April, 14.75; May, 14.65; June, 14.52; July, 14.51; August, 13.83; September, 13.03; October, 2.65; November, 12.49; December, 12.48; January, 12.45.

Spot closed quiet, 20 points decline; middling uplands, 15.05; middling gulf, 15.30; sales, 5,500 bales.

PLENTY OF IVORY.

Kansas City Star: "Ivory is cheaper today than it ever was. More ivory is being imported than ever. It isn't true that we are in danger of exhausting our supply."

The speaker, an ivory dealer, patted a tusk as big as a girl of 14.

"This tusk," he said, "is from an ivory palisade about an African king's palace. In the interior of Africa there are innumerable kings and chiefs whose palisades are of ivory. For consider, since the world began there have been tusks, and these tusks for centuries have been preserved by native potentates. It will be long enough before we exhaust that supply.

"The price of ivory? Well, I'll give you $4 a pound for the best tusk, suitable for billiard balls. That is 40 per cent lower than the price was ten years ago—and what better proof is there than that of the abundance of the supply?"

STOCKS ARE UNSETTLED

Buoyant Upshoot at the Start Followed By Steady Decline.

Tone Becomes Weak and Bears Find No Effective Support.

New York, April 27.—The feature at the start of the stock market today was the wide opening in United States Steel, of which 18,000 shares were sold at 84⅝ and 84 compared with 82⅞ at the close yesterday. There was a buoyant upshoot of prices all through the list in sympathy. New York Central and Chesapeake & Ohio rose 1¾; Kansas & Texas 1⅜; American Smelting, International Harvester and American Steel Foundries 1¼ and Union Pacific, Central Leather, American Car, Interborough Metropolitan preferred and Brooklyn Rapid Transit 1.

The first prices were the highest for leading stocks, the market thereafter selling off steadily until many stocks receded to below yesterday's closing figures. Union Pacific, Amalgamated Copper and Interborough Metropolitan preferred sold a point under last night and Reading United States Steel and other leaders a fraction. American Snuff advanced 8 and Kanawha Michigan 13 points.

The market closed unsettled and weak. The bears found no effective support and offered prices down, dislodging stop loss orders. The tone became acutely weak with the general level of prices ranging 1 to 2 points lower than last night. St. Paul lost 3, Baltimore & Ohio 2⅝, and Northern Pacific 2¼. Short coverings caused only slight rallies.

New York stock quotations furnished The Herald by Piper, Johnson & Case.

MARRIED LIFE.

Chicago News: "No," said the unmarried man, as he leaned back in the leather rocker in his bachelor apartments and lighted a fresh cigar, "I do not visit much with the other men of my graduating class. You see, they are nearly all married, and I am not wildly infatuated with the idea of being their guest.

"I went once to spend the night with Sutton, both he and his wife being old friends of mine. Sutton and I went out in the street car to the suburb in which he lives.

"The street car was stone cold and I suffered intensely, but I said nothing. It was the dark of the moon, and we felt our way along the seven blocks from the end of the car line to Sutton's home. Sutton said he moved out there to get the fresh air, and—well, he gets the fresh air all right.

"After the greetings were over Sutton took me to the cozy parlor and said we would have a long, quiet talk. We were reviewing the football games of our last year at college when Sutton was called out by Mrs. Sutton to help with the dinner. She explained that the absent cook was a circumstance over which she had no control.

"Sutton came back after a while and we resumed the conversation, but he was again called out to set the table for dinner. The next time he had to go and see what was the matter with the chickens and a third trip had to be made to bring little Willie home from a neighbor's house. The dinner was all right—I'll say that much for Sutton's wife—but I could see that she had worked herself into something of a fever about it.

"When the dinner was over Sutton said he always helped with the dishes when the cook was away, and I joined in with a towel. Mrs. Sutton relieved me, however, after I had dropped one of her china teacups. Then we went back to the parlor, but Sutton remembered that something was wrong with a water pipe in the basement. I went down with him to help fix it, and we managed to put in a busy hour.

"Water squirted all over us while we were twisting the pipe with a wrench and there was a sufficiency of coal dust in the basement. It required considerable time in the bathroom to make us presentable again. Then it was discovered that Willie was missing, also his sled, and that he had not worn his stocking cap, according to orders.

"Sutton had to go out and look for him on all the coasting places in the vicinity. Willie was nine blocks away, frozen almost stiff, but having a good time. We had to thaw his ears by holding snow on them and his feet and hands by putting them into cold water.

"The furnace had to have attention two or three times during the evening, and Sutton showed me how to operate it. He said the knowledge would be useful to me when I got a home and a wife of my own, but I think now that I shall never have any use for that valuable information.

"By that time it was nearly midnight, and Sutton was getting busier and busier. I happened to think of an engagement I had early the next morning, and made an excuse to get away. The fact is that I couldn't see how Sutton was going to get any sleep that night and I knew that I couldn't sleep while he was tinkering around the house.

"When I got back to these rooms I thanked my lucky stars that I have not acquired a wife and a home in the suburbs.

"All I have to do her is to turn on the steam heat and kick to the janitor if there is not enough. I can smoke as much as I please and nobody objects. No cow, no chickens, no little Willie, no wife to bother about. This arrangement suits me, all right."

KELLIHER MAN TRIES TO MURDER HIS WIFE AND KILLS HIMSELF

John C. Gibson Fires Two Shots Into the Woman's Face.

Is Angered at Her Refusal to Live With Him Any Longer.

Deceased Is Said to Have Driven Earlier Spouse to Death By Cruelty.

Bemidji, Minn., April 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Made desperate by the refusal of his wife to live with him any longer, John C. Gibson of Kelliher last night shot Mrs. Gibson twice through the head and then blew out his own brains, dying instantly.

Mrs. Gibson, although seriously wounded, may recover. She married Gibson three years ago and has often complained that her husband was cruel. She began proceedings for a divorce six weeks ago and was to have appeared in court here ten days ago to give testimony in the suit, but she failed to do it and it was supposed she had dropped the case. It was reported that Gibson had made threats to kill himself and wife at the first opportunity and it is believed she became frightened and temporarily suspended the divorce proceedings.

Had Rented Home.

Mrs. Gibson had rented their home at Kelliher to A. Gilmore, who was to have taken possession today. She was in the house last evening at 7 o'clock, when Gibson entered, and after a few words drew a revolver and fired three shots at his wife, one entering her face and passing through her mouth, breaking her teeth, and the other

NEWPORT GIRL IS THE FIREBUG

Pretty Sixteen-Year-Old Admits Setting Three Fires in House.

Newport, R. I., April 28.—An abnormal twist in the psychological processes of Anna Foy, a pretty 16-year-old girl, is indicated by parts of a confession which she has made to the local police.

According to the police, she admits that she is the "fire bug" who, by setting three fires in as many days, terrorized the household of George W. Ritchie, in this city. The girl, who was employed as a maid in the Ritchie house, explained, so the police say, that she was subject to violent nervous attacks, during which she experienced an irresistable desire to set something afire.

In each case she applied the match in broad daylight and helped to fight the blaze after an alarm had been given.

GREAT FEAT BY PAULHAN

French Aviator Wins Aerial Derby Prize Offered By Englishman.

Flies Last Twenty-Four Miles in Twenty-Four Minutes.

Manchester, Eng., April 28.—The first aerial derby for a prize offered by an Englishman has been won by a Frenchman. Upon landing here Louis Paulhan was given a tremendous ovation and unstinted praise for his remarkable feat. At the same time his less experienced, but no less plucky competitor is being showered with congratulations over his splendid attempt and because he has shown himself a good loser. As soon as Graham White learned of Paulhan's success he called for three cheers for the victor.

Paulhan, winner of the $50,000 prize for the first flight from London to Manchester made within twenty-four hours and with not more than two stops, arrived here at 5:30 o'clock this morning, almost exactly twelve hours after he left London last evening. His last twenty-four miles were made in twenty-four minutes.

White in Hard Luck.

White, who got away from the Metropolis an hour later, again met misfortune and was obliged to descend at Polesworth, and abandoned the race after having covered a little more than half the distance. White, who is hardly more than a novice in the art of aviation, encountered treacherous wind currents, which thrice turned his machine around, and he also experi-

BALLINGER AND DENNETT MAY TESTIFY NEXT WEEK

Secretary of the Interior to Appear Before the Committee.

Glavis' Attorney Is Refused Original of Wickersham Letter.

Washington, April 28.—Secretary Ballinger and Land Commissioner Dennett probably will appear before the investigating committee this week or next. Attorney Vertrees said today he thought it probable that one or both would begin testimony this week.

The Ballinger-Pinchot committee today denied, by a vote of 6 to 3, a request of Attorney Brandeis for the original of all letters from the attorney general to the president bearing on the former's summary of the Glavis charges dated Sept. 11, 1909.

Attorney Brandeis wanted the letter "to prove his contention that the attorney general had been guilty of misrepresentation in antedating a summary of the Glavis charges prepared for the president and in evidence before the committee."

Smith on the Stand.

George Otis Smith, director of the geological survey, again occupied the stand as a witness for the "defense" when the committee resumed its sessions today. The committee will meet three times a week hereafter instead of semi-weekly, in order to reach an early conclusion of its task.

H. H. Schwartz, chief of the field service of the general land office, is expected to follow Mr. Smith on the stand. As Mr. Smith probably will be under cross-examination by Attorney Pepper, counsel for Gifford Pinchot, for several hours after he has concluded his direct testimony, it is not likely that Mr. Schwartz will be reached until late tomorrow or Saturday.

TOM TAGGART LOSES FIGHT FOR CONTROL OF PARTY IN INDIANA

Democrats Decide to Indorse Senatorial Nominee in Convention.

Heated Session Held in Indianapolis---Delegates in Fist Fight.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 28. — Governor Thomas R. Marshall won a victory over Thomas Taggart, former chairman of the Democratic national committee, in the state Democratic convention here today when that body voted to indorse a candidate for the United States senate. The vote was 888½ to 858½ and was reached after a heated session during which the police had to be called in to quiet the delegates and to clear the aisles, and disturbances which culminated in a personal assault by a Marion county delegate upon one of the members from Terre Haute.

United States Senator B. F. Shively was permanent chairman, Governor Marshall acting as temporary chairman of the meeting. The fight was over the indorsement of a senatorial candidate, which Mr. Taggart wanted left for action at a primary election, but which Governor Marshall declared should be done in the party convention. The governor's plan had the indorsement of William Jennings Bryan.

Governor Marshall called the convention to order and resigned the gavel to Charles L. Jewett of New Albany.

Fight Began Early.

The proposition whether the convention should indorse a candidate for the senate then was presented. Debate was limited to forty-five minutes on each side. James E. McCullough of the Sixth district declared that the

GEN. MILES IS HURT IN FALL

Suffered Two Fractured Ribs and Slight Wound on Scalp.

Washington, April 28.—Two fractured ribs, a slight scalp wound and bodily bruises comprise the sum of the injries to Lieut.-Gen. Nelson A. Miles, retired, who was thrown from his horse on Potomac drive late yesterday afternoon.

When picked up by one of the park policemen, Gen. Miles was unconscious, but shortly thereafter regained his senses and refused to be taken to the hospital, declaring he would go to his apartment. The doctors who attended him there said that there was no cause for alarm. On account of his age, 70 years—some of his friends here are apprehensive.

He was suffering considerable pain, but bore it bravely.

THOMAS SWOPE TELLS JURY THAT HE SAW DR. HYDE DROP THREE OF THE DEADLY CYANIDE CAPSULES

Hard Fight Is Made By Defense in Swope Murder Case.

Defendant Is Ordered Locked Up and His Bond Cancelled.

Judge Scores Methods of Lawyers in Trying to Help Clients.

Kansas City, Mo., April 28.—Thomas H. Swope, Jr., told in the criminal court today how he found capsules which Dr. Hyde had thrown away on a street, and recognized the odor they emitted as cyanide of potassium.

While working in a Nevada mine, said Mr. Swope, he became well acquainted with the poison and was positive he could not be mistaken about the peculiar odor of it. Cyanide, he said, smelled like burned almonds.

Dr. Hyde was about 300 feet from him when the capsules were thrown away, said Mr. Swope. The physician stamped them into the snow after dropping them, testified the witness. Insofar as Mr. Swope knew, Dr. Hyde did not know his actions were observed by anyone.

Cyanide in Capsules.

Accompanied by John G. Paxton, said Mr. Swope, he made a second visit to the point where he had seen Dr. Hyde and they found fragments of three capsules. All the parts of the capsules were sent to Chicago, and chemists announced they found traces of cyanide in them.

After smelling cyanide on the hand of Hugo Brecklein, a druggist, in the courtroom, Miss Le Van Nuys said it was the same drug she smelled on the hand of Mr. Swope, after he had handled the capsules he picked up on the street.

Mr. Swope was still on the witness stand when court adjourned for the noon recess.

At noon Judge Lathsaw ordered that at all times Dr. Hyde should be brought into and removed from the courtroom out of the presence of the jury in order that the jurymen might not know he is in the custody of the authorities.

The action of the court pleased Mrs. Hyde. She smiled when the order was given.

Spends Night in Jail.

Out from behind the bars of his narrow cell in the county jail, Dr. B. C. Hyde this morning looked upon a scene that was new and strange to him. All about him were common prisoners. In the same tier of cells with him were drunkards, thieves and robbers.

Dr. Hyde was in jail once before, on March 7. But he was only in the hospital ward then. His room was large, roomy and airy. There were four windows in it. He could walk about and exercise himself. No one was in the apartment to bother him. That time he did not mind his incarceration.

Today Dr. Hyde made no objection to his quarters. But when an attendant came to the physician's cell with a tin plate, covered with bread and a cup of coffee, the prisoner refused the food and turned away with a wan smile. One of Dr. Hyde's friends sent him a breakfast from a hotel.

Say He Slept Well.

Jail attaches said that the physi-

J. K. Elliott and George E. Sanborn Victims of Knife Thrusts.

Charles J. Dewey Is Arrested and Admits Using the Weapon.

Minneapolis, Minn., April 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—J. K. Elliott, president of J. K. Elliott & Co., grain commission men in Minneapolis, and George E. Sanborn, another officer of the firm, were stabbed late yesterday afternoon by Charles J. Dewey, a bookkeeper, who became frenzied at a reprimand administered by Sanborn.

The trouble occurred in the Elliott offices, 305 Flour exchange. The battle was fierce, and before Dewey was stopped Sanborn had been slashed three times in the left side, and Elliott received a slash in the left leg while attempting to stop the affair.

Both victims are at their homes, Sanborn residing at 2628 Second avenue south and Elliott, who is one of the oldest and most prominent grain dealers in the chamber of commerce, at 2934 Fourth avenue south.

Dewey is under arrest.

Accused of Making Error.

According to L. A. Cobb, a witness to the stabbing, the difficulty grew out of the discovery by Sanborn of an error in the books which he charged to Dewey. The latter resented the charge and following a word battle, Dewey is alleged to have struck Sanborn with a paper weight, rendering a deep gash in the forehead.

Then began the terrific knife fight.

At police headquarters Dewey admitted wielding the knife, but claims to have done so in self defense. He is held pending charges by either Sanborn or Elliott. The prisoner is married and lives at 2806 Fifteenth avenue south.

ONLY TWO DAYS MORE

For Taking the United States Census in Duluth.

HAVE YOU BEEN COUNTED?

NIGHT RAID MAY BE MADE

Some Proprietors of Rooming Houses Have Not Assisted Census Takers.

Guests May Be Routed Out of Bed to Give Information.

No postage will be charged on mail sent to the census office.

If you have not seen an enumerator and you think you have been missed, fill out the accompanying coupon, enclose it in an envelope, address it "Census Office, Official Business," drop it in a mail box and it will go through without a stamp attached.

If the enumerator has missed you and your entire family, call up the census office in the Commercial club.

There will not be another federal census for ten years and Duluth will be classified among the cities of the country on the count taken now. Assist the census officials in securing an accurate count.

If you know of somebody who is out of the city and should be counted as a resident of Duluth, tell the census office about it.

If you have a friend in the city and you know he has not been counted, tell the census office about it.

"Do It For Duluth."

If certain keepers of hotels, lodging houses and rooming houses do not show a more cordial spirit toward the census enumerators tomorrow and do not give or assist in securing the desired information for the census, a squad of enumerators, assisted by a squad of policemen, will call tomorrow night after everybody should be in bed, will rout the guests out of their beds and secure the necessary information. They have the law behind them and when they cannot secure the information they want by peaceful means, they will use the club of the law to get it.

Some of the keepers of hotels and rooming houses have not been doing the right thing by the census enumerators. The individual slips left to be distributed to roomers and guests have been pigeon holed in some cases and forgotten. In other cases, roomers and guests have scanned them and the landlord has let it go at that. The census officials have come to the turning point. They must have the information and if they cannot get it any other way, there will be a midnight raid.

If the proprietors of the different houses meet the enumerators with smiles tomorrow, all will go well. If they do what they can to get the information, all will be well. But if they do not do so, they will be subjecting their guests to considerable inconvenience for nobody likes to get up in the middle of the night to give census information. The landlords should stand by and see that the information is given. When they distribute the slips, they should see that they are filled out. In some of the lodging houses, the guests do not know what the slips are for and the proprietors do not take the trouble to explain. They should do so.

Everything is checking up now at the census office. The enumerators' books are being inspected, people who think they have not been enumerated are being looked up in the books, people coming back to the city are being searched out and questioned, enumerators are being put into the districts where the regular enumerator has too much to do and all is rush and bustle in the final windup.

Two night enumerators have been put on and two more will go on duty tonight. They will call at places where the people are not at home during the day and will get the information they want.

Everybody is working for an accurate count. The census means much to Duluth this year and the public spirited people of the city want it to be complete. Duluth has made strides during the past five years, but they will not be recorded unless the census is accurate and to that end, everybody is working.

One of Two Occupants of Runaway Rig Killed at La Moure, N. D.

La Moure, N. D., April 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—William Mitchell, a young Englishman, was killed here early this morning in a runaway. He and Bert Sweeney hired a livery rig last night to drive into the country. On their return about 2 o'clock this morning, the wagon pole broke and the horses ran away.

Sweeney jumped, but Mitchell remained in the rig for a while then attempted to get out. His foot caught between the springs and the axle of the buggy and his body was dragged two miles into town, being badly mutilated.

ONLY TWO DAYS MORE

For Taking the United States Census in Duluth.

HAVE YOU BEEN COUNTED?

NIGHT RAID MAY BE MADE

Some Proprietors of Rooming Houses Have Not Assisted Census Takers.

Guests May Be Routed Out of Bed to Give Information.

No postage will be charged on mail sent to the census office.

If you have not seen an enumerator and you think you have been missed, fill out the accompanying coupon, enclose it in an envelope, address it "Census Office, Official Business," drop it in a mail box and it will go through without a stamp attached.

If the enumerator has missed you and your entire family, call up the census office in the Commercial club.

There will not be another federal census for ten years and Duluth will be classified among the cities of the country on the count taken now. Assist the census officials in securing an accurate count.

If you know of somebody who is out of the city and should be counted as a resident of Duluth, tell the census office about it.

If you have a friend in the city and you know he has not been counted, tell the census office about it.

"Do It For Duluth."

If certain keepers of hotels, lodging houses and rooming houses do not show a more cordial spirit toward the census enumerators tomorrow and do not give or assist in securing the desired information for the census, a squad of enumerators, assisted by a squad of policemen, will call tomorrow night after everybody should be in bed, will rout the guests out of their beds and secure the necessary information. They have the law behind them and when they cannot secure the information they want by peaceful means, they will use the club of the law to get it.

Some of the keepers of hotels and rooming houses have not been doing the right thing by the census enumerators. The individual slips left to be distributed to roomers and guests have been pigeon holed in some cases and forgotten. In other cases, roomers and guests have scored them and the landlord has let it go at that. The census officials have come to the turning point. They must have the information and if they cannot get it any other way, there will be a midnight raid.

If the proprietors of the different houses meet the enumerators with smiles tomorrow, all will go well. If they do what they can to get the information, all will be well. But if they do not do so, they will be subjecting their guests to considerable inconvenience, for nobody likes to get up in the middle of the night to give census information. The landlords should stand by and see that the information is given. When they distribute the slips, they should see that they are filled out. In some of the lodging houses, the guests do not know what the slips are for and the proprietors do not take the trouble to explain. They should do so.

Everything is checking up now at the census office. The enumerators' books are being inspected, people who think they have not been enumerated are being looked up in the books, people coming back to the city are being searched out and questioned, enumerators are being put into the districts where the regular enumerator has too much to do and all is rush and bustle in the final months.

Two night enumerators have been put on and two more will go on duty tonight. They will call at places where the people are not at home during the day and will get the information they want.

Everybody is working for an accurate count. The census means much to Duluth this year and the public spirited people of the city want it to be complete. Duluth has made strides during the past five years but they will not be recorded unless the census is accurate and to that end everybody is working.

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

STATE PRESENTING ITS CASE AGAINST BOOKER

Doctors Disagree as to Cause of Marks on the Body.

Chief of Police Relates Story Told By Booker When Arrested.

Mrs. Charles Clark, wife of the man who met death his death on the French river road and mother of George Booker, accused by the grand jury of the crime, was in court this morning with her son's wife, Mrs. Booker.

They all seem to believe in Booker's innocense and there seemed to be the best of good feeling between the two women as they in turn carressed Booker's small son, who sat between them on a bench in the district court room where the trial is going on before Judge Dibell.

Mrs. Clark was dressed in black and carried handkerchiefs bordered with black. The two women drank in every word of the testimony offered this morning by those on the stand. The witnesses examined this morning were: Doctors Braden and J. W. Ekblad, Detective Terry and Chief of Police Troyer.

The doctors disagreed slightly in their testimony as to the marks on the body of Charles Clark. Dr. Ekblad thought they could not have been made by the wheel of a wagon and Dr. Braden thought as they were in a direct line, they could. Dr. Ekblad thought the marks on the body indicated blows and Dr. Braden said that they could have been either blows or the result of an accident.

Both doctors agreed as to the number of marks on the body and face. Dr. Braden in discussing the discolorations on the chest said that they might have been caused from one accident, as they were in a straight line. He said that they might have been made by a heavy object passing over the body. This would leave the visible marks small, but would break the bones underneath the skin as was the result in this case. Both men testified as to the cut on the face, the marks on the body, the burns, and the injuries to the legs.

Detective's Story.

Detective Terry told of making the journey to the scene of the disaster and of how the place looked. He said that there had been two fires built, told of the marks and the down-trodden snow, the burned ax, machinery and other objects that were in disorder about the place.

Chief Troyer related Booker's story told in the city police station on the day he was arrested.

The chief said that Booker began by telling the object of the trip to the French river camp, which was to haul supplies for a man named Johnson, who had hired him for the sum of $8 to make the trip. He said that he was accompanied on the trip by his stepfather, Charles Clark. Booker said nothing at this time of the injury to Mr. Clark. That, he told at a later time, according to the chief. One of the officers asked him if Clark had been injured during the last ten days, and Booker is said to have replied, "no." One of the station men asked him if he would know of it if Clark had been injured, and he answered "yes," it is alleged. Booker at the time he told the story in the station, said that he first accident that happened was when they stopped to load the supplies from the wagon into a sleigh. A fire was built and Clark fell over the fire. Booker said he had quite a time getting the older man off the fire and when he did Clark said that he felt all right, although he had some burns. He asked Booker to get him some water and Booker went to the wagon to get a pail. In trying to find the pail in the dark, for it was then about 9 o'clock, according to Booker's story, he found it necessary to light a match. The match set fire to the hay which was spread in the bottom of the wagon, and soon the wagon was ablaze. The horses took fright and ran away at the same time. Booker started after the horses, finally brought them to a stop, and succeeded in drowning the fire with snow. It was at this point that he spoke about the ax. At first he said it was burned when Clark fell over the fire. Later he said that it burned in the wagon. Booker said that after he had things straightened around, Clark said that he was feeling pretty badly and asked that he be taken to the city. Booker then started back to town with him. Clark was put on the hay in the wagon and every once in a while he (Booker) would turn and ask Clark how he felt. Each time there was an answer. The last time the two men spoke according to Booker's story, was on London road, near Twenty-sixth avenue east. The next time he spoke to Clark was near Nineteenth avenue east. There was no answer and he discovered that the man was dead. He tried to arouse the people in the house, but could make no one hear him and so continued his trip downtown.

Court adjourned at this point. Chief Troyer will continue his testimony this afternoon.

In court this morning were the clothes worn by the dead man. They consisted of a heavy fur coat that was much the worse for wear and hard service, a half burned woollen mitten, the rubber shoes, a red mackinaw, stockings and other wearing apparel. The burned ax was also put in evidence by the state.

MINNY LEAGUE NOTES

In swiping bodily the baseball notes of the Duluth Evening Herald, without changing them in the least, the Eau Claire Daily Leader would show a courtesy, common among newspapers, should it give the Duluth paper credit for the stuff.

The sporting editor of the Eau Claire paper might take this tip strongly to heart.

Practice is in full swing down at Eau Claire. The work of the candidates, who have reported, has been of best. Kading, who played first last season, is on hand and is playing in the practice workouts the same fast article of baseball he played during last season.

Little Kick has been under the weather for the past few days. Patterson, a candidate for taird base, is showing up well. Third base was the corner of the diamond that Eau Claire was weak on last season. Caldwell played well in spots and fell down at other stages of the game. Schoonhoven hopes he has a steady and reliable player in the new man, Moore, the Kansas City man, is expected on hand in a few days. He is also a candidate for the third sack.

Big Thrall, hailing from South Dakota and weighing 195 pounds, in the practice games has shown a familiarity with the leather that is refreshing to the Superior fans. The big recruit has been hitting the ball on the nose in the Eau Claire workouts.

Holstcom, with Superior part of last season, has not reported as yet, owing to the illness of his wife. Newell, candidate for catcher, and Walhaum, outfielder, have not reported as yet.

Catcher Kelly one of the latest of the Superior recruits, has been hitting the ball during what little opportunity he has to work with the squad. It is very probable that the player will be carried with the team. McCulloch is playing steadily at first for O'Dea. There was a belief that O'Dea would play the bag for Superior. So far on the trip the tall McCullo' has been stationed there. Though Arthur is rather inclined to embonpoint—honestly—he is there with that old willow and his hitting should still be fast enough for the Minny pitchers.

Dolly Gray is playing the outfield for the Superior team and is playing good baseball. In its present lineup the Superior team does not look as formidable as it did at the beginning of the training trip.

The Eau Claire team will make its first official appearance of the season next Saturday and Sunday, when the Schoonhovenites will lineup against an amateur team of Eau Claire.

S. A. Johnson, a pitcher who has been playing with the soldiers at Bismarck, N. D., has been signed by Winona. The player has been highly recommended to Killian. He has been touted as even more of a wonder than the usual early spring "phenom." If the Johnson party is half as good as they have told Killian he is, he will have little difficulty in making the Winona team.

McShane, the pitcher secured from Milwaukee by Eau Claire, has arrived. The new hurler will be given a chance to work in the games of Saturday and Sunday.

At Wausau the fans are showing more spirit than the cits of that town have shown for years. With the prospects of a fast team, a much faster team than the town had last season, and with the realization that the league will be faster than it was last season, the baseball community is pricking up its ears.

Bond is endeavoring to gather a fast squad. He realizes that Wausau must have good baseball the present season. Last year the team was beaten before it went on to the field. The present season conditions promise to be very different with the consequent result that the fans are showing increased interest in the team.

GOLF MATCH DECIDED UPON

R. T. Goodell Arranges for Playing of Calverley Cup Series.

R. T. Goodell has returned from Houghton, where he arranged for the playing of the series of matches between the Northland Golf club of this city and the Portage Lake Golf club of Houghton for the W. D. Calverley cup, offered for a series of games between the two clubs.

As a result of the visit of Mr. Goodell to Houghton, arrangements have been made for the holding of the first contest in Houghton, some time late in June. The conditions call for two 18-hole matches, one in Houghton and one in Duluth. The second match of the season will be played here later.

The conditions governing the permanent ownership of the trophy call for the series continuing for three years, the club winning four matches to secure possession of the cup.

At the present time the cup is in possession of Houghton. At the present time Mr. Goodell is a member of the Portage Lake club, having not relinquished his membership as yet.

CHOOSE COURSE FOR ROAD RACE

Dwight Heistand of the Central high school and Instructor Wegener of the Y. M. C. A. have decided upon the course of the two-mile run between the athletes of the high school and the association.

The race will be held Saturday afternoon, the start being made at 4 o'clock at Third avenue west and Fourth street. The course will extend to Fifth avenue west, up Mesaba avenue and along Fifth street to Sixth avenue east, down Sixth avenue east to Third street and back to the starting point.

The race will be the third event of the kind held between the two institutions. Because of the spring training of the high school athletes, they are looked upon as the probable winners. Stevens and Brown of the high school are in excellent condition, and the latter, because of his excellent showing in the recent indoor field meet, is looked upon as a likely winner.

Rush, a former University of Minnesota man, Bailey and Mapp are the three strongest candidates of the association.

Chicago, Ill., April 28.—John Kling, veteran catcher of the Chicago National League club, yesterday mailed a check for $700 to the National commission in payment of the fine assessed against him.

Robert Mitchell, a pitcher now with the University of Mississippi club, was signed by the Chicago Nationals yesterday to report in June at the end of the school year.

MANY TOWNS GOING "DRY"

W. G. Calderwood Speaks on Effect of Indian Treaty Enforcement.

Secretary of State Committee Meets Officers of Prohibition Clubs.

On his way back to Minneapolis after visiting Northwestern and Northeastern Minnesota, including Warroad and International Falls, W. G. Calderwood, secretary of the state Prohibition committee, stopped in Duluth yesterday. Last evening he met informally the officers of the city Prohibition clubs and gave them a very interesting account of the beginning and development of the enforcement of the provisions of the Indian treaties relating to the sale of intoxicating liquor, which provisions had for so long a time lapsed into disuse.

Special Indian Agent W. E. Johnson has under the treaty of 1855 closed 120 saloons and many towns have been made "dry." Mr. Johnson's sole task and purpose is the stopping of the traffic with Indians and the cutting off of the supply to the white men is only incidental to the specific purpose of the department of the interior to stand by the plain meaning of the treaty of 1863 to close saloons in territory covered by it within thirty days. Duluth not having any Indian trade need have no immediate fear of going dry, although the shipping of goods from the wholesalers here to places where traffic is prohibited by the government is a serious matter.

Mr. Calderwood said that conditions were never so favorable for a large increase in the legislative vote as now and especially so in Northern Minnesota where the sentiment is rapidly crystallizing into political organization and action. He says that the state committee has been from the start thoroughly in sympathy with the policy of the government in enforcing the treaty only so far as the traffic with the Indians and communities that wish the saloons out is concerned.

"TOM SAWYER" WELL THUMBED

Mark Twain's Books Much in Demand Since Humorist's Death.

Although the many copies of Mark Twain's books that are to be found in the library are among the well thumbed volumes and among those that have to be most often replaced, the demand has increased during the last week since the passing away of the great humorist and philosopher. There are four copies of "Tom Sawyer" at the library. Every copy was out this morning. The Duluth public library owns seven copies of "Huckleberry Finn" and the public was using every one today. There are five copies of "The Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court" and today there were five copies in use as were the four copies of "Tom Sawyer Abroad."

Only his less known books as "The Gilded Age," were to be found on the shelves. The librarians say that the demand for "Tom" and "Huckleberry" since the writer's death has been far more than the limited number of copies at the library will supply.

LOGS AND TRACK LOST IN FLAMES

Forest Fire Sweeps Over Part of District North of Akeley.

Akeley, Minn., April 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—A report has just reached this city that 2,000,000 feet of logs and 1,000 feet of logging track belonging to the Red River Lumber company were destroyed by a fierce forest fire in the logging district north of this city.

Several hundred men have been fighting the fire all night. It is said to have been started by men who were burning slashings and tree tops in accordance with the state laws. The accumulation was bone-dry and the flames, fanned by a stiff gale, which suddenly blew up, soon were out of control of the men.

Dan Gagan, a logger, made the report of the loss of logs and track. The men still are fighting the fire.

TO OBSERVE ARBOR DAY

Tomorrow is Arbor day. No civic observance of the day will be held, but simple exercises will be held in the various schools. Many individuals throughout the city will mark their good citizenship and the day officially named for trees and birds by planting a shrub or tree on their own premises.

The official naming of the day in Minnesota was done some weeks ago by Governor Eberhart.

FRICTION BRINGS ON MENTAL DYSPEPSIA.

Discussing "The Spiritual and Psychological Effect of Popular Fiction" in an address delivered last evening in Knights of Pythias hall, Rev. Bruce V. Black said the rapid production of books today benefits the publisher rather than the public, and "is responsible for the mental dyspepsia that exists," and entails "intellectual gourmandizing—a mad rush to masticate one book after another."

"It would be well to Fletcherize even in our reading," he said.

Rheumatism.

More than nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles, due to cold or damp, or chronic rheumatism. In such cases no internal treatment is required. The free application of Chamberlain's Liniment is all that is needed, and it is certain to give quick relief. Give it a trial and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain and soreness. The medicine usually given internally for rheumatism are poisonous or very strong medicines. They are worst than useless in cases of chronic and muscular rheumatism. For sale by all druggists.

NIGHT SCHOOL CLASSES GROWING.

The new night school which is held every Monday and Thursday in the Central high school is meeting with considerable favor. More than ninety students are enrolled and new members join the class at every meeting. Miss Palmer of the state normal school is in charge, and is assisted by several normal school students and teachers.

The curriculum is based on the "three R's," with geography thrown in for good measure. A few students are studying more intricate subjects, such as civil government and the ethics of municipal government.

Many of the students are past middle age and one is 75 years old. Because of lack of funds only two meetings each week can be held. The school has met with such instantaneous success that it is propable that plans will be considered soon to hold additional sessions.

ASSESSORS IN THE CITY

County Auditor Halden Giving Them Instructions Regarding Revaluation.

The Seventy-Five Men Must Cover County By July 11.

About seventy-five assessors, who work through the entire county of St. Louis, are at the courthouse today meeting with County Auditor Halden and getting their books, blanks, supplies and instructions as to their work on which they begin May 1.

These men are from all parts of the county. The farming districts are gone over thoroughly every two years and 1910 is the year for the new valuation.

A room on the first floor of the courthouse that has not been in use up to this time, has been fitted up with iron boxes for the supplies of each assessor and they were all ready and wrapped up when the assessors began to come in this morning for them. This afternoon Auditor Halden is explaining to them their duties, the use of the several blanks, the books, and their other equipment.

The men who will work in the farming and smaller town districts have until the second Monday in July to finish their task. At this time all the work must be in.

There will be a complete revaluation of all property in the county this year. This work, which is done once in two years, will probably show a very large increase. Much of the land has been taken up by settlers since the valuation of two years ago. The improvements have been many since the last valuation, and the property of the range towns has increased rapidly in value.

The city assessor and his assistants begin their work on May 1 also. Mr. Rakowsky wishes to make the valuation of 1910 more nearly complete than ever before. There has been much building in Duluth during the last two years and the increase in the valuation of city property promises to be very large.

NINE "DRUNKS" TOLD TO GO TO WORK.

Everybody in the police court grist evinced an itching desire to go to work when arraigned in police court this morning. Judge Windom thought that was better than sending them to the county jail where the city would have to pay for their board and gave them suspended sentences, liberating nine men who had toyed with the flowing bowl a bit too freely last night.

PRINCE AT THE CAPITAL

Tsai Tao Is Being Entertained By Officials of the Government.

Uncle of Chinese Emperor Is Guest of President at Dinner.

Wasaington, April 28.—His imperial highness, Prince Tsai-Tao, brother of the prince-regent of China, chief of staff of the Chinese army, and uncle of the Chinese emporer, who is making a tour of the world on a mission of vital importance to the future of the Chinese empire, arrived in Washington today.

A troop of cavalry escorted the prince to his hotel. Chandler Hale, assistant secretary of state, representing the state department, and Capt. Archibald W. Butt, the president's aid, representing President Taft, took the prince in charge the moment he arrived.

During his stay in Washington, which will extend until Sunday night, functions in honor of the prince and his party will be numerous and elaborate. Ten officers of the new Chinese army accompany the prince. They are making a study of military methods in Europe and America. One of the first entertainments will be a special cavalry drill at Fort Myer.

Dinner Guest at White House.

Immediately after being presented to the president, the prince and his party will be whizzed over the Virginia hills in automobiles to cavalry post. On returning the prince will be the guest of the president at dinner at the White House.

Secretary Knox will give a luncheon tomorrow and in the afternoon the president's yacht Mayflower will take the visitors down the Potomac to Mount Vernon. Saturday morning the party will visit the navy yard and in the afternoon Prince Tsai will see the congressional library and the capitol.

Saturday the Chinese minister will give a dinner for the prince and Sunday morning the imperial party will leave for New York. They sail for England on May 5.

GREAT FEAT BY PAULHAN.

enced trouble with his motor. But for the Englishman's ill luck and lack of experience there would have been a close finish.

This is the story of the great aerial race, told chronologically:

Paulhan left London at 5:20 o'clock last evening, and reached Manchester at 3:30 o'clock this morning. He descended at Lichfield at 8:10 o'clock last night, and resumed the trip at 4:09 a. m.

White started from London at 6:30 last night, and alighted at Northampton at 8 p. m.; he again started at 2:50 o'clock this morning, but was compelled to descend at Polesworth after he had covered a little more than half of the 186 miles from London to Manchester.

Paulhan did the 186 miles in 4 hours and 11 minutes, actual flying time in the air, unofficial.

Benumbed With Cold.

Paulhan was benumbed with the cold and thoroughly exhausted when he reached here. A great crowd awaited him and gave him a sportsmanlike welcome.

Manchester first saw the French aviator a few minutes after 5 o'clock, coming steadily as a steamer on a smooth sea and heading directly for the field which he had chosen as a landing place. Flying at a height of 400 feet Paulhan came over a clump of trees, and then bringing his biplane around with a beautiful curve, landed exactly in the center of the field. He seemed dazed and benumbed and swayed as he walked down the field. All he could say was:

"I am very cold but very happy."

From his friends and the crowd the aviator received a hearty welcome, but he was too tired to reply to the ovations, quietly he went to a hotel and retired.

Paulhan did the last twenty-four miles in 24 minutes, outdistancing the special train bearing his wife, Henry Farman and other friends, which had accompanied him.

White Calls for Cheers.

When at Polesworth, White was told of the Frenchman's success. He mounted the seat of an automobile and said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, the $50,000 prize has been won by Louis Paulhan, the flying aviator that the world has ever seen. Compared with him I am only a novice. Three cheers for Paulhan!"

The crowd gathered about the generous Englishman and gave the cheers heartily, following them with a round of cheers for White.

TOM TAGGART LOSES FIGHT FOR CONTROL OF PARTY IN INDIANA

convention should follow the counsel of Governor Marshall and William J. Bryan and indorse a candidate.

Samuel Ralston of Lebanon followed for the opposition. He said that to indorse a candidate for the senate would be usurpation of the legislative powers of the legislature.

When John E. Lamb of Terre Haute arose to close the debate in favor of the plan, the Fifth district delegation rose to its feet, and, joined by many other delegates, gave him three cheers. A roar of laughter went up when a strong-voiced delegate shouted. "Give 'em hell, Johnny."

Police Had to Clear the Aisles.

There was great confusion in the convention, and the police were required to clear the aisles, which were filled with excited delegates. Thomas Taggart mingled with his delegates from Indianapolis and Marion county, and urged them to keep quiet.

Lamb finally was permitted to continue his speech, but there were frequent outbursts of hisses and yells of protest.

"This is a battle for the people," shouted Lamb, above the tumult. "If that is usurpation, I am a usurper."

Lamb concluded his speech with the declaration, "This convention will stand for the rights of the people and nominate a candidate for the senate, either myself or some better man."

Balloting on the proposition, by counties, then began.

A riot was threatened when a delegate from Marion county assaulted a delegate from Terre Haute. Police separated the combatants.

Platform Is Adopted.

The following platform was adopted by the convention:

"We, the representatives of the Democratic party of the state of Indiana, in convention assembled, hereby adopt the following platform:

"Democracy is a conservation of property. It defies alike both paternalism and communism. Its theory is that that government is best which governs least. It is the friend of both labor and capital. It adds to the rewards of human endeavor by giving equal opportunities to all and special privileges to none. Democracy fixes no limits to honest accumulation of capital, but denies that wealth and cunning, leagued together, may lawfully concentrate into a few hands the fruits of the productive energy of the world.

"We denounce the Payne-Aldrich tariff act as a masterpiece of injustice, involving remorseless exactions from the many to enrich the few, through the trusts and monopolies which it fosters.

Taxation by Tariff.

"Tariff taxation, like other taxation, should be for public purposes only, and not for private profit; and should be so levied as not to discriminate against any section, class, industry or occupation, and limited to the actual necessities of the government, economically administered.

"We condemn the cowardice of the Republican party in Indiana in failing to meet the issues in a fair and manly way; that, in its endeavor to gain Democratic votes, it has on the tariff question one proposition in state platform and different and opposing propositions in congressional platforms; that by indorsement it commends President Taft, who approved the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, and in resolutions commends Senator Beveridge, who voted against the same measure for his course in opposing such tariff law.

"President Taft his indorsed Cannon and Aldrich. We submit to the people whether relief may be expected from a party standing for Taft, Cannon, Aldrich and Beveridge all at the same time.

"We favor the immediate enactment of a pension law by congress, providing for a pension of not less than $1 a day for all Union veterans of the Civil war.

Favors Income Tax.

"We most heartily favor the ratification of the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States, authorizing congress to levy an income tax.

"We are opposed to all subsidies by the government and we especially condemn the present ship subsidy bill.

"We are opposed to the indiscriminate use of the power of injunction by the courts without notice to the defendants and without a hearing, and we demand the right of trial by jury in proceedings arising out of indirect contempt of injunctions.

"We condemn the extravagant administration of the affairs of the nation by the Republican party.

"We favor the conservation of our natural resources and demand the withdrawal from entry of our remaining timber, coal and iron lands and water power sites.

"We favor the improvement of interior waterways and urge appropriations for such purposes.

On State Issues.

"We are in favor of the strengthening of the laws of our state with reference to child labor and the sanitary condition of workshops.

"We recognize the right of the people of the state to settle the question as to whether intoxicating liquor shall be sold in their respective communities, and to that end we favor the amendment and modification of the present local option law so drawn as to preserve the remonstranee laws of the state.

"We favor an amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people."

The platform—heartily commends United States Senator B. F. Shiveley and the Indiana Democrats in congress and the administration of the affairs of the state by Governor Marshall.

Marshall as Prophet.

Governor Marshall as temporary chairman of the convention, made the prophesy that Senator Beveridge, Republican, will be lined up with the Democratic party in Indiana two years hence, and gave his reasons for advocating the indorsement by the convention of a candidate for the United States senate.

The speaker urged the wiping out of special privileges.

"We have exploited this republic until exploiting will soon become explosion," he declared. "We must get business out of politics, and must take politics out of business. This must be done quietly, soberly, discreetly at the ballot box, or there will come an hour when the tolling millions of America, not willing to wait for an election, will accomplish by force and that which should be accomplished by law."

Governor Marshall said that many of Senator Beveridge's public utterances of the past disclosed the fact that until very recently he was thoroughly infatuated with the idea that a protective tariff was the only thing of inestimable benefit to the American people.

Would Welcome Beveridge.

"I had hoped," he said, "that this distinguished statesman, discovering that the principle for which all his life he had stood, meant begetting and nurturing of the powers of pillage, would at once desert those powers and join the people whose rights in Indiana are represented by the Democratic party. Had he seen clearly, how gladly we would have welcomed him.

"Regretfully, I am compelled to say that the senior senator only sees the truth like 'trees walking.' He has been so long in the darkness that his eyes are not yet accustomed to the light. I prophesy that he will be lined up with the Democratic party in Indiana two years hence.

"We are beginning to find out that we are living in a land where men do other men. The golden rule has been superceded by the rule of gold; the commandment, 'Thou shalt not steal,' by 'Thou shalt not be convicted.' Success has usurped the throne of conscience, and failure is our only crime. Conscience has become the vermiform appendix of high finance.

"Fraud and Robbery."

"The whole system of protection is, as was wisely declared by the Democratic platform of 1892, 'a fraud and robbery of the great majority of the American people for the benefit of the few.'

"The hour has come in Indiana to begin to right these wrongs. Here and now, we not only pledge our Democratic representatives in congress and our United States senators to stand fast by the ancient ideals of the Democratic party.

"The Democratic party of Indiana demands the wiping from the statute books of every law which enables one man to prey upon the labor or the savings of another.

"It demands the preservation of every vested right in America, and it likewise demands the extermination of every vested wrong.

"It calls upon all men for public and private economy.

"It demands that public affairs shall be honestly and economically administered.

"It begs the individual citizen to be part of the common good, and to stand for men, not systems; for right, not riches. It declares that cunning is not wisdom, that cupidity is not character.

"Forgetting those things which are behind it, it presses forward toward the era of the equality of all men before the law, and to the accomplishment of these ends, this convention pledges its life, its fortune and its sacred honor."

Usurpation by Executives.

Governor Marshall said that usurpations by executives have led to usurpations by other departments of government. To demonstrate this, the speaker made a few observations in order "that the people may demand that those who next serve them as legislators and judges shall be careful to keep themselves exclusively within the rights conferred upon them by the people's constitution.

"The Democratic party believes that it is the duty of officials to enforce the law—that it is likewise the duty of officials to obey the law."

Purification of the ballot, strengthening of the primary law so as to provide that the candidate of the party shall be as nearly as possible the majority party's choice, and a registration law which will stand the test of the supreme court, were advocated.

How Sherman Law Works.

Continuing, the governor said:

"The anti-trust law now upon the state books might well be supplanted by so much blank paper. It has been discovered that the Sherman anti-trust law will regulate, restrain and break up trusts. The death of a supreme judge and the appointment to his place of Judge Lurton have afforded opportunity to delay for a year decisions in anti-trust cases now pending. This fact has strengthened the stock of these trusts on the market. Within that year, the legislature of Indiana can enact a law which will prevent combinations and trusts, the forestalling of the market and the compulsion of the people to pay more for the necessities of life than they otherwise would pay in an open market with free competition.

"Limitation and publicity of campaign expenditures should be insisted upon, and the citizen that contributes or uses, directly or indirectly, money or other things of value for the purpose of influencing a vote, should be made amenable to punishment.

Need of Economy.

"In the midst of a period of marvelous beneficence on the part of the creator, we find all classes except the pampered few, particularly the wage earner and the man upon a salary, complaining of the enormous cost of living. This is partly the fault of government and partly the fault of the way in which we live. We need to return not only to old-fashioned honesty, but to old-fashioned economy, and one good place in this period of unexampled extravagance to begin is in the expenditures of the state."

Speaking of the indorsement of a candidate for the United States senate, Governor Marshall said:

"It is up to this convention to do one of the two things: Either to indorse a candidate for United States senator, or to strike from its platform its twenty-year old declaration that it believes in the election of the United States senators by the people. It is, in my judgment, not only the nearest approach which can be devised to the fulfillment of Democratic principle, but it is also sound party policy.

"This is not a personal proposition with me. I advocate this proposition merely as Democratic doctrine, and I trust it will be thoroughly discussed in a spirit of amity and concord by the delegates, and that then each delegate will vote his own judgment."

ROOSEVELTS IN BRUSSELS

ex-Premier Clemenceau, Leon Bourgeois, M. Ribot, M. and Mme Delcasse, Baron d'Estournelles De Constant, Jules Cambon, the French ambassador at Berlin, M. Jusserand, French ambassador to the United States and Mme. Jusserand and the most distinguished personages in French official, political and social circles.

The ministry was brilliantly illuminated, the gardens being hung with fairy lamps, and the copse in the rear of the palace lighted with Bengal fires. During the dinner, at which toasts were omitted, the orchestra played American and French airs.

In the smoking room, Col. Roosevelt received many of the guests whom he had not met before, chatting pleasantly with several of them and having long conversations with M. Clemenceau, M. Ribot and M. Bourgeois.

Fenced for His Safety.

It is reported that the French authorities have been alarmed for Col. Roosevelt's safety. According to an evening newspaper, the police were advised from Naples that American anarchists were following him, and a most rigorous surveillance was instituted here. The ex-president was accompanied everywhere by two inspectors of the anarchist brigade in plain clothes. The American embassy has been guarded day and night by six inspectors, in reliefs of six hours, aided by police officers. Several suspects have been shadowed constantly. There is no official confirmation, however, of this report.

Try Aeroplane Riding.

Miss Ethel and Kermit Roosevelt each enjoyed the novel experience of an aeroplane flight yesterday afternoon. Accompanied by Baroness d'Estournelles de Constant they visited Count de Lambert who, after a preliminary flight, invited them for a sail through the air. Both accepted joyfully and each in turn climbed into the seat beside the count, who took them for a spin around the field at a height of about 100 feet. Kermit remarked that it was the finest experience of his life.

THOMAS SWOPE TELLS JURY

clan slept well last night. He turned out his light with the rest of the inmates of the jail at 8:30 o'clock and retired to his cot.

Dr. Hyde's 100,000 bond was ordered revoked and the defendant remanded to the custody of the sheriff late yesterday afternoon by Judge Lathsaw, who said:

"In view of the testimony thus far given in this trial, the court is constrained to say that it amounts to a presumption of guilt that under the law deprives the defendant of the right to go on bond."

Mrs. Hyde, wife of the doctor-defendant, nearly collapsed.

Jurors Not Told of Arrest.

The revocation of Dr. Hyde's bond by Judge Latshaw at the close of court Wednesday night was a severe disappointment to Mrs. Hyde. She slept little last night and was at the jail early today waiting to see her husband. She was not permitted to enter the jail but Dr. Hyde was allowed ta see her in the courtroom an hour before court opened.

None of the jurors, it is believed, knows Dr. Hyde has been placed in jail. He was sitting beside his wife when court opened today, appearing the same as he has each day since the trial started.

Attorney Walsh requested that Hugo Brecklein, the druggist, be recalled to the witness stand.

"Isn't cyanide of potassium used internally in quantities of one grain for cases of acute rheumatism, for cleaning silverware, for dropping into the eye?" asked Mr. Walsh.

"It is," replied Mr. Brecklein.

"Isn't it used for removing nitrate of silver?"

"The medical book says it is, but I never sold any for that use."

Mr. Walsh attempted to show that cyanide was put to many more common uses.

Sold Little Cyanide.

Mr. Brecklein said he had sold the poison so few times he could only refer the attorney to what the books said.

Prosecutor Conkling asked Mr. Brecklein to put some wet cyanide on his hands.

Attorney Walsh protested against the witness' making such an exhibition. He said it was for the purpose of extending the evidence of Miss Lou E. Van Nuys, a nurse, who testified yesterday that she smelled cyanide on the hands of Col. Swope on Dec. 18, after he had handled some capsules dropped by Dr. Hyde.

Mr. Walsh also said it was unfair to permit any of the testimony regarding cyanide to go before the jury when the indictment against Dr. Hyde for the alleged murder of Mr. Swope only charged that Dr. Hyde administered strychnine and "other poisons" to him, not specifying cyanide.

Attorneys Brewster and Lucas also spoke, Mr. Lucas saying he desired to speak at a later time against the court permitting any testimony relating to cyanide going into the case.

Judge Lathshaw said he was ready to hear it then, and Mr. Lucas spoke at some length, setting forth about the same argument as that made by Mr. Walsh.

"Custom of Attorneys."

Judge Lathshaw listened attentively, and when Mr. Lucas finished said gravely:

"It has long been the custom of attorneys for a defendant to go to extremes to save their client. At times their acts have almost approached the criminal. But I have nothing of a personal nature to say to the lawyers in this case.

"The court is not going to try this case on its sleeve. It is not going to think, in case of conviction, of the suffering and shame of others besides the defendant. Neither is it going to forget the two green graves that enter into the case. It cannot forget the pale and sad faces of the relatives of the dead. The court will try this case on the law and that alone.

"By some means the attorneys for the defense came into possession of the grand jury notes. These attorneys knew what testimony was given before the grand jury and what evidence would be presented here. There is no need for surprise on account of the testimony shown.

"The grand jury indictment charged that strychnine and other poisons were found. I will therefore overrule the objection to this testimony being admitted."

Odor of Cyanide.

Mr. Walsh held a whispered conversation with Attorney John M. Cleary, and then, speaking rapidly, addressed the court:

"Mr. Cleary hears that Thomas H. Swope, Jr., is in the prosecutor's office with cyanide sprinkled on his body and is ready to come into court with this odor on his clothes."

"If such is the case, have every odor of cyanide removed before he is called as a witness," ordered the court.

Miss Van Nuys was summoned and she smelled the poison on Mr. Brecklein's hands. She said it was the same odor that emanated from the hands of Mr. Swope. Prosecutor Conkling asked that the jury be permitted to smell Mr. Brecklein's hands. The ecourt refused to grant the request.

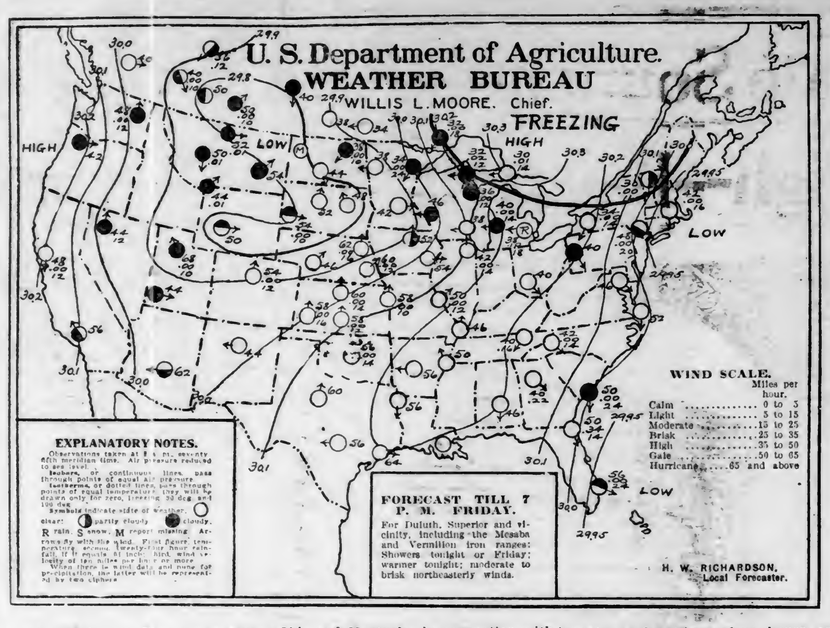
Thomas H. Swope, Jr., was called as the next witness. Telling of his finding the capsules, Mr. Swope said:

"On Dec. 18, while walking down Pleasant street in Independence, I saw Dr. Hyde approaching me. About a block from me he crossed the street. Just after he stepped off the sidewalk he dropped something and stepped on it. A second time he repeated the action.

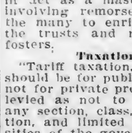
Picked up What Hyde Dropped.

"When he passed on I went to the point where the articles had been dropped and found a broken capsule in the snow. I put it in my pocket."

"Going home I showed the capsule to Miss Van Nuys and my mother. I noticed a peculiar smell about my hands. It was like burned almonds. Miss Van Nuys smelled them when I called her attention to it.



"Three or four weeks later I recalled I had smelled the odor before—it was that of cyanide of potassium."



Familiar With Cyanide.

Mr. Swope, who worked in a mine in Tonapah, Nev., in 1907, and lost his right arm there, testified that he used cyanide in testing gold and was familiar with its odor.

Accompanied by John G. Paxton, an executor of the Swope estate, Mr. Swope said, he returned to the place where the capsules were dropped and there found fragments from three capsules. The fragments were scraped up and placed in an envelope, he testified.

Mr. Paxton took the capsules to Calcago and scientists reported there was cyanide in them.

The temperature didn't get above 40 deg. yesterday and a brisk wind from the northwest caused Duluth to shiver nearly all day yesterday and last night. The wind is still blowing this morning and the air is not at all balmy. The weather man promises warmer temperatures tonight with showers tonight or tomorrow.

Fair weather prevailed a year ago today, but there was a cold wind.

The sun rose this morning at 4:57 and it will set at 7:14, giving fourteen hours and seventeen minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"The Northwestern low pressure area now overspreads Southern Alberta, Montana, the Dakotas and Wyoming. The principal result thus far has been the development of rain over Montana, Nevada and Northern Alberta, together with an increase in warmth throughout the Middle West and Southwest. The Lake Superior-Kansas high pressure has moved its center to Eastern Ontario. The freezing temperature area covers all of Eastern Canada this morning. Further light rains fell over Michigan, Ohio and Kentucky in connection with the eastern disturbance now central off the Atlantic seaboard. The Pacific coast high pressure remained about stationary.

The easterly movement of the Dakota-Montana depression will be attended by showers and easterly winds at the Head of the Lakes during the ensuing thirty-six hours."

Soft Velvety Complexions of Southern Women

The beautiful, soft, velvety complexions of the Southern women are not due to paints and cosmetics, says Marion Harlow, in her "Hints to Beauty Seekers."

These women use plenty of good pure soap and water, and after bathing they massage the face, arms and neck with a lotion made by dissolving two ounces of amarol in a pint of hot water, to which has been added two teaspoonfuls of glycerine.

Paint, Powders and Cosmetics clog up the pores and are injurious, while this amarol solution keeps the pores open and in a healthy condition, allowing the fresh air to enter the body through the pores; from a healthy standpoint, not to say anything about the improvement it will make in your complexion, I would advise every woman to try this simple lotion. Simply get two ounces of amarol (in the original two-ounce package) from your druggist, put two teaspoonfuls of glycerine into a pint of hot water, and add the amarol. Shake well, let stand for a few hours, and then it is ready for use.

PRINCE AT THE CAPITAL

Tsai Tao Is Being Entertained By Officials of the Government.

Uncle of Chinese Emperor Is Guest of President at Dinner.

Washington, April 28.—His imperial highness Prince Tsai-Tao, brother of the prince-regent of China, chief of staff of the Chinese army, and uncle of the Chinese emperor, who is making a tour of the world on a mission of vital importance to the future of the Chinese empire, arrived in Washington today.

A troop of cavalry escorted the prince to his hotel. Chandler Hale, assistant secretary of state, representing the state department, and Capt. Archibald W. Butt, the president's aid, representing President Taft, took the prince in charge the moment he arrived.

During his stay in Washington, which will extend until Sunday night, Prince Tsai and the members of the prince and his party will be [illegible] and elaborate. "This is a battle for the people," shouted Lamb, above the tumult. "I [illegible] usurpation. I am a usurper."

Lamb concluded his speech with the declaration, "This convention will stand for the rights of the people and nominate a candidate for the senate either myself or some better man."

Balloting on the proposition, by counties, then began.

A riot was [illegible] when a delegate from Marion county assaulted a delegate from Terre Haute. Police separated the combatants.

Platform Is Adopted.

[illegible] the platform was adopted [illegible]

"We, the representatives of the Democratic party of the state of Indiana, [illegible] hereby adopt [illegible] platform:

"[illegible] conservation of [illegible] paternalism [illegible] its theory is that [illegible] which governs [illegible] of both labor [illegible] to the rewards of [illegible] giving equal opportunity [illegible] special privileges [illegible] but it [illegible] wealth and cunning [illegible] few hands the fruits [illegible] of the world.

"We [illegible] the Payne-Aldrich tariff [illegible] as a masterpiece of injustice, [illegible] exactions from [illegible] to enrich a few, through [illegible] and monopolies which it [illegible].

Taxation by Tariff.

"Tariff taxation, like other taxation, should be for public purposes only, and not for private profit, and should be so levied as not to discriminate against any section, class, industry or occupation, and limited to the actual necessities of the government, economically administered.

"We condemn the cowardice of the Republican party in Indiana in failing to meet the issues in a fair and manly way, that in its endeavor to gain Democratic votes, it has on the tariff question one proposition in state platform and different and opposing propositions in congressional platforms; that by indorsement it commends President Taft, who approved the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, and in resolutions commends Senator Beveridge, who voted against the same measure for his course in opposing such tariff law.

"President Taft has indorsed Cannon and Aldrich. We submit to the people what relief may be expected from a party standing for Taft, Cannon, Aldrich and Beveridge all at the same time.

"We favor the immediate enactment of a pension law by congress providing for a pension of not less than $1 a day to all Union veterans of the Civil War.

Favors Income Tax.

"We most heartily favor the ratification of the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States, authorizing congress to levy an income tax.

"We are opposed to all subsidies by government and we especially condemn the present ship subsidy bill.

"We are opposed to the indiscriminate use of the power of injunction by the courts without notice to the defendants and without a hearing, and we demand the right of trial by jury in proceedings arising out of indirect contempt of injunctions.

"We condemn the extravagant administration of the affairs of the nation by the Republican party.

"We favor the conservation of our natural resources and demand the withdrawal from entry of our remaining timber, coal and iron lands and water power sites.

"We favor the improvement of interior waterways and urge appropriations for such purposes.

On State Issues.

"We are in favor of the strengthening of the laws of our state with reference to child labor and the sanitary condition of workshops.

"We recognize the right of the people of the state to settle the question as to whether intoxicating liquor shall be sold in their respective communities, and to that end we favor the amendment and modification of the present local option law so drawn as to preserve the remonstrance laws of the state.

"We favor an amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people."

The platform heartily commends United States Senator B. F. Shively and the Indiana Democrats in congress and the administration of the affairs of the state by Governor Marshall.

Marshall as Prophet.

Governor Marshall as temporary chairman of the convention, made the prophecy that Senator Beveridge, Republican, will be lined up with the Democratic party in Indiana two years hence, and gave his reasons for advocating the indorsement by the convention of a candidate for the United States senate.

The speaker urged the wiping out of special privileges.

"We have exploited this republic until exploitation will soon become explosion," he declared. "We must get business out of politics and must take politics out of business. This must be done quietly, soberly, discreetly at the ballot box, or there will come an hour when the toiling millions of America, not willing to wait for an election, will accomplish by force that which should be accomplished by law."

Governor Marshall said that many of Senator Beveridge's public utterances of the past disclosed the fact that until very recently he was thoroughly infatuated with the idea that a protective tariff was the only thing of inestimable benefit to the American people.

Would Welcome Beveridge.

"I had hoped," he said, "that this distinguished statesman, discovering that the principle for which all his life he had stood, meant the begetting and nurturing of the powers of pillage, would at once desert those powers and join the people whose rights in Indiana are represented by the Democratic party. Had he seen clearly, how gladly we would have welcomed him.

"Regretfully, I am compelled to say that the senior senator only sees the truth like 'trees walking.' He has been so long in the darkness that his eyes are not yet accustomed to the light. I prophesy that he will be lined up with the Democratic party in Indiana two years hence.

"We are beginning to find out that we are living in a land where men do other men. The golden rule has been superceded by the rule of gold; the commandment, 'Thou shalt not steal,' by 'Thou shalt not be convicted.' Success has usurped the throne of conscience, and failure is our only crime. Conscience has become the vermiform appendix of high finance.

"Fraud and Robbery."

"The whole system of protection is, as was wisely declared by the Democratic platform of 1892, 'a fraud and robbery of the great majority of the American people for the benefit of the few.'

"The hour has come in Indiana to begin to right these wrongs. Here and now, we not only pledge our Democratic representatives in congress and our United States senators to stand fast by the ancient ideals of the Democratic party. * * *

"The Democratic party of Indiana demands the wiping from the statute books of every law which enables one man to prey upon the labor or the savings of another.

"It demands the preservation of every vested right in America, and it likewise demands the extermination of every vested wrong.

"It calls upon all men for public and private economy.

"It demands that public affairs shall be honestly and economically administered.

"It begs the individual citizen to be part of the common good, and to stand for men, not systems, for right, not riches. It declares that cunning is not wisdom, that cupidity is not character.

"Forgetting those things which are behind it, it presses forward toward the era of the equality of all men before the law, and to the accomplishment of these ends, this convention pledges its life, its fortune and its sacred honor."

Usurpation by Executives.

Governor Marshall said that usurpations by executives have led to usurpations by other departments of government. To demonstrate this, the speaker gave a few observations in order "that the people may demand that those who next serve them as legislators and judges shall be careful to keep themselves exclusively within the rights vouchsafed to them by the people's constitution.

"The Democratic party believes that it is the duty of officials to enforce the law—that it is likewise the duty of officials to obey the law."

Purification of the ballot, strengthening of the primary law so as to provide that the candidate of the party shall be as nearly as possible the majority candidate, and a registration law which will stand the test of the supreme court were advocated.

How Sherman Law Works.

Continuing, the governor said:

"The anti-trust law now upon the state books might well be supplanted by so much blank paper. It has been discovered that the Sherman anti-trust law will regulate, restrain and break up trusts. The death of a supreme judge and the appointment to his place of Judge Lurton have afforded opportunity to delay for a year decisions in anti-trust cases now pending. This fact has strengthened the stock of these trusts on the market. Within that year the legislature of Indiana can enact a few which will prevent combinations and trusts, the forestalling of the market and the compulsion of the people to pay more for the necessities of life than they otherwise would pay in an open market with free competition.

"Limitation and publicity of campaign expenditures should be insisted upon, and the citizen that contributes or gives, directly or indirectly, money or other things of value for the purpose of influencing a vote, should be made amenable to punishment.

Need of Economy.

"In the midst of a period of marvelous beneficence on the part of the creator, we find all classes except the pampered few, particularly the wage earner and the man upon a salary, complaining of the enormous cost of living. This is partly the fault of government and partly the fault of the way in which we live. We need to return not only to old-fashioned honesty, but to old-fashioned economy, and one good place in this period of unexampled extravagance to begin is in the expenditures of the state."

Speaking of the indorsement of a candidate for the United States senate, Governor Marshall said:

"It is up to this convention to do one of the two things: Either to indorse a candidate for United States senator, or to strike from its platform its twenty-year old declaration that it believes in the election of the United States senators by the people. It is, in my judgment, not only the nearest approach which can be devised to the fulfillment of Democratic principle, but it is also sound party policy.

"This is not a personal proposition with me. I advocate this proposition merely as Democratic doctrine, and I trust it will be thoroughly discussed in a spirit of amity and concord by the delegates, and that then each delegate will vote his own judgment."

The temperature didn't get above 40 deg. yesterday and a brisk wind from the northwest caused Duluth to shiver nearly all day yesterday and last night. The wind is still blowing this morning and the air is not at all balmy. The weather man promises warmer temperatures tonight with showers tonight or tomorrow.

Fair weather prevailed a year ago today but there was a cold wind.

The sun rose this morning at 4:57 and it will set at 7:14, giving fourteen hours and seventeen minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"The Northwestern low pressure area now overspreads Southern Alberta, Montana, the Dakotas and Wyoming. The principal result thus far has been the development of rain over Montana, Nevada and Northern Alberta, together with an increase in warmth throughout the Middle West and Southwest. The Lake Superior-Kansas high pressure has moved its center to Eastern Ontario. The freezing temperature area covers all of Eastern Canada this morning. Further light rains fell over Michigan, Ohio and Kentucky in connection with the eastern disturbance now central off the Atlantic seaboard. The Pacific coast high pressure remained about stationary.

The easterly movement of the Dakota-Montana depression will be attended by showers and easterly winds at the Head of the Lakes during the ensuing thirty-six hours."

ex-Premier Clemenceau, Leon Bourgeois, M. Ribot, M. and Mme Delcasse, Baron d'Estournelles De Constant, Jules Cambon, the French ambassador at Berlin, M. Jusserand, French ambassador to the United States and Mme. Jusserand and the most distinguished personages in French official, political and social circles.

The ministry was brilliantly illuminated, the gardens being hung with fairy lamps, and the copse in the rear of the palace lighted with Bengal fires. During the dinner, at which toasts were omitted, the orchestra played American and French airs.

In the smoking room, Col. Roosevelt received many of the guests whom he had not met before, chatting pleasantly with several of them and having long conversations with M. Clemenceau, M. Ribot and M. Bourgeois.

Feared for His Safety.

It is reported that the French authorities have been alarmed for Col. Roosevelt's safety. According to an evening newspaper, the police were advised from Naples that American anarchists were following him, and a most rigorous surveillance was instituted here. The ex-president was accompanied everywhere by two inspectors of the anarchist brigade in plain clothes. The American embassy has been guarded day and night by six inspectors, in reliefs of six hours, aided by police officers. Several suspects have been shadowed constantly. There is no official confirmation, however, of this report.

Try Aeroplane Riding.

Miss Ethel and Kermit Roosevelt each enjoyed the novel experience of an aeroplane flight yesterday afternoon. Accompanied by Baroness d'Estournelles de Constant, they visited Count de Lambert, who, after a preliminary flight, invited them for a sail through the air. Both accepted joyfully and each in turn climbed into the seat beside the count, who took them for a spin around the field at a height of about 100 feet. Kermit remarked that it was the finest experience of his life.

cian slept well last night. He turned out his light with the rest of the inmates of the jail at 8:30 o'clock and retired to his cot.

Dr. Hyde's $100,000 bond was ordered revoked and the defendant remanded to the custody of the sheriff late yesterday afternoon by Judge Latshaw, who said:

"In view of the testimony thus far given in this trial, the court is constrained to say that it amounts to a presumption of guilt that under the law deprives the defendant of the right to go on bond."

Mrs. Hyde, wife of the doctor-defendant, nearly collapsed.

Jurors Not Told of Arrest.

The revocation of Dr. Hyde's bond by Judge Latshaw at the close of court Wednesday night was a severe disappointment to Mrs. Hyde. She slept little last night and was at the jail early today waiting to see her husband. She was not permitted to enter the jail but Dr. Hyde was allowed to see her in the courtroom an hour before court opened.

None of the jurors, it is believed, knows Dr. Hyde has been placed in jail. He was sitting beside his wife when court opened today, appearing the same as he has each day since the trial started.

Attorney Walsh requested that Hugo Brecklein, the druggist, be recalled to the witness stand.

"Isn't cyanide of potassium used internally in quantities of one grain for cases of acute rheumatism, for cleaning silverware, for dropping into the eye?" asked Mr. Walsh.

"It is," replied Mr. Brecklein.

"Isn't it used for removing nitrate of silver?"

"The medical book says it is, but I never sold any for that use."

Mr. Walsh attempted to show that cyanide was put to many more common uses.

Sold Little Cyanide.

Mr. Brecklein said he had sold the poison so few times he could only refer the attorney to what the books said.

Prosecutor Conkling asked Mr. Brecklein to put some wet cyanide on his hands.

Attorney Walsh protested against the witness' making such an exhibition. He said it was for the purpose of extending the evidence of Miss Lou E. Van Nuys, a nurse, who testified yesterday that she smelled cyanide on the hands of Col. Swope on Dec. 18, after he had handled some capsules dropped by Dr. Hyde.

Mr. Walsh also said it was unfair to permit any of the testimony regarding cyanide to go before the jury when the indictment against Dr. Hyde for the alleged murder of Mr. Swope only charged that Dr. Hyde administered strychnine and "other poisons" to him, not specifying cyanide.

Attorneys Brewster and Lucas also spoke, Mr. Lucas saying he desired to speak at a later time against the court permitting any testimony relating to cyanide going into the case.

Judge Lathshaw said he was ready to hear it then, and Mr. Lucas spoke at some length, setting forth about the same argument as that made by Mr. Walsh.

"Custom of Attorneys."

Judge Lathshaw listened attentively, and when Mr. Lucas finished said gravely:

"It has long been the custom of attorneys for a defendant to go to extremes to save their client. At times their acts have almost approached the criminal. But I have nothing of a personal nature to say to the lawyers in this case.

"The court is not going to try this case on its sleeve. It is not going to think, in case of conviction, of the suffering and shame of others besides the defendant. Neither is it going to forget the two green graves that enter into the case. It cannot forget the pale and sad faces of the relatives of the dead. The court will try this case on the law and that alone.

"By some means the attorneys for the defense came into possession of the grand jury notes. These attorneys knew what testimony was given before the grand jury and what evidence would be presented here. There is no need for surprise on account of the testimony shown.

"The grand jury indictment charged that strychnine and other poisons were found. I will therefore overrule the objection to this testimony being admitted."

Odor of Cyanide.

Mr. Walsh held a whispered conversation with Attorney John M. Cleary, and then, speaking rapidly, addressed the court:

"Mr. Cleary hears that Thomas H. Swope, Jr., is in the prosecutor's office with cyanide sprinkled on his body and is ready to come into court with this odor on his clothes."

"If such is the case, have every odor of cyanide removed before he is called as a witness!" ordered the court.

Miss Van Nuys was summoned and she smelled the poison on Mr. Brecklein's hands. She said it was the same odor that emanated from the hands of Mr. Swope. Prosecutor Conkling asked that the jury be permitted to smell Mr. Brecklein's hands. The court refused to grant the request.

Thomas H. Swope, Jr., was called as the next witness. Telling of his finding the capsules, Mr. Swope said:

"On Dec. 18, while walking down Pleasant street in Independence, I saw Dr. Hyde approaching me. About a block from me he crossed the street. Just after he stepped off the sidewalk he dropped something and stepped on it. A second time he repeated the action.

Picked up What Hyde Dropped.

"When he passed on I went to the point where the articles had been dropped and found a broken capsule in the snow. I put it in my pocket."

"Going home I showed the capsule to Miss Van Nuys and my mother. I noticed a peculiar smell about my hands. It was like burned almonds. Miss Van Nuys smelled them when I called her attention to it.

"Three or four weeks later I recalled I had smelled the odor before—it was that of cyanide of potassium."

Familiar With Cyanide.

Mr. Swope, who worked in a mine in Tonapah, Nev., in 1907, and lost his right arm there, testified that he used cyanide in testing gold and was familiar with its odor.

Accompanied by John G. Paxton, an executor of the Swope estate, Mr. Swope said, he returned to the place where the capsules were dropped and there found fragments from three capsules. The fragments were scraped up and placed in an envelope, he testified.

Mr. Paxton took the capsules to Chicago and scientists reported there was cyanide in them.

Soft Velvety Complexions of Southern Women

The beautiful, soft, velvety complexions of the Southern women are not due to paints and cosmetics, says Marion Harlow, in her "Hints to Beauty Seekers."

These women use plenty of good pure soap and water, and after bathing they massage the face, arms and neck with a lotion made by dissolving two ounces of amarol in a pint of hot water, to which has been added two teaspoonfuls of glycerine.

Paint, Powders and Cosmetics clog up the pores and are injurious, while this amarol solution keeps the pores open and in a healthy condition, allowing the fresh air to enter the body through the pores; from a healthy standpoint, not to say anything about the improvement it will make in your complexion, I would advise every woman to try this simple lotion. Simply get two ounces of amarol (in the original two-ounce package) from your druggist, put two teaspoonfuls of glycerine into a pint of hot water, and add the amarol. Shake well, let stand for a few hours, and then it is ready for use.

GET LONGER VACATIONS

Duluth Firemen Will Have Fourteen Days Instead of Ten.

Their "Offs" Not Increased---That Fire Fighting Automobile.

The men of the fire department will get the benefit of the $2,000 appropriated by the council the first of the year for the purpose of giving them one day off in ever seven. But not in the manner indicated by the council, as the sum is insufficient for that purpose.

Enough additional men cannot be hired for $2,000 to enable the board of fire commissioners to grant one day off each week.

But instead, the men will each be given four days more vacation than in the past. Where they have been getting ten days off with pay each year they will be given fourteen days. The fire fighters are satisfied with the arrangement as far as can be learned.

The council did not take any action last Monday night upon the request of the fire board that the city purchase an automobile for Chief Joseph Randall largely because the members did not understand the facts. The aldermen thought that the request was inconsistent with the declaration that the funds were too low to allow of one day off in every seven. They presumed that the intention was to use the $2,000 for the machine instead of applying it to giving the men more time off during the year.

No communication was sent in explaining the situation and having no information upon the subject, the request was left in the hands of the committee. Since the facts have come to light the council committee on fire department, consisting of Aldermen Hogan, Moore and Curren, will take up the matter and it is thought, will bring in a favorable report.

The automobile desired for the use of the chief is built especially for fire departments. It is equipped with chemical extinguishers, which would mean the saving of thousands of dollars as small blazes could be squelched before they gained much headway, because of the greatly reduced time in which the chief and his assistants would be able to reach the scene. The horses cannot begin to equal the speed of a powerful machine, such as is suggested, and before a fire fighter gets on the ground the flames often assume alarming dimensions.

False alarms are also frequently turned in from long distances. The heavy engines and other wagons now have to run two or three miles, wearing the horses, which are laboring under a severe strain, as well as the apparatus. With the machine the chief would be able to get to the scene in a few minutes and if the alarm were false or the blaze already put out, turn them back before they had gone more than a short distance.

The machine would be as different in appearance from the ordinary automobiles as the usual apparatus contrasts with other vehicles in the city. Equipped with a heavy electric gong that would sound blocks ahead, there would be no more trouble in securing the right-of-way than at present. Teams and pedestrians would clear the roadway as they do now, giving the chief a clear runway in which to make time.

The aldermen are not opposed to the purchase of such an automobile and there is little doubt that if there is any way in which to secure the funds they will furnish the department with the necessary automobile. It would add greatly to the efficiency of the department, particularly in Duluth, which is built on the hillside and scattered over a vast amount of territory.

The Sound Sleep of Good Health.

The restorative power of sound sleep can not be over estimated and any ailment that prevents it is a menace to health. J. L. Southers, Eau Claire, Wis., says:—"For a long time I have been unable to sleep soundly nights, because of pains across my back and soreness of my kidneys. My appetite was very poor and my general condition was much run down. I have been taking Foley's Kidney Pills but a short time and now sleep as sound as a rock. I eat and enjoy my meals, and my general condition is greatly improved. I can honestly recommend Foley's Kidney Pills as I know they have cured me." For sale by all druggists.

DETENTION HOME TALK IS RENEWED

Col. Resche Wants Place in Which to Keep Delinquent Children.

The talk of a detention home for children has been revived again and Col. F. E. Resche, probation officer, says it will not down until some provision is made for the little ones entrusted to the care of himself and Mrs. D. S. Forgy, the assistant probation officer.

While children are awaiting arraignment in juvenile court and between the time they are sentenced to the industrial school at Red Wing and the time the probation officer takes them to that institution, there is no place in which they may be kept. A woman in the city, through kindness, has cared for the children when requested to do so by Col. Resche, but she is about to leave the city and there will be no place in which to keep the children after the first of May.

"The county commissioners have been approached on this subject so often that it is time some action were taken," said Col. Resche. "Mrs. Forgy and I have at times taken children to our own homes for lack of any public place in which to keep them. We do not want to put children in a cell, which is a harsh measure that should not be employed in efforts to reform impressionable little ones, and yet the county provides no place in which to keep them.

"There is plenty of room in the new courthouse, in which the children could be kept for a day or two. After they have been sentenced to the institution at Red Wing, I am supposed to keep them in my charge. Yet, the county provides no place and personal surveillance is the only means I have of keeping them in my charge. In a county this size, it is a shame that some place is not provided for caring for the delinquent children during the period they are in charge of the probation officer."

The Hurst medals, given by W. E. Hurst to the J. A. Scott rink.

The Burns cup, presented by W. H. Burns of the Burns Lumber company, to the A. G. Macauley rink.

The Buckley cigars, given by N. J. Buckley to the Zauft and Wade rinks, who were in finals at close of season.

Marking the close of the most successful season in the history of the club, members of the Western Curling association, 200 strong, sat down to the sixth annual banquet of the organization last evening at Wade's hall, Central avenue and Ramsey street.

The dinner was followed by an after-dinner program, at which Frank H. Wade acted in the capacity of toastmaster. The feast was served by the ladies of the West Duluth branch of the W. C. T. U. The proceeds of the dinner will go to a fund for a Y. M. C. A. branch building at West Duluth.

J. Allyn Scott, Sr., president of the club, in his address of welcome, greeted the curlers and their friends on the occasion of the sixth annual reunion. The organization at West Duluth, he said, had passed the experimental stage and was now an assured success.

A telegram was read from S. H. Jones, president of the Duluth Curling club, who was expected to speak at the banquet, but who was suddenly called out of the city. The message was sent from Chicago and expressed the regret of Mr. Jones in not being able to attend.

Angus G. Macauley, the skip who won more trophies than the rest in the season just closed, was unable to attend the banquet on account of being called out of the city because of the serious illness of a relative. Mr. Macauley's rink won the Esterly, Union Match company and Burns trophies.

President Scott stated that the past year had been the most successful one in the history of the club, both in respect to membership and financial condition of the organization. A big addition had been built to the rink, he said, and many other improvements had been made. In introducing the toastmaster, F. H. Wade, Mr. Scott took occasion to say that much of the progress of the club during the season past was due to the untiring efforts of Mr. Wade.

After a brief speech, Toastmaster Wade called upon Harry Hurdon, who responded to the toast "The Northwestern Curling Association." Mr. Hurdon is now president of the association. He gave a history of the organization of the association and its growth during the past seventeen years.

H. W. Hargreaves supplied the place on the program which was to have been filled by S. H. Jones, president of the Duluth Curling club. Mr. Hargreaves brought greetings from the Duluth club and spoke highly of the enthusiasm that seems to be displayed in the affairs of the West Duluth organization.

Dr. R. C. Ogilvie, president of the Superior club, responded to a toast on "Our Sister Club." He told of the successes and failures of the curlers across the bay. He would take home one pointer, he said, and that was to let the women attend the banquets of the curlers in the future. Without the women and children, said Mr. Ogilvie, any curling association will be a failure.

Plea for Clean Sport.

The talk which featured the program was given by Rev. Arthur J. Hoag, who made a plea that clean sports be recognized as institutions Americans cannot afford to be without. The curling club of West Duluth, he asserted, offered a real contribution to life in the western end of the city.

Rev. Mr. Hoag stated that he did not think it was going against his "good Baptist conscience" to take an active part in any clean sport such as curling, baseball, football and games of this sort. "It is natural to play," he said, "just as natural as it is to eat or sleep."

He stated that when he severed his connection with the club to take up his new charge in St. Paul, he would miss the curlers and the enjoyment of a clean, healthy and invigorating sport that makes for good fellowship and which is a psychological element in the development of the community.

The toastmaster then called upon the donors of the various trophies to present the cups or badges to the winning rinks. Short speeches were given by the donors and responses were made by the skips or other members of the winning aggregations. A chance was afforded here for some of the curlers to spring a joke on some other unsuspecting member, who generally "got back" before the evening was over.

The subject of "Good Losers" was discussed from several standpoints by Emil J. Zaufft, Victor Meldahl and Walter Evered. The latter stated that he was afraid to say very much for fear that he might lose his voice.

P. H. Martin responded to a toast on "The Ladies." Melvin Olson was also called upon for a few sentiments along this line. Ed Holland, Andrew Meldahl and Charles Ellis each gave short talks on "The Kid Rinks."

Rev. E. R. Collier, chaplain of the club, pronounced the invocation and during the program, John Matheson sang a number of Scotch songs. L. Carey also rendered a solo. Following the program there was dancing until midnight in an adjoining hall to the banquet room. Flaaten's orchestra played during the program and for the dance that followed.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE

Agriculturists Will Gather in West Duluth Next Saturday.

It is expected that the farmer's institute, which will be held under the auspices of the state agricultural department Saturday afternoon and evening at the West Duluth Commercial club rooms, Central avenue, will attract many from the rural districts back of the hills at West Duluth.

"Profitable Farming," will be the main theme under discussion and many subjects of interest to the agriculturists will be discussed by competent speakers.

Forest Henry of Dover, Minn., will be the speaker at the afternoon session. Mr. Henry is a practical farmer and speaks from actual experience. He will give the farmers a few pointers on soil conditions in Northern Minnesota and as to what kind of crops can be raised the most successfully. Mr. Henry operates a large farm near Dover.

During the evening session, C. E. Brown, who runs a large farm near Elk River, Minn., will discuss potato growing, truck gardening and other kindred topics. It is also understood that there will be other good speakers at the institute. The afternoon session will begin at 1 o'clock. In the evening, the meeting will be held at 8 o'clock.

Circulars have been sent out by the West Duluth Commercial club to farmers living near Midway, Hermantown, Adolph, Solway and other districts in the vicinity of the city. Invitations to attend the meeting have also been sent out to those in the city who are interested in the "back yard garden" proposition. No admission will be charged.

A. B. Hostetter of the Duluth Commercial club was instrumental in securing the institute at West Duluth. The West Duluth Commercial club at a recent meeting donated the use of its hall over the Western State bank. A committe was appointed from the club to look after the welfare of the visiting farmers on Saturday.

It is probable that an attempt will be made to, at this time, to find out the real sentiment of the farmers in regard to the market proposition. The proposed market at West Duluth will likely be taken up and the farmers will be asked to support it. Addresses will probably be made along this line by a number of men prominently identified with the Producers' Co-operative Market association.

FAREWELL TO REV. A. J. HOAG

Congregation Will Tender Reception to Popular West Duluth Pastor.

The annual meeting of the West Duluth Baptist congregation will be held this evening at the church, Fifty-ninth avenue west and Grand, at which time officers will be elected for the coming year and the resignation of the pastor, Rev. Arthur J. Hoag will be acted upon.

Rev. Mr. Hoag will preach his farewell sermon to the congregation next Sunday. Tomorrow evening a reception and banquet will be tendered him by the members of the congregation and friends. The affair will be held in the church parlors.

Among those who will be present and will give short talks are: Rev. J. S. Kirtley, pastor of the First Baptist church; Rev. J. W. Loughridge, pastor of the Central Baptist church; Rev. G. H. Young of Superior; Rev. W. G. Boyle, pastor of the Asbury M. E. church; and Rev. E. F. Stidd, pastor of the Merritt Memorial M. E. church.

In point of years of service, Rev. Mr. Hoag is the oldest pastor at West Duluth. He came to West Duluth to take his first charge on Oct. 10, 1899. He was fresh from Shirtleff college and was ordained by the congregation in the following January.

Early next week Mr. Hoag will leave for St. Paul where he will take up his new work as associate pastor of the First Baptist church of that city. At his farewell reception tomorrow evening there will also be a program of recitations and music.

CASES WILL NOT COME TO TRIAL.

The case against John Biotti and Nicholas Pauline, accused of stealing the entire furnishings from a house belonging to Dominick Cartisano, 115 South Fifty-seventh avenue west, will not come to trial.

The men were up in municipal court yesterday and their cases were adjourned. This morning, Cartisano decided to withdraw the charges. It is understood that the goods will be returned to Cartisano.

STARTED TO TAKE NAP; FALLS DEAD.

Just as Martin Johnson, 54 years old, was about to take an afternoon nap yesterday, he toppled over on his bedside, and when the people with whom he was making his home rushed to his side, they found him dead. Death was due to a sudden attack of heart failure.

Johnson has no relatives in this country. He lived with Charles Johnson at 21 South Sixty-seventh avenue west, and had been subject to heart trouble for the past three years. He was a laborer, but had not felt well enough to work for the past few weeks.

The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Olson & Crawford undertaking rooms, 2010 West Superior street.

NORRIS REPORTS ON PAPER TRADE

Publishers Hears Review of Situation Regarding Imports From Canada.

New York, April 28.—The session of the American Newspaper Publishers' association here today centered largely in the report of the committee on paper, submitted by John Norris, chairman of the committee.

A considerable portion of the report was devoted to a review of the pulpwood situation and the tariff complications with Canada involved in it. Hope was expressed that coming conferences arranged by President Taft and the Canadian authorities would result in an adjustment of the trade relations between the two countries and permit of a full and free supply of pulpwood, which will relieve the paper crisis attributed to the tariff tangle and aggravated by the existing paper mill strikes.

The publishers tonight will conclude their annual meeting here by joining the Associated Press in a banquet for members of both organizations at the Waldorf-Astoria.

PREXY QUITS UNDER FIRE.

Finances of George Washington University Undergo Probe.

Washington, April 28.—Charles W. Needham, president of George Washington university, has resigned.

An investigation of the financial affairs of the university is said to have been responsible for the action of its president. The committee on agriculture of the house of representatives has been conducting an inquiry on the question of extending the Morrill fund to the university. An effort is being made to ascertain what disposition was made of the Corcoran endowment fund, which originally amounted to $200,000. This fund, according to the deed of the gift, was to be kept intact, but now not more than $16,000 of the principal remains. This $16,000 is represented by the residence of Dr. Needham in this city, which is mortgaged to the university for that amount.

PA CLORE'S CORN PRIZES.

Near Whiteland in Johnson county, Ind. lives a farmer. His farm consists of 130 acres, and he gets up at 5 o'clock every morning, and has holes in his overalls.

His name is Leonard B. Clore, and according to a writer in Hampton's Magazine he is nothing less than the corn king of the world. A dozen years ago Mr. Clore began to specialize in corn. Today he sets the world's pace in this cereal.

The Clore family very nearly keeps house with father's corn prizes. In the list is everything from a manure spreader to a piano, including watch, clock, stove, mandolin, lawn swing, an automobile, a quarter section of land in Texas and a $1,000 cash prize. One of the incidentals is a silver loving cup valued at $1,000.

Mr. Clore decided a few years ago that instead of spending so much time in improving their land the corn growers should give more thought to improving their breed of corn. All his efforts have been in that direction. In a specially built barn he germinates the corn in boxes of earth kept at the right temperature in early spring by gasolene stoves.

Thus he knows before planting what percentage of the grains will germinate. Two ears of corn may look alike, but the vitality of one may be much higher than that of the other. Mr. Clore is also a judge of what it takes to make a perfect ear. Selecting the best ears each fall and planting the hardiest grains in the spring, he has in a great way eliminated chance in corn growing.

TOOK TURNS AS THE SERPENT.

Friut Grower: Mrs. Rogers had the barrel of russet apples placed in the attic because they were not quite ripe enough to eat and she warned her three boys, whose ages range from 5 to 11 years, not to touch them.

Then, one rainy day, when she sought the attic to get something from a trunk, she came full upon her sons, surrounded by apple cores. At her approach two of the boys drew closer together; but the third, a little distance off, who lay on his stomach contentedly munching an apple, apparently paid no attention to his mother's entrance.

"Jack! Henry! Willie!" she exclaimed reproachfully. "Whatever are you doing? And those apples! Didn't I tell you not to touch them?"

"Yes, mamma," replied Jack, the eldest, "but we're not really eating them: we're acting the Garden of Eden. Willie and I are Adam and Eve. Henry, over there, is the serpent, trying to lead us to our downfall by showing us how good the apples are."

"But," began the mother as sternly as she was able, "you two must have been eating apples; Henry hasn't done it all. I see as many as ten cores around you."

"Oh, yes," returned Willie, the youngest, "we've all been taking turns being the serpent."

PORTLAND WEDDING

Of Much Interest to Many Duluthians.

A wedding of interest to Duluthians took place last week at Portland, when Miss Katherine McDonnell and Joseph P. Higgins of that place were married. The bridegroom is well known in Duluth. The wedding took place last Wednesday at noon at the Holy Rosary church, Father Lewis officiating. The church was laden with palms, dogwood and lilies, says the Portland Telegram. Mrs. J. F. Daneke and James Flynn rendered musical numbers while the guests were assembling. The bride was in a creation of cream crepe meteor, with long tuelle veil fastened to the coiffure with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and orange blossoms. Attending the bride were Miss Mary E. Cronan, Miss Lucille Dunne, Miss Irene Flynn and Miss Katherine O'Hara, all gowned in lingerie frocks over pink silk, and wearing leghorne hats massed with pink roses. Otto Hartman of Duluth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hartman, was best man, and Fred Martin, Frank J. Lonergan and Gilbert Knipley were ushers. The ecremony was followed by a reception at the McDonnell home in Irvington, which was prettily decorated in ferns and flowers. In the library Miss Margaret Scheehy and Miss Margaret Fiske served punch. The dining room, where a buffet luncheon was served, was effective in pink and white carnations, tulle and smilax. Mr. and Mrs. Maginnis left Wednesday night for a wedding trip through British Columbia, and will be at home in Portland after May 20.

NO WOMEN VISITORS.

Governor Not Likely to Appoint One to Board.

Club women interested in state affairs are looking with interest for the appointment of members to the state board of visitors to succeed two of the members whose resignations have recently been accepted. The State Federation of Women's Clubs was anxious for the naming of one woman to the board, but it is not probable that their wishes will be gratified.

Mrs. C. G. Higbee, president of the State Federation of Clubs, was at the capitol yesterday in conference with the governor on the subject. It is understood she received little encouragement, the governor pointing out that it would be difficult for a woman to do the necessary work.

After seeing the governor, Mrs. Higbee said that the women of the state would not press the appointment. "We realize that Governor Eberhart is friendly to our cause," said Mrs. Higbee, "but we are not going to make any great effort now to secure the representation we feel we deserve and doubtless will receive in the near future."

It was said at the capitol that it was generallly understood that if a woman is appointed as a member of the board at least one more member of the present board will resign.

It is possible that the two vacancies may not be filled for some time.

TRY THIS DINNER

Caledonian Broth.

Bring slowly to the boiling point two pounds of lean meat from the shoulder of mutton covered with two quarts of cold water. Skim and add one-half cup of barley, which has been previously soaked; one cup of grated carrot and one large onion sliced, which has been fried in butter. Simmer until the meat falls from the bones. Remove the meat and bones, and season with salt and pepper and minced parsley.

Meat—Pot Roast of Chicken.

Flour the bird inside and out, dust on black pepper; either dry brown in a little butter or broil over a hot fire. Mix a teaspoon of thyme and a little black pepper and sprinkle over all sides, and then put the chicken in deep agateware basin. Tie the legs together and place the basin on a tall wire teastand in large kettle. A large preserving kettle, with a close-fitting cover, is the kind to use. Pour in enough boiling water to reach above the bottom of the basin, cover the kettle, and as soon as the water boils hard remove it to a part of the range where it may cook quietly and continuously for two or three hours. Do not let any water fall on the chicken or into the basin; the fowl must cook in the steam and its own juices.

Vegetables—Chloe's Brussels Sprout.

Remove any wilted leaves from the outside and let the sprouts stand a few minutes in cold water strongly salted. Cook uncovered till tender in rapidly boiling water. Drain thoroughly, then place in saucepan containing a generous lump of butter, a Chili pepper and some celery salt, and toss till lightly browned. Just before serving, remove the pepper and add a dash each of kitchen bouquet and fine Madeira.

Dessert—Pink Charlotte Russe.

Take a quart of rich cream and divide it in half. Sweeten one pint of it with loaf sugar and stir it into sufficient currant jelly to color it to a fine pink. Put it into a glass bowl and place in the center a pile of sliced almond sponge cake, or of lady cake; every slice spread thickly with raspberry jam, or marmalade, and laid evenly one on another. Have ready the other pint of cream, flavored with the juice of two lemons and beaten to a stiff froth. Heap it all over the pile of cake so as to entirely cover it. Both creams must be made very sweet.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Old-Fashioned Furniture Polish.

Good furniture polish of the old-fashioned kind, and which has been used in some families for many years, is made with one ounce of beeswax, half an ounce of white wax, half an ounce of castile soap, half a pint of turpentine and half a pint of boiling water. Cut the soap and wax very finely; dissolve the wax in the turpentine, and the soap in the water. Mix well, in a jar, and put it at the back of the range for a couple of days.

How to Wash Flannels.

To wash flannels without shrinking them, soak new flannel for many hours in a moderately concentrated solution of soda, to which add half a tumblerful of liquid ammonia, more or less, according to the quantity of material washed out after the addition of more warm water, rinse thoroughly in fresh warm water. It is said any woolen material treated in this way is proof against shrinkage. Of course, it is in the piece not yet converted into garments.

To Clean Light Silk.

An old-fashioned recipe for cleaning lavender or other light silk garments is to mix quarter of a pound of soft soap and half a pound of gin. Remove the dust from the surface then with a small, hard brush scrub it with the mixture. Have hand two pailfuls of cold water; dip the silk in one, shake it well to remove the ather, then dip it in the other, hang up to dry without wringing it. Finally iron, it between paper before it is quite dry.

An Excellent Darning Hint.

How to darn merino underwear thoroughly and neatly. Procure some white mosquito netting. Tack on a sufficient size to cover the thin place or hole, and darn through the net, taking every other hole, basket fashion, with the usual mending wool and a fine darning needle.

To Raise the Pile of Velvet.

See first of all that it is free from dust, and then dampen slightly the smooth side, and pass it rapidly over the hot surface of an iron standing on its end. The hot vapor passing through the velvet causes the pile to stand up. When quite dry brush well in the direction of the pile.

• • •

Keeping Meat Fresh.

Fresh meat may be kept for several days by sprinkling a very little salt on it and then wrapping it in a cloth wet with vinegar.

• • •

To Remove Panes of Glass.

Panes of glass may easily be removed if soft soap be laid over the putty and left for several hours.

R&G CORSETS

Faultless in every detail.

THE BUSY WORLD'S HEART SIDE

By THE OPTIMIST.

A man by the name of Farrington built the Brooklyn bridge. His name is forgotten, except in lines in the traditions of the engineer's office as a faithful, fearless and able master mechanic. He did his work well. He was the first mortal that ever crossed, swung in a bo'sun's chair, on a small hawser, from the top of the Brooklyn tower to the top of the New York tower. He was well paid, but not extravagantly, and left no great fortune.

His ashes sleep in a Dutchess county rural cemetery and when a modest funeral train started from the Poughkeepsie depot for his burial it mustered scarce a handful. Yet this was the man who took from Chief Engineer Roebling's sick chamber the entire bridge, on paper, piece by piece, and hung it in its place. This was the man who, with Roebling, spent thirty-six hours down amid the burning timbers of the caisson beneath the granite of the Brooklyn tower and finally extinguished the fire. The experience cost Roebling his health for years. But Farrington was iron.

And Farrington's motto was "keep cool." He would never waste an ounce of energy with "nervousness." Yet he was finely strung, a man of poetic temperament and active sensibilities. He used to exhort his friends to keep cool. He did not say "Look on the bright side" or "It will clear off tomorrow." He said, "Just don't throw away your strength getting into a flutter. Work away and if there is a hole through you will find it."

Farrington was building the Niagara bridge and, one day, walking its naked beams, high over the angry river, he caught his toe under a rope lashing and pitched forward. As he fell he stretched out his right arm, swung by it, recovered his footing and saved his life.

In describing the experience he said, "Keeping cool did it." And afterward, "I was not depressed. Regaining my footing I went on out to the place where my construction gang was at work as if nothing had happened."

Perhaps such coolness is constitutional. But it can be cultivated. It can be taught to the growing boy and girl, and thus become a habit. It certainly works wonders in a crisis, in ordinary, everyday affairs it enables a man to do his best. Nerves were intended to give energy and courage, not to run away with us like crazy horses with broken harness. The calm self-possession that refuses to allow an evening business telegram of trouble to keep one awake, the repose of mind that overtops a panic as a mountain rises above the fog banks in a valley, the serenity of mind that clearly sees the blessings that remain when a solitary calamity smites heavily, there is no greater good in life. To such a man there is always fair weather.

Among the millions who daily cross the Brooklyn bridge few there are who would not find it helpful to remember E. S. Farrington, who hung each wire and whose personal motto was "Always keep cool."

DISCRIMINATED AGAINST

By CARA REESE.

Oh, you poor child! If you never run up against a discrimination worse than that as you journey through life, you are in luck. If your feelings were not so sorely lacerated the scribe might be tempted to laugh.

Don't you know that there are countless people who are growing jollier, more mellow and sweeter and lovelier the older they get, all because they have been discriminated against all their lives? Discrimination is a diet with a flavor and no mistake. Or, it is something like going to school and having a number of guiding professors, each with opinions and certain established knowledge, and one and all trying to make you a prescribed product. Discrimination may always be turned to account. There is always something to be learned.

Suppose that your "copy" was rejected and the "copy" of another, "not half as good," accepted? Suppose that your painting failed in acceptance while another less excellent in your estimation finds a mention in place? Suppose that the preference for position is given to one not as fully equipped? What of it? Would there not have been others disappointed and feeling as you do had you been triumphant?. Discrimination should be taken as a tonic and not as a knockout.

To discriminate means merely to select from others, to distinguish through some special fitness, a distinction without much difference in very many cases. A discriminating mind is said to make nice distinctions, but in ordinary application of the law there are generally practical reasons why discrimination must be made. Where the discrimination is made on a face-to-face interview or selection, then it sometimes happens that your personality is against you more than the one who discriminates. A dull, lifeless expression, a stolid demeanor, perhaps inattention, or answers irrelevant to the subject under consideration weigh sorely against you, no matter how many or excellent the diplomas and credentials.

And sometimes it is your style of dress, or your lack of neatness, the absence of the small details which tell of culture and refinement. Ah! it very frequently happens that the discrimination in favor of another is due solely to your own wilful neglect of some essential. To be sure there are mistakes made on the part of those who discriminate, but not as frequently as you imagine. The expert knows the diamond in the rough almost as certainly as he knows the finished product. The publisher knows what is clever stuff or a characteristic drawing quicker than wink, whether such be submitted from a tyro or an old hand at the business. And it is much the same with pictures, with jobs and many other things; there is generally just reason for discrimination.

Where you make your mistake is to so persistently make up your mind that you are discriminated against simply because you are you. If you believe this, how would it do to enter the lists next time as somebody else?

FIRST AID TO THE INJURED

HANDY HINTS FOR THE ORDINARY PERSON IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS.

By H. EMERSON PORTER, M. D.

When a bone in a limb is broken splints should always be applied, so that the two broken ends of the bone will be held together in a natural attitude. A broken bone above the elbow in the arm, in the forearm or in the wrist should always be treated in this manner; that is, a splint should be applied at once.

In case a wrist bone is broken the joint is usually thrown out of place. This requires resetting. This is done by holding the forearm firm and pulling gently upon the hand until the joint slips back into place.

It is a serious matter for an amateur to attempt to treat a broken bone in the thigh. It is wise to pull the leg very gently downwards so as to adjust the bones. Then apply a long splint, like a broomstick, from the armpit to the foot. The splint should be made fast, but not over the injury. The cords and bandages binding the splint should be removed from the break. The knee must be straightened and all movement prevented.

When a rib is broken there is always danger of the lungs being punctured. If blood oozes from the mouth of the victim, keep him lying quietly in one position with frequent sips of water, or allow him to suck a piece of ice. If the rib is simply fractured it is necessary to bandage the chest with a binder to suport the ribs without interfering with breathing.

If the jaw is broken bleeding can sometimes be stopped by placing ice on the mouth of the victim. Place a pad beneath the jaw, tying it firmly over the head to relieve the pressure upon the injured member.

The most serious injury is injury of the spine. In such a case the only thing to do is to lie the patient flat, keeping him absolutely still and warm until a skilled surgeon arrives.

It frequently happens upon the athlete held that a finger joint is dislocated. If Mr. Z is playing baseball or cricket and a ball strikes him on the end of the finger, forcing one joint back on top of the other, a sudden sharp pull, when he is not expecting it and the muscles are relaxed may restore the joint to its proper place. If the arm is dislocated secure it firmly to the body with a sling; if a leg, put it into splints, and tie the two legs together.

If Mr. Z sprains his ankle the pain will be very great and there will be swelling with discoloration. The limb should be kept perfectly still and no weight should be borne upon it. The part must be raised and the throbbing pain may be lessened by raising the injured part. Cold water poured upon the sprain relieves the pain.

In the case of shocks and collapses the head should be kept low, warmth should be assured, the limbs should be be rubbed and warm drinks should be administered. Fresh air should be allowed, as it frequently happens that a great crowd gathers about a sick man in the street. The collar should be loosened to insure breathing.

FARM AND GARDEN

Study the Catalogues.

If you have not already got your catalogues from the seedsman, get them, and study them. Remember that the seed stores are almost rushed to death when the planting season really opens, because so many people never seem to realize that they will need seeds of any sort until the moment for planting is upon them. You can get better service by making up your list as early as possible; you will also have it off your mind and you can give more attention to planting. Rely on the old standard and tried varieties for your main crops. Try novelties by all means as many as possible—but do not depend upon them to the exclusion of the proven kinds. A really important vegetable novelty is a rare thing, and then local adaption governs the case, too.

In plants and flowers novelties can be indulged in much more freely. In planning the garden try to reserve a out-of-the-way place as a sort of testing ground, and there try out everything in which you may feel interested. Half the joys of gardening rest in reaching out into the unknown.

Planting for Early Salads.

For early salads, sow cress, mustard, radish. Just a pinch of seed every week for succession. The quality of all these depends upon getting them as young and succulent as possible. Make frequent sowings and discard any leftovers as soon as the new crop is ready.

Daffodils and Narcissi.

Great developments have taken place in daffodil culture during the last few years and the specimens now produced are in advance of what were obtained formerly, in color, size and fragrance. Daffodil bulbs must be planted in open ground, or may be sunk in lawns, or of course, cultivated in pots, and it is getting quite late enough now for the planting to be finished. The same remarks apply to narcissi, of which there are several very choice varieties. The "double" varieties are the best to cultivate of both flowers, and those who have greenhouses can now set about forcing early flowers.

The Attractive Hollyhock.

Many of the old-fashioned flowers that were once so popular, and then for a time seemed to lose their prestige, are again commanding the attention of all lovers of the beautiful. Prominent among this class of flowers are the single hollyhocks. Tall, stately and picturesque, they stand towering above many other flowers and give to the immediate surroundings a singular beauty. The double and fringed hollyhocks are fine, but the old, old- fashioned hollyhocks are more beautiful than all others, are less liable to disease and do not need stalking as do the doubles, which are inclined to be topheavy.

THE EVENING STORY

THE OUTWITTING OF DANIEL GALVIN

By Stephen Grace.

The ship's bell changed wearily—one bell in the middle watch, half-past twelve. A sepulchral voice cried in the darkness: "Starboard cathead!" Ang Ginger Galvin, on the other side of the forecastle, echoed: "Port cathead!" So the hail, slightly varied, went drearily on its way aft to the poop: "Starboard gangway!" "Port gangway!" "Starboard life buoy!" And the officer of the watch, being satisfied that the lookouts were awake, continued his pacing of the deck.

The United States frigate Brandywine was running through the North East Trades under easy canvas. The night was dark and overcast. There was a chilliness in the wind which was keenly felt by the men who had been rudely shaken out of their snug hammocks at midnight. Daniel Galvin, commonly known to his shipmates as "Ginger," had been first lookout on the port cathead. Dreaming of the warm blanket which had so lately enfolded him, he was greeted by a low call:

"Hi, Ginger!"

Galvin turned slowly, and saw the silhouette of a head above the break of the forecastle. He at once recognized his chum, Spud Murphy.

"Hello," he answered, grumpily.

"I've got a fine drop of hot cawfee down in the galley for you," announced Spud.

"All right, Spud," he responded, as the head disappeared: "I'll be down as soon as I can get relieved."

Galvin forthwith made for the break of the forecastle and hailed his topmates. No one volunteered to relieve him of his duties, so he was forced to return to his post at the port cathead.

Suddenly Galvin's eye fell upon a pile of capstan bars, and the possibility of the realization of his desires flashed through his brain. Taking up two of the capstan bars, he stood them up against the forecastle rail. Then he took off his oilskin coat and draped it naturally over the bars. Lastly, he put his cap on the top, and then went down to the galley for his coffee. Of course, the routine of the ship went on as usual. At 1 o'clock, in the ordinary course of events, two bells was struck, accompanied by the prescribed hails: "Starboard cathead!"—a distinct pause; "Starboard gangway!" "Port gangway!" "Starboard life buoy!" Needless to say, the omission did not pass unnoticed by the officer of the watch.

"Go forward and see what is the matter with the port cathead lookout, he ordered, turning to one of his subordinates.

"Aye, aye, sir!" responded the midshipman as he ran down the ladder leading from the poop to the quarter-deck.

"Port cathead!" cried the young officer sternly, when he reached the forecastle, addressing the figure which leant against the rail.

No answer.

"Port cathead!" he repeated in a louder voice.

Still the figure answered not.

"By jove, the beggar is asleep on the lookout!" muttered the midshipman. "I have caught you nicely, my fine lad! I am willing to bet that I will wake you up quicker than you went to sleep!" Forthwith he descended to the upper deck, searched for a wash deck bucket, and filled it with water. Then he returned to the forecastle, and standing well off from the figure, threw the contents of the bucket with all his strength. The full force of the stream caught the upper part of the oilskin coat. This caused the capstan bars to overbalance and the figure toppled over the ship's side. For a second the midshipman gazed in wild consternation. Then he let loose a horror-stricken yell.

"Man overboard! Man overboard!"

In a moment the whole ship sprang to life, and her decks became a tumult of running men.

For more than an hour the ship lay to with her main yards aback, wallowing in the Atlantic swell. For more than an hour her ship's company peered anxiously into the night which had swallowed up the boys, and by no means the least anxious was the midshipman of the watch.

At length the boats returned and were hoisted. All they had found was Ginger Galvin's cap and a capstan bar. The captain of the foretop had previously given the information that Daniel Galvin had the port cathead lookout.

"Where is that young blackguard?" roared the captain. "Where is he?"

"Now, sir," he continued, when the thoroughly scared midshipman was brought before him, "what have you got to say for yourself? Bucket of water, indeed! Why, it is as plain as a pike-staff that you hit him over the head with that capstan bar!"

"Please, sir," said the unfortunate midshipman, bursting into tears before the awfulness of the accusation.

"Silence!" cried the captain, beside himself with rage. "Take him below! Take the murderer of Able Seamon Galvin below and put him in irons!"

The mainyards were filled again, and the ship continued on her course. Tae routine went on as if nothing had happened, but gradually a curious disquietude began to manifest itself on the lower deck. The men moved about warily after dusk, and even during the day were startled by the slightest noise. They were constaly glancing over their shoulders, and no one would go unaccompanied into the darker regions of the ship.

Of course, the officers noticed that there was something wrong, but failed to discover what it was. Matters, however, were brought to a head by one of the men absolutely refusing to go on the port cathead lookout. It was Spud Murphy who was brought before the officer of the watch. "What is the meaning of this?" asked the lieutenant, who, from the man's extreme agitation, put him down as being drunk.

"'Tis Ginger Galvin, sir," Murpay answered, in a trembling whisper.

"Ginger Galvin? What the deuce are you talking about? gasped the officer, "'Tis his ghost, sir!" stammered Spud.

At that moment the captain came on to the poop.

"What is all this about?" he asked.

This man refuses to go on the port cathead lookout, sir," replied the lieutenant, saluting. "He says that he has seen the ghost of Daniel Galvin."

"'Tis thrue, sir! I've seen him not wanst nor twiest, but many times!" interjected the culprit.

"Indeed," murmured the captain. "And when did you see it first, may I ask?"

"When they sung out 'Man overboard,' sir," answered Murphy. "It was in the galley drinking cup of hot cawfee, sir!"

"Ah!" was the captain's only comment. Then he added to the officer of the watch. "Make a prisoner of this man!"

Next morning the captain took drastic action. Sentries were posted all over the ship. Orders were issued that after every meal all food was to be placed under leck and key, the keys being handed over to the master-at-arms, and an officer was detailed to see that this was done.

The significance of these measures was not apparent until the third day. While the watch was scrubbing decks in the morning watch there was a wild rush of men up the foremost hatchway. The watch paused a moment in their work, then dropped their scrubbers and scurried, yelling, on the forecastle.

The commotion attracted the attention of the officers on the poop. Looking forward they saw the haggard face and an emaciated form crawling aft along the deck. There could be no mistaking the head of hair. It was Ginger Galvin!

Ginger made full confession. When he heard the cry of "Man overboard," he knew that the neglect of duty must be discovered, so he hid himself. He resolved to lie low until they reached port, and then to desert, but hunger had forced him from his hiding place.

Two Organizations Are Striving to Increase Lodge Membership.

Eveleth, Minn., April 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Yeoman organization which was formed about three months ago with a charter membership of thirty, is the latest one to adopt the booster idea. The order now consists of eighty members. The members have divided themselves into two sides in their booster contest, with Mrs. A. M. Payne, leader of the green faction, and Mrs. T. Lee, the red. The boosters expect to secure 100 new members by the end of the contest which will terminate the latter part of May. ACCUSED SEEN AT AURORA TUESDAY Man Alleged to Have Assaulted Special Officer May Soon Be Taken.

Virginia, Minn., April 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The first description sent out of the man who is alleged to have done most of the cutting in the assault upon Policeman Harry Wilcox is found to be incorrect in several details, and a more accurate description has been secured through a person who is well acquainted with him. The person in question, having read the description first sent out, has identified the man as Peter Dondovich, alias Peter Saben, and furnished the police with the following description: About 30 years old; height, 5 feet 9 inches; weight about 190 pounds; sandy hair and mustache; sandy complexion, slightly pockmarked; eyes large and bloodshot or granulated lids; wore green cheviot suit with small white stripes.

A reward of $750 has been offered for the arrest and conviction of Dondovich by D. F. Foley, chief of the Oliver Iron Mining company's police force. The information stated to the police that he had seen and talked with Dondovich at Aurora on Tuesday, but at that time did not know of the assault upon Wilcox. He says that Dondovich had a man and was continually getting into trouble with his companions.

The police are keeping up the search for the man, and hope to land him before the expiration of many days. Chiefs Walsh and Foley have kept up the search almost continuously since the assault took place, and declare they will not rest until the man is run down.

SUGGESTIONS AS TO WATER SYSTEM

Secretary of State Board of Health Addresses Grand Rapids Commission.

Grand Rapids, Minn., April 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—At a meeting of the water, light, power and building commission held Tuesday evening the contract for the repairs on the village hall which was partly destroyed by fire on March 10 was let to L. Courtemanche. Only two bids were received, Mr. Courtemanche's bid being $664, while John Hofer bid $845.

The commission received a communication from the superintendent of the Great Northern railway regarding furnishing water for Jim Hill's locomotives, and action was referred until some later date.

H. M. Bracken of the state board of health, in a letter made numerous comments on the water supply conditions here, and made some recommendations. Mr. Bracken stated that the investigation showed that there were numerous houses along the shores of Crystal and Hale lakes, one house as near as ten feet from Crystal lake which empties into Hale lake; that parts of the shores of both lakes are used as pasture and that horses and cattle waded in the lakes in the summer time; that the lakes are used for boating, fishing and bathing. It is recommended that the village acquire the shore rights on Hale lake, and that a channel be cut from the outlet of Crystal lake to the outlet of Hale lake which empties into the creek that flows through town into the Mississippi river.

The report of E. P. Burch, the consulting engineer engaged to look over the plan, is quite voluminous, and contains several recommendations for the care and maintainance of the plant. Among the recommendations is one advising that the village acquire the water power at Prairie river falls, four miles east of Grand Rapids and transform it into an electric and power plant for the use of the village and for commercial purposes. Mr. Burch also recommends a better system of bookkeeping for the village plant, touching on numerous other matters in connection with the plant.

Romanich was unable to raise the funds yesterday, but will be given until this evening to pay the fine, or be sent to Duluth Friday morning to serve out the ninety-day sentence in the county jail.

GILBERT WILL HAVE FINE WATER SYSTEM

Plant Supplied From Geno Mine Is Being Tested This Week.

Gilbert, Minn., April 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Missabe Mountain town board met Wednesday evening in the town hall and considered, among other matters the laying out of the new township road between Gilbert and the Elba location. Engineer Frank Bowman was present and consulted with the board on the route to be followed and the grades to be established. The new road will be one of the finest highways in this section and will be an extension of Broadway street in Gilbert and will be put in fine shape by the town board.

Gilbert's new water system is being tested this week by the Genoa mine force. Water was pumped into the mains on Monday and several defects in the pressure tank and mains were discovered. These were repaired and water again supplied. The pressure is estimated at ninety pounds to the square inch on Main street and will be kept at this pressure by the 100,000 gallon tank on Summit hill.

Water Is Very Pure.

The water is the purest possible, being pumped from the bottom of the Genoa mine, where it gushes from below the bottom of the mine into a large water-tight concrete tank, which is completely walled off from the rest of the mine, thus preventing the contamination of the water. The water is raised 200 feet to the surface by large pumps and is forced through 12-inch pipes into the Gilbert water mains and pressure is put on 2 miles distant. In addition to this length of mains, the village has just completed a half mile of ten-inch mains and the Oliver Iron Mining company has installed, gratuitously, over a mile of mains for the residents of the First addition to Gilbert.

Contracts were let some ten days ago by the village for another mile of four and six-inch mains, thus completing a magnificent system of water mains throughout the entire village at a total cost of over $100,000.

Contractor Edward Kircher has completed the plans for remodeling the village hall and will submit them to the council tonight for approval. The plans call for a council room, a firemen's reception room, sleeping rooms and lockers for patrolmen and firemen, electrical room for the distribution of current over the various circuits, a store room and a large room for public use. The hall has been located on Broadway on the lots purchased from Rubenstein brothers.

If I brought the least strain on the muscles of my back, sharp pains seized me. The kidney secretions were also irregular in passage and I did not rest well. MEMORY FOOD.

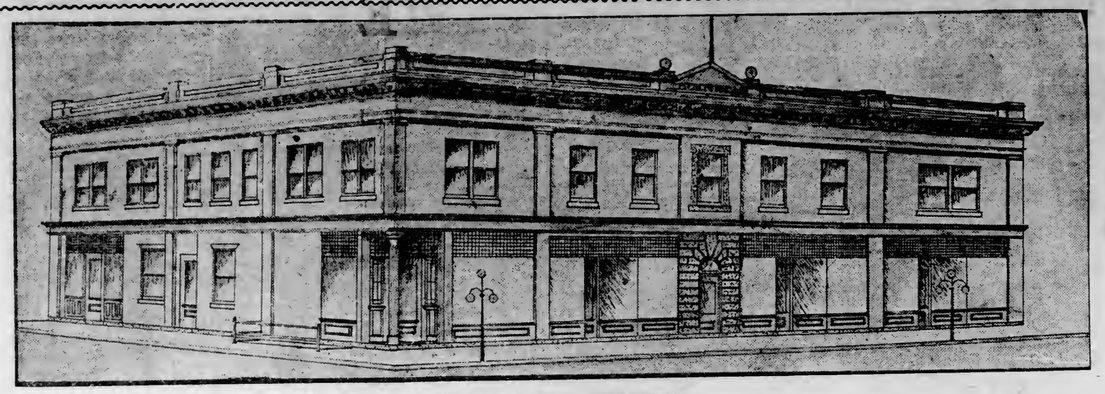
A Case Where Memory Was Strengthened By Grape-Nuts.

Food that will actually help the memory as well as agree perfectly with a delicate stomach is worth knowing of.

A good wife out in Iowa who did not know which way to turn to get food that would agree with her husband, who was left in a weakened condition after a serious illness and could scarcely retain any food in his stomach, was one day induced to try him on Grape-Nuts, the famous ready-cooked breakfast food, and from the first he began to improve rapidly. In three months he had gained thirty pounds.

She says that his stomach has recovered so completely that he can now eat any kind of food.



She mentions the boy of an intimate acquaintance, who was so delicate and thin that his appearance was pitiable and he had no appetite for any ordinary food. He was put on Grape-Nuts and liked the crispness and sweetish taste of the new food and took to it. His improvement began at once and he is now a healthy, plump boy.

"I know that Grape-Nuts will do more for weak stomachs than any medicine. The claim that it will build up and strengthen the brain has been proven to my certain knowledge. Sister, who writes for the press, and is compelled to memorize a great deal, has been using Grape-Nuts and says she is surprised at the result. There is a marked improvement in her memory and the brain works more perfectly and with better results."

SPACIOUS STRUCTURE TO BE ERECTED AT GRAND RAPIDS

THE NEW McALPINE BUILDING.

Grand Rapids, Minn., April 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—M. McAlpine, who has been figuring on the erection of a building to replace the structure destroyed by fire Dec. 29 last, has had the plans for the new building completed. The building will be two story brick, 75 by 87 feet, 75 feet on Leland avenue, and 87 feet on Third street.

The front of the building will be on the Third street side, and will contain four stores of convenient size. On the ground floor, on the Leland avenue side will be an office room of considerable size. In the basement will be a barber shop with entrance on Leland avenue. The second floor will contain twelve office rooms, and sixteen sleeping rooms, with all modern conveniences. The exterior will be of red pressed brick, trimmed with white stone veneering and cut stone.

Plans For More Stories.

The walls of the building are to be made strong enough so that they will support two more stories should there ever arise need of putting them on. When completed this building will, without doubt, be one of the best constructed in this section as no expense will be spared.

The contract will be let on May 11, D. V. Case of Hibbing is the architect, and the work will be supervised by him.

Mr. McAlpine started this week tearing down what was left of the old building. John Billeadeau, who has conducted the I. X. L. in a part of the damaged building, has been given notice to move out, and is preparing to close his place of business until the new building is erected, when he will occupy one of the storerooms as a restaurant and probably have the sleeping rooms in connection with the restaurant.

The buildings occupied by the Reishus Remer Land company, J. S. Gole's real estate office and Liverman Bros'. will be moved onto Mr. McAlpine's lots on the corner of Fourth street and Leland avenue facing Fourth street, on the site formerly occupied by the Ed Huson building. Mr. Huson has had his building moved over to his lots on Sleeper avenue.

Health and Beauty Answers

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

Spanish Girl: Yes, short sleeves and low necks will be worn this summer—probably to a greater extent than ever before. But don't worry about your red hands and dark neck; neither pin your hopes to face or talcum powders. Try this recipe now and see what it does for you: Get from your druggist four ounces of spurmax, dissolve it in half pint hot water and add two teaspoonfuls of glycerine. Apply this inexpensive lotion to your face, neck and forearms, rubbing gently. You will find it does not rub off or show and that it whitens your skin, giving it a clear, smooth and youthful appearance. Spurmax is the greatest complexion beautifier I know.

"Saleslady": When you consider that most foot powders clog the pores you can readily understand why they fail to give relief to sore and sweaty feet. Try bathing your feet in a basin of hot water in which you have dissolved two teaspoonfulls of phrosol. That is a most refreshing treatment for tired and aching feet. It helps the pores expel all poisonous waste matter, and has given relief after other remedies had failed to many who suffered from tender feet. It also acts as a preventive of corns, bunions and callouses. If you druggist has no phrosol in stock he can get it from his wholesaler if he cares to be accommodating.

B. L. H.: The best thing I know to remove superfluous hair from the face or forearms is a simple mixture of delatone. Mix a little of the powder with enough water to make a paste. Cover the surface from which you wish to remove the hair with this paste; let it remain two or three minutes; then wipe off the paste and wash the skin thoroughly with warm water. Get the delatone from your druggist in the original one-ounce package. One application will remove the hair, but it may grow in again. It it does it will be light and scarcely discernible. Two or three treatments with delatone will remove the hair permanently.

A. G.: Your hairdresser did not overcharge you when she asked 75 cents for a canthrox shampoo. Remember that rent and many other items pile up expenses for a beauty parlor. You can take a canthrox shampoo at home at a cost of two or three cents. All you need do is put a teaspoonful of canthrox in a teacupful of hot water and stir until dissolved. I agree with you when you say there is nothing else that makes such a fine lather and cleans the scalp so thoroughly. It certainly removes dandruff and relieves irritation of the scalp. I like it because it dries so quickly and makes the hair soft and fluffy, besides doing away completely with the "streakiness" that follows a soap shampoo.

J. R.: If you feel handicapped in society because your face is covered with pimples and blotches you should try to get rid of them instead of foolishly endeavoring to cover them up with cosmetics. I will give you a recipe that you can depend upon to purify your blood. Get from your druggist one ounce of kardene and a half pint of alcohol. Dissolve the kardene and a half teacupful of sugar in the alcohol and add enough boiling water to make a full quart of tonic. Take a teaspoonful before each meal and before retiring. This old-fashioned remedy cleanses the blood, arouses a torpid liver and aids digestion. When your blood is in good condition you will be free from pimples, blotches and skin eruptions—and instead of a sickly, sallow complexion you will have the rosy glow of health in your cheeks. When you are stronger your dull and "tired out" feeling will disappear.

N. K.: Your shortness of breath is the result of too much flesh. The correct weight for a girl 5 ft. 7 in. tall is about 148 pounds. Get from your druggist four ounces of parnotis and dissolve it in a pint of hot water. Take a teaspoonful before each meal. This treatment should reduce your weight ten pounds in two weeks.

Newly Wed: You will not find the latest styles in hairdressing so trying as your fear if you give your hair proper treatment. Shampoo with canthrox once in two or three weeks and use a good quinine hair tonic three times a week, rubbing it into the scalp and roots of the hair gently. You can make the tonic at home if you get from your druggist one ounce of quinzoin and dissolve it in half pint of alcohol and then add half pint of cold water. This tonic nourishes the scalp and roots of the hair, removes dandruff and irritation of the scalp, and stops falling hair. It will make your hair fine in texture, glossy and abundant.

Mrs. B. L. I.: A woman 35 years old should be in the very prime of life, with clear complexion and skin smooth, moist and pliable. I will give you a recipe for making a cream jelly that you can use for massaging, and if you use it faithfully it will preserve your complexion. Get from your druggist one ounce of almozoin, put it in half pint of colud water and add two teaspoonfuls of glycerine; then stir briskly and let stand overnight. Massage with this cream jelly and you will get rid of those blackheads and make the pores smaller, so that they will not return. Please note that this cream contains no oils or fats that will promote a growth of hair on the face or make the skin dark and oily.

Ohio Girl: Many persons wear glasses simply because they met good salesmen with glasses to sell. You say yours detract from your appearance. Why don't you try going without them? Use an eye tonic made by dissolving an ounce of crystos in a pint of water. Drop one or two drops in each eye. It will not smart or burn. This tonic is good for tired, weak or inflamed eyes, and for granulated eyelids. It improves sight and makes your eyes bright, sparkling and lustrous.

It celebrated the event like big men and great men celebrate some event in their own lives, with modesty and becoming greatness.

The evening paper, by a policy peculiar to itself, has gained a confidence and place in the hearts of the people that few daily papers occupy. The Evening Herald is an independent paper with Democratic tendencies, and a policy on social, economic, industrial, commercial and religous matters that appeals to the best in men. The writers, news and editorial, on The Herald are all bright, active broad young men who cooperate with the management and are imbued with an individual and collective pride and spirit that materially counts in making The Herald a sort of confidential agent for the people's best interests in Northern Minnesota.

The Eveleth Star joins the great fraternal army of the weekly and daily press of Minnesota in wishing The Herald a long and continued life of usefulness and prosperity.

THE RAILROADS AND DULUTH.

The Herald's attention is called to some very sound and pointed observations on the way the railroads are treating Duluth, published in the Ogilvie Sentinel. Here they are:

"The city of Duluth is surrounded by natural advantages which ought to make her the leading city of the Northwest. With a fresh water ocean in her front yard covering more space than an ordinary European kingdom, and iron mines in her back yard producing half the world's ore, and surrounded by the best farming country in the world; in the midst of a population the most energetic, the most industrious and the most intelligent the world has ever known, she ought to have, as Governor Eberhart predicted the other day, a great future.

"But as a matter of fact, Duluth's past isn't what it ought to have been. Its present isn't what it ought to be, and its future never will be what it should until the railroads are forced to stop discriminating against Duluth in favor of the Twin Cities.

"The railroads have robbed Duluth of the prosperity which was rightfully hers, for years, and they are still at it. * * *

"If Duluth could ship her commodities to the consumers of the Northwest at the same rate as those commodities are shipped from Duluth to the Twin Cities, and could be assured decent service, she would have the Twin Cities beaten a mile.

"If the government adopted the same policy as do the railroads it would cost Duluth about 6 cents for a 2-cent postage stamp unless your letter was addressed to St. Paul or Minneapolis, in which case the charge would be 2 cents. At the present time it costs about three times as much and takes about three times as long to ship commodities 150 miles west of Duluth as it does to ship them 150 miles south to the Twin Cities. The governor's talk of Duluth's future greatness sounds good, but its future greatness will exist largely in the imagination until the problem of fair transportation rates and decent service is solved.

"This problem of transportation rates not only affects Duluth, but it affects every citizen and every industry in this great state, because at the present time every township, village and county in the state is forced to pay tribute to two cities, to which the wealth and population of this state gravitates just as surely as the wealth created by the Irish in Ireland gravitates to the treasury of the British landlord—just as surely as the waters of the Mississippi flow toward the gulf, but with this difference: that the drain of this state's wealth and population to two cities results from an arbitrary and unfair system of transportation rates while the drain of Mississippi waters southward is the result of natural laws."

This is very well said; but the situation is not quite so bad as it was. The Sentinel marvels that the newspapers at Duluth don't say much about the situation, and proceeds to explain their silence upon a very polite hypothesis. We fear that the vigorous and penetrating mind of the Sentinel's editor has not been occupied much in reading The Herald. For months, last year, The Herald, discussed railroad discrimination against Duluth, the agitation resulting in arousing public sentiment so that a large sum of money was raised by the Duluth Commercial club, a traffic committee was provided with an expert traffic man, and foundation work for a campaign to win justice for Duluth from the railroads is now in progress. That is why we say that the situation is not so bad as it was: because Duluth has determined to change it, and Duluth means business.

THE LOCAL ASSESSOR.

The state tax commission recently discovered that some local assessors, for one purpose or another, were in the habit of wilfully omitting property from the assessment rolls. The commission promptly filed charges with the governor, and the assessors who were accused as promptly resigned when they were served with copies of the charges against them. Thus they admitted their guilt and saved the state the trouble of proving the charges and themselves the humiliation of being removed from office.

It is worth while noting that all of these cases were in the southern part of the state, and that the northern part is thus far clean of suspicion.

This incident gives an idea of the power of the local assessors, and of the necessity of great care on the part of the people in selecting them. Joined with other reasons, it also offers good argument for doing away with the local assessor and putting the work of assessment under the county system.

With the local assessor rests, to a very large degree, the question whether all local personal property is to pay its share of the public expense or not. When an assessor lets one of his friends off by neglecting to return his property for assessment, the share that man ought to pay falls on the rest of the community. The same thing is true when property is under-assessed through favoritism or corruption.

It is true that the work of the assessor is reviewed by higher authorities; but he is the man on the ground, and if he fails the whole system fails. Yet in too many cases the office of assessor is carelessly bestowed, though it ought to be placed more carefully than almost any other local office.

The tax commission, in a bulletin just issued, says: "The commission is earnestly trying to have all property in the state which is not exempt from taxation listed and taxed, and whenever for any reason an assessor fails to list and assess any considerable amount of property in his district and the fact becomes known to the commission, steps are immediately taken to have the property in the district reassessed and the offending assessor removed from office. The commission feels that in no other way can a square deal be obtained for the honest taxpayers of the state. All the members of the commission stoutly maintain that a great majority of the assessors are honest men, bent only on the faithful discharge of their duties; but unfortunately among 2,500 officers there are always found a number of incompetent and unworthy men. Some assessors seem more intent on securing a re-election than they do on the proper discharge of their official duties, and this leads to the pernicious practice of 'standing in' and obtaining the support of voters by listing and assessing only a part of their property. It was work of this kind that led the commission to file with the governor the charges above referred to. The commission asserts that the vice has become all too common, and that it intends to use every means in its power to stamp it out."

The commission will be justifying its existence by stern action along that line.

One of the chief weaknesses of the present system is that the local assessor is too close to the assessed. Politics or friendship may lead to under-assessment or enmity may lead to over-assessment. There should be a county assessor in each county, to appoint all assessors and be responsible for their work. Then, with the tax commission to check up the county assessors in the common interest of the state, the work would be better done and the burden of public expense more justly distributed.

MISSIONARIES AND PESSIMISTS.

"Woodlander's" contribution to the discussion, started the other evening by "Lakesider", on the benefits of foreign missions, chills our interest in the debate, and we hasten to extricate ourselves from it as speedily as may be, a little shamed to have engaged in so profitless a business. These two advocates of reaction and opponents of Christianity and civilization are carrying on in a way to earn the pretty suburbs from which they have taken their names and in which such spirits have no place, reputations like those of Sodom and Gomorrah; and they don't deserve it. Let "Lakesider" and "Woodlander" return to the discussion of home gardening and prize vegetables, for which they are better fitted.

There is entertainment—to the writers, at least,—in the callow flippancy of "Lakesider" and the putrid pessimism of "Woodlander," but no enlightenment. There is time for all things worth while, but there is no time for argument with triflers who seek to make a case for barbarism. What's the use in talking to a person like "Woodlander," who says of the "good old days,"—which were the worst old days the world will ever see,—that "there was none of the meek, 'turn-the-other-cheek' spirit that lets graft run its course and corruption go unpunished"? Let "Woodlander" read history and the current news for his instruction. Let him read of the days when humanity was nothing but a bleeding, bruised pavement, over which the greedy and the powerful marched in horrid triumphs; when the common people were nothing but despised material for armies and vassalages. Let him read Mark Twain's tremendous satire, "Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," and reflect upon the stupid, humble oaf whose body and soul and every human possession, including wife and daughter, were the chattels of his baron. That oaf represented the common people of the "good old days"; and his numb and sluggish mind did not for centuries conceive the thought of resentment.

This debasement of humanity ran down even into Christian days, for this reason: for a long time the world looked upon Christianity simply as a means of getting to heaven, not as a means of living decently and comfortably in this world. Its splendid message, therefore, was distorted and its glorious light obscured. Hardly yet has the world realized that Christianity is not so much a recipe for pleasant living after death as it is a means of bringing happiness to this life.

Recognizing, however, the futility of reasoning with those who hold a brief for barbarism and irreligion, we hasten to put an emphatic period to the debate.

THE TUBERCULOUS COW.

It is to be hoped that the discussion over the respective rights of the state, the city and the milkman in the matter of tuberculous cows will not develop the fact that there is a twilight zone, between the functions of state and city, in which the owner of a tainted cow can continue to milk her and sell the milk to an unsuspecting public. The main consideration should not be the rights of the state, of the city or of the milkman, but the right of the public to a pure supply of milk. Even though it is disputed that milk from tuberculous cows may give consumption to human beings, and even though there may be a question as to the condition of any cow, in the interest of the public no chances should be taken. Somewhere, either in state or city, should be the power to see that the public gets the benefit of any such doubt.

JAIL FOR SPEED FIENDS.

Judge Windom's announcement that hereafter he will impose jail sentences, not fines, upon automobile drivers convicted of reckless speeding, will be warmly approved by the public. Even at the risk of spoiling some of the fun of owning automobiles, the public should be protected, and no better way to protect it can be imagined than a strict adherence to Judge Windom's policy. Automobile owners often seem to forget that the public got here and laid out the streets before the automobile was invented, and that the coming of this exhilarating means of locomotion for those who have money or credit took no rights away from the public.

Nine elephants ran wild in Danville, Ill. One Danville man has started an elephant running wild all over the country and it begins to look as though its keepers cannot recapture and pacify it.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

THE FLORIDA EVERGLADES.

To the Editor of the Herald:

Just a few words about the Florida Everglades. Upon my return from the Everglades last week my attention was called to an article in The Herald, warning people not to invest any money in the Everglade lands. I have made a personal investigation of this proposition and will say that the man who wrote that article either never saw the Everglades, or had some other motive in view, whereby he would reap some benefit. There are a great many people here who have contracts for ten or twenty acres and have paid $50 or $100 on them, and upon reading that article decided to give up their contracts and lose what they had paid on them.

I think it a shame for a man to write anything like that and have these people drop their holdings in such a good thing as the Everglades. I am not selling land, but I have heart enough in me to sympathize with the poor, and will encourage all my friends and acquaintances to get some of this land. I have been there and know what I am talking about, when I say the man that has a contract for land in the glades has something that will make him big money in a short time. My advice is hold on to your contracts and get more if you can.

HUGO E. MODIN.

(Note—The article referred to did not warn people not to invest any money in the Everglades. It stated that there were some meritorious projects and some that were little better than swindles, and warned investors to thoroughly investigate before buying. —The Editor.)

THAT MISSIONARY WHY-NESS.

To the Editor of The Herald:

One of the most interesting things to me that has appeared in the Open Court in a long time was the letter published under the caption, "Why Is a Missionary?" and I naturally found much of interest in The Herald's reply to that letter. Perhaps the truth lies between the extremes of opinion, advanced in those two articles, but this has been called a questioning age, and I fear I have been seriously bitten by the microbe that arouses the spirit of wanting to know.

Before I begin, however, on the really apropos part of this communication, I want to express a hope that my venture into the Open Court will not expose me to a fire of editorial satire and adjectivial near-abuse. As I understand the purpose of the Open Court it is intended for free expressions of opinion.

Now there are many people, even here in Duluth, who have opinions much like those of Mr. Lakesider, and much as it grieves me to have to confess it, some of us who live in Woodland find ourselves on the same side with him. But perhaps it won't hurt for both parts of the city to agree on something once in awhile.

But what appealed to me was this: In your editorial you speak of the wonderful progress made by civilization, which you appear to classify with Christianity, and you contrast this with the conditions found in barbarous nations. We have, to be sure, many things that earlier nations had not—electric light, telephones, steam engines, and common councils. But we have no historical corner on civilization, for we find quite as great accomplishments in many ways among the ancient Greeks and Roman, in ancient Egypt, and in other countries, wrought out long before Christianity existed. Do you mean to imply that Edison, Fulton, and the other inventors whose work has benefited the race would not have made their discoveries had it not been for Christianity? If so, it seems to me that you claim too much.

Aside from these advantages that spring from the material creations of men I challenge you to show wherein we of today are better off than our barbarous ancestors. We have a social organization which is unlike any that they had, but is it any better? When crime against society was committed in those days it was punished summarily; today it often goes unpunished, if the legal advisor of the criminal is sharp enough to lay his finger on the technicality that will free his client. And once such a miscarriage of justice occurs, the matter is ended, and the wrongdoer goes free. We have our councils and legislatures and congress or parliament, where they had one man the supreme head of the nation; but are we better off? If crooks and grafters get into power we let them stay there until they are beaten at the polls, and then thank goodness that they have gone.

Under the earlier system an official who showed himself so corrupt as to rouse popular indignation was quickly removed—and wasn't left in a position to work some new graft on the community, either. Under our system, whatever is done in the way of public work is managed by some underling, as a rule, far removed from the head. In earlier days these officials were personally responsible to the head of the state or tribe, and were made to feel and realize that responsibility.

We have, of course, scientific methods of doing things that our ancestors knew nothing about, but I do not believe that they are due to Christianity. Rather they are the outcome of the development of the race from its study of nature and natural forces, and I claim that their development might have been even more rapid under the earlier form of government than under ours, since any means of increasing the wealth of the people meant the increase of the wealth of the head of the nation. This would have led to the scientist's receiving support and encouragement in place of the mockery and abuse which now falls to his lot until he has proved his point a million times over.

As to the general happiness of the people, that, if anything, was greater under the former conditions than it is now. There was no such thing as heart-breaking labor without hope of anything better; there was no artificial, money-built caste system—in everything it was the survival of the fittest. There was none of the meek, "turn-the-other-cheek" spirit that lets graft run its course and corruption go unpunished. If things went wrong, somebody got out and righted them, and if some one didn't the whole community went at it together, and instead of calling names they cleaned things up and started all over again. A despot's life was worth about as much as an honest man's political chances are today, and whoever had push and brains enough to get to the top got there.

But I must stop. I'm on a subject that might easily keep me going all night, and I'll not bore you or my unknown friend Lakesider with any more of this. But I do want to say to him, through the Open Court, that I believe he has reason on his side, and that if we could trade off some of this present day condition for half the same amount of what we have been taught to call "barbarism," the world would be a heap sight better off and the millenium that much nearer.

Teach the heathen? Teach them what? In The Herald's account of the recent riots in China was the statement that all the foreign buildings in one town were destroyed, and it enumerated them as three missionary buildings, the Standard Oil company's tanks and the International Tobacco company's warehouses. And if truth were told there probably was a supply of liquor there somewhere, too. We teach the heathen about hell and the devil, and we knock down his gods and stamp on them, and when he bravely defies ours we consign him to eternal damnation. We tell him to submit to offense and cruelty, whereas he knows that that is but the way to make them breed the more. In short, we try to take away the real life he is leading and force upon him a miserable, sham existence that reeks with artificiality, is putrid with the maggots of corruption and rotting with deceptions that we haven't the courage to thrust out. Then we give him the telephone and telegraph (both controlled by a trust), the electric light (also controlled by a trust), the railroad (as good as controlled by a trust), scientific methods of doing harder work and more of it than he ever dreamed of (which he can employ if he has money enough to do so), and we set ourselves up on a high pedestal and tell him to look at us and be happy.

Yes, in spite of your spirited editorial of tonight, I feel inclined to ask you again, with Mr. Lakesider, "Why is a Missionary?"

PUDD'NHEAD WILSON'S MAXIMS.

(By Mark Twain.)

In the first place God made idiots; this was for practice. Then He made school boards.

In statesmanship get the formalities right; never mind about the moralities.

There isn't a parallel of latitude but thinks it would have been the equator if it had had its rights.

There is no character, howsoever good and fine, but it can be destroyed by ridicule, howsoever poor and witless. Observe the ass, for instance. His character is about perfect, he is the cholcest spirit among all the humbler animals, yet see what ridicule has brought him to. Instead of feeling complimented when we are called an ass, we are left in doubt.

Tell the truth or trump—but get the trick.

Adam was human—this explains it all. He did not want the apple for the apple's sake, he wanted it only because it was forbidden. The mistake was in not forbidding the serpent; then he would have eaten the serpent.

Adam and Eve had many advantages, but the principal one was that they escaped teething.

There is this trouble about special providences, namely: There is so often a doubt as to which party was intended to be the beneficiary. In the case of the children, the bears and the prophet, the bears got more real satisfaction out of the episode than the prophet did, because they got the children.

Let us endeavor to so live that when we come to die, even the undertaker will be sorry.

Why is it we rejoice at a birth and grieve at a funeral? It is because we are not the person involved.

October: This is one of the peculiar days in stocks. The others are July, January, September, April, November, May, March, June, December, August and February.

When I reflect upon the number of disagreeable people who I know have gone to a better world, I am moved to lead a different life.

Even popularity can be overdone. In Rome, along at first, you are full of regrets that Michael Angelo died; but by and by you only regret that you didn't see him do it.

Nothing so needs reforming as other people's habits.

O Lyric Master!

Out of the great wise silence, brooding
And latent so long,
Burst on the world, O Master—sing us
the big man-song!

Have we not piled up cities, gutted
the iron hills,
Schooled with our dream of lightning and steam, giving them thought and wills?

Have we not laughed at Distance, belting
the earth with rails?
Are we a herd of weaklings? Nay,
we are masterful males!

We are the poets of matter! Latent in steel and stone,
Latent in engines and cities and ships,
see how our songs have grown!

Long have we hammered and chiseled,
hewn and hoisted, until—
Lo, 'neath the wondering noon of the World the visible Epic of Will!

Was it not built as the Masters build,
lyric with pain and joy?
Say, is it less than the twin-built Rome,
less than the song-reared Troy?

Less than an Argive wrangle, warrior
and wife in a fuss?
These you sang in the ancient time—
Oh, what will you sing for us?

Breathless we halt in our labor; shout
us a song to cheer;
Something that's swift as a saber, keen
for the mark as a spear.

Full of the echoes of battle—souls crying
up from the dust!
Hungry we cried to our singers—our singers have flung us a crust!

Choked with the smoke of the battle,
staggering, weary with blows;
We cried for a goblet of music; they fling us the dew of a rose!

Gewgaw goblets they gave us, jeweled
and polished and fine,
And filled with the ears of a weakling;
Oh, God! for a gourd—and wine!

O big wise lyric Master, you who have seen us build,
Molding the mud with our tears and blood into the things we willed—

Soon shall your brooding be over, the dream shall be widened, and then—
Thunderous out of the silence—hurl us the Song of Men!

—John G. Neihardt.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Too many matchmakers spoil the romance.

A man can admire himself for the way his wife forgives his failings.

Life is full of pain: a few men get hanged; most men get married.

When a girl has a married sister it's a sign she is going to try to run her love affairs for her.

A woman believes in love ahead of everything else, so that when it comes out behind she can still go on believing.

Forever and a Day.

I little know or care
If the blackbird on the bough
Is filling all the air
With his soft crescendo now;
For she is gone away
And when she went she took
The springtime in her look,
The peachblow on her cheek,
The laughter from the brook,
The blue from out the May—
And what she calls a week
Is forever and a day.

It's little that I mind
How the blossoms, pink and white,
At every touch of wind
Fall a-trembling with delight;
For in the leafy lane,
Beneath the garden boughs,
And through the silent house
One thing alone I seek,
Until she come again
The May is not the May.
And what she calls a week
Is forever and a day

—Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

Disarmament.

Portland Telegram: We may build battle ships without limit as to displacement, tonnage or calibre and weight of guns, but with the hatpin it is a case of disarmament.

Be Strong!

Be strong!
We are not here to play, to dream, to drift,
We have hard work to do, and loads to lift;
Shun not the struggle; face it. 'Tis God's gift.

Be strong!
Say not the days are evil—Who's to blame?
And fold the hands and acquiesce—O shame!
Stand up, speak out, and bravely, in God's name.

Be strong!
It matters not how deep intrenched the wrong,
How hard the battle goes, the day, how long,
Faint not, fight on; tomorrow comes the song.

—Maltbie D. Babcock.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1890.

•••Articles of incorporation of the Stone Iron company have been filed. The officers of the company are: George C. Stone, president; Joseph Sellwood, vice president; W. H. Hibbard, secretary and treasurer. These gentlemen and James B. Geggie constitute the board of directors. The company begins business May 1, with a capital of $600,000. A portion of the property to be developed is on the line of the Duluth & Iron Range railroad and is forty-seven miles north of Two Harbors, on the Mesaba range. The initial development has been done by M. Geggie.

•••Referee Hanks in the quo warrants proceedings in the case of the state against the officers of Park Point, has filed his findings. In this action the result hinged in the location of the mouth of the St. Louis river, whether at the entry or between Connors and Rices points, or at Grassy point. In the referee's decision the mouth of the river is placed at the entry between Minnesota and Wisconsin points, and is held that the town of Park Point is included within the limits and boundaries of the city of Duluth.

•••Hugh H. Price of Black River Falls, Wis., one of the youngest men who ever held a seat in congress, is in Duluth on lumber business, accompanied by F. H. Elmore.

•••A portrait of the late A. T. C. Pierson has been received by the Rose Croix commandery, Council of Kadosh. It will occupy a place on the walls of the new lodge room.

•••John D. Gill has gone to California to look up titles to important realty in this vicinity.

•••Col. George E. Welles, secretary of the board of trade, is expected back from Chicago next week. He has been there for medical treatment, and is much improved in health.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

This Country Needs It, Too.

Montevideo Leader: The enthusiasm with which Mr. Roosevelt is received everywhere he goes in the old world, is but an expression of the spirit of democracy that exists there as here. His presence there gives the Democracy of the East an opportunity to pay homage to the Democracy of the West. To those people he is the true representative of a truely free government, and that is the kind of government they need and are working for.

No Danger of That.

Swanville News: With the retirement of Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, the relegating to his Danville, Ill., home of "Uncle" Joe Cannon, the apparent defeat of Congressman James A. Tawney of the First district, Col. Roosevelt home from the African jungles and Hailey's comet navigating in unseen space for the next three-quarters of a century, newspapers are threatened to soon become as dry as a turkey drumstick on the day following Thanksgiving.

And Taft Did It.

Hutchinson Leader: "The income tax amendment," says an exchange, has thus far been ratified by Alabama, South Carolina, Illinois, Oklahoma and Kentucky, and been turned down by Virginia. There is a possibility that the proposition will be defeated. The matter of referring the question to the states was merely a subterfuge to prevent the last congress from passing an income tax law which might delay the paying of an income tax for several years even though enough states prove to be in favor of it. It requires only the adverse vote of the legislatures of twelve states to defeat the question.

Any Ticket to Get Results.

Princeton Union: An exchange remarks that the Socialist victory in Milwaukee is due to the fact that 7,000 Republicans and 4,000 Democrats voted the ticket. Why did they? That is the most important point. Because they were disgusted with the rotten municipal administration—the corrupt machine manipulated by the tools of the interests. Hence no one can blame them for desiring a change. We consider the Republicans and Democrats who voted for Seidel very sensible citizens.

Providence Never Misses Fire.

Ortonville Herald Star: What we lose in fruits and vegetables, we stand to win back in an increased grain yield. This is our beautiful faith in Providence: She fires no blank cartridges.

Failed on Nerve.

Virginia Enterprise: The Payne-Aldrich tariff may be "the best ever," but President Taft failed on nerve when it came to carrying the news to Indiana.

What Do They Take Us For.

Mora Times: The people cannot be fooled all the time and the continued attempt by administrative leaders to convince us that the Payne-Aldrich tariff law is a fulfillment of campaign promises is an insult to the intelligence of American citizenship.

Only One Right Thing to Do.

Sauk Center Herald: Will some one kindly predict what Minnesota Republicans will do about the tariff when their state convention meets? The question cannot be dodged. Will that body follow Indiana's lead? Please ask something easy.

Work Versus Worry.

New York Weekly: It is a well-understood fact that it is not work that kills, but worry, and from this text some most sensible and profitable discourses have been preached during recent years. The conclusion of the whole matter is this: Brain work is conducive to health and longevity, while brain worry causes disease and shortens life. The truth of this statement, and its application to what we see around us, are evident enough; yet it is well that such subjects should be continually discussed. A life of intellectual labor, although severe, like that performed by the judges of our highest courts, or by scholars and persons devoted to literary pursuits, if unmixed with excitement, and followed with regularity, is not only a happy life, but it is seen also to promote bodily health and long life. On the other hand, mental cares attended with suppressed emotions and occupations which from their nature are subject to great vicissitudes of fortune and constant anxiety, break down the lives of the strongest. Every one has seen a class of men whose early mental training was deficient, and to whom the writing of memoranda was irksome, engaged in middle life in great undertakings, and taxing the memory with a mass of complicated business accounts, simply because they could more easily remember than write. Their power for memory for a certain kind of facts is often truly astonishing; but the strain is at last too much, and they die before their time.

Speed the Day.

Puck: Instead of one divided political party, we now realize that there are two in this county. Democrats, who since 1896 have listened without effective come-back to the taunts of Republicans, may now sit back and watch the Republican split with delight of the fiendish variety. It was long coming, but it came. It still requires effort to comprehend that President Taft's hottest shot is not directed at the Democrats, but at members of his own party; but gradually one gets accustomed to novelty, and then it is easy and pleasant to note what a change is taking place. Without any steering or jockeying, a new party is forming itself as surely as water seeks a level. It won't hold national conventions for some years yet, but it will make history when it does hold them. We won't go into details as to the new party's make-up, but when the sheep are separated finally from the goats, Democrats of the Tom Ryan-August Belmont type and Republicans of the Aldrich-Cannon-Ballinger school will vote the same ticket. They will form the opposition.

A New Sin From Paris.

Chicago Evening Post: On Saturday Mr. Roosevelt gave us an eighth deadly sin—in Paris, appropriately enough—and the name of it is "tepidity."

"There is little use," he said, "for the being whose tepid soul knows nothing of the great and generous emotion of the men who ride the storm." And, again; "If a man can view his own country and all other countries upon the same levil of tepid indifference, it is wise to distrust him."

Over against the strenuous life must must set the tepid life. One more harmless word has been plucked out of the dictionary by the colonel and put to work preaching the gospel of the Man of Action for all it is worth.

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Chicago Herald: "Why are you so dejected, old man? Has the stock market been going against you?"

"No, confound it, my daughter's gone and married a fellow who has to smoke a cigarette before he puts his trousers on in the morning."

New York Sun: Knicker—How large is their suburban place?

Becker—They have folding beds for the flowers.

Life: "Look here, doctor, how much are you going to charge me for this operation?"

"Oh, you've got enough to worry you now without facing that."

St. Louis Times: "Jones always seems to be looking into the future."

"Yes. He bought a house on easy terms and a piano on the installment plan."

Chicago News: Little Willie—Say, pa, what is wordly wisdom?

Pa—Worldly wisdom, my son, is a perfect knowledge of the failings of our neighbors.

Pele Mele: Customer—I'm going to a masked ball, and I want something that will completely disguise me.

Costumer—Certainly sir, I will give you something nice.

Chicago Tribune: "Hello! Is this the information editor?"

"Yes."

"Who is president of Nicaragua?"

"Wait a minute, and I'll—"

"But I want to know who's president now—not who's going to be president a minute from now."

Princeton Tiger: "When a woman marries and then divorces her husband inside of a week what would you call it?"

"Taking his name in vain?"

Detroit Free Press: "How many times have you been married?"

"Three, but—"

"Madam," he interrupted, "I'm taking the census, not proposing."

The Optimist.

The census man is with us to incense us
With questions about marriage and divorce,
The comet speeding gayly,
Reeling off a million daily,
May quite quench us if it cares to change its course!

Yet I notice that the dandelions are blooming
And a robin sang a song for me today,
So you see I have a measure
Both of treasure and of pleasure
To keep the rich and happy on the way!

The time to clean the house is hard
upon us,
I wonder who invented such a fashion!
Mop and broom will make us roam,
Far as possible from home,
Cold baked beans will heat our tempers to a passion.

Yet the sky is mighty blue and beaming softly,
And no longer need the overcoat be worn,
So the law of compensation
Keeps a-balancing creation
And there's never much excuse to be forlorn!

The lawn's in need of mowing and the ice bill
Casts off its swaddling clothes and starts to grow—
There's the annual vexation
About where to spend vacation
And the cost of living makes our earnings go.

Yet the lovers walk at evening in the starlight,
From their looks I think they have discovered heaven,
And the children can get out
In the air to run and shout,
So you see in every lump of loss
there's leaven!

Why, it's not so very long since we,
as youngsters,
Saw the shiny side to all that came along!
Made the most of common things—
Mud and sticks and grapevine
swings;
Throttled every sigh and turned it
out a song!

And it won't be very long till we, as children,
Leave the toys of life to deal with bigger dreams,
So I think it better far,
We should learn, while on this star,
That the shadow's never quite so dark as seems!

Duluth Star: The Duluth Herald celebrated its seventy-seventh birthday recently. It celebrated its one hundred seventy-seventh consciously as becoming a great daily. It celebrated the event like big men and great men celebrate such event in their own lives, with modesty and becoming greatness.

The evening paper, by a policy peculiar to itself, has gained a confidence and place in the hearts of the people that few daily papers enjoy. The Evening Herald is an independent paper with Democratic tendencies and a policy on social, economic, industrial, commercial and religious matters that appeals to the best in men. The writers, news and editorial, on The Herald are all bright, active young men who co-operate with the management and are imbued with no individual and collective pride and spirit that materially counts in making The Herald a sort of confidential agent for the people's best interests in Northern Minnesota.

The Duluth Star joins the great fraternal army of the we fly and daily press of Minnesota in wishing The Herald a long and continued life of usefulness and prosperity.

THE RAILROADS AND DULUTH.

The Herald's attention is called to some very sound and [illegible] observations on the way the railroads are treating Duluth, published in the Duluth Journal. Here they are:

"The city of Duluth is surrounded by natural advantages which ought to make her the leading city of the Northwest. Built from water level on her front yard [illegible] as many European kings do, she has a fine water front yard producing [illegible] the world's commerce. She is connected by the best farming country in the world, and has a population of [illegible] people, and the most thrifty in the [illegible] Duluth's most fault what it ought to be, [illegible] the railroads [illegible] against Duluth in [illegible] the prosperity [illegible] and they are still [illegible] for carrying coal to the city [illegible] at the same rate as those coal [illegible] Twin Cities, and [illegible] would have the Twin [illegible] same policy as do the [illegible] about 10 cents for a 2 cent [illegible] Duluth to St. [illegible] the charge would be 2 cents. [illegible] three times as [illegible] to ship them [illegible] The govern's talk [illegible] good, but its future [illegible] in agitation until the [illegible] and decent service is [illegible]

[illegible] of transportation not only affects [illegible] every farm and every industry in [illegible] the present time every town [illegible] is forced to pay [illegible] the wealth and population [illegible] is largely to the wealth created [illegible] to the treasury of the [illegible] as the waters of the Mis- [illegible] but with this difference: [illegible] much and population to two [illegible] and better system of [illegible] Duluth merchants [illegible] against the railroads [illegible] Duluth in the [illegible] Twin Cities, and [illegible] would have the Twin [illegible]

THE LOCAL ASSESSOR.

The [illegible] commission, recently discovered that some [illegible] assessors for one purpose or another, were in the habit [illegible] unduly entering property from the assessment rolls. The commission promptly filed charges with the governor [illegible] of the assessors who were accused as prompt [illegible] charges were served with copies of the charges against them. This placed a further guilt and saved the state the trouble of proving the charges and thereby [illegible] the foundation of being removed from office.

It is worth while noting that all of these cases were in the southern part of the state, and that the northern part is thus far clean of suspicion.

This incident gives an idea of the power of the local assessors, and of the necessity of great care on the part of the people in selecting them. Joined with other reasons, it also offers good argument for doing away with the local assessor and putting the work of assessment under the county system.

With the local assessor rests, to a very large degree, the question whether all local personal property is to pay its share of the public expense or not. When an assessor lets one of his friends off by neglecting to return his property for assessment, the share that man ought to pay falls on the rest of the community. The same thing is true when property is under-assessed through favoritism or corruption.

It is true that the work of the assessor is reviewed by higher authorities; but he is the man on the ground, and if he fails the whole system fails. Yet in too many cases the office of assessor is carelessly bestowed, though it ought to be placed more carefully than almost any other local office.

The tax commission, in a bulletin just issued, says: "The commission is earnestly trying to have all property in the state which is not exempt from taxation listed and taxed, and whenever for any reason an assessor fails to list and assess any considerable amount of property in his district and the fact becomes known to the commission, steps are immediately taken to have the property in the district reassessed and the offending assessor removed from office. The commission feels that in no other way can a square deal be obtained for the honest taxpayers of the state. All the members of the commission stoutly maintain that a great majority of the assessors are honest men, bent only on the faithful discharge of their duties; but unfortunately among 2,500 officers there are always found a number of incompetent and unworthy men. Some assessors seem more intent on securing a re-election than they do on the proper discharge of their official duties, and this leads to the pernicious practice of 'standing in' and obtaining the support of voters by listing and assessing only a part of their property. It was work of this kind that led the commission to file with the governor the charges above referred to. The commission asserts that the vice has become all too common, and that it intends to use every means in its power to stamp it out."

The commission will be justifying its existence by such action along that line.

One of the chief weaknesses of the present system is that the local assessor is too close to the assessed. Politics or friendship may lead to under-assessment or enmity may lead to over-assessment. There should be a county assessor in each county, to appoint all assessors and be responsible for their work. Then, with the tax commission to check up the county assessors in the common interests of the state, the work would be better done and the burden of public expense more justly distributed.

MISSIONARIES AND PESSIMISTS.

"Woodlander's" contribution to the discussion, started the other evening by "Lakesider", on the benefits of foreign missions, calls our interest in the debate, and we feel it to extricate ourselves from it as speedily as may be, little ashamed to have engaged in so profitless a business. These two advocates of reaction and opposition to Christianity and civilization are carrying on in a way to earn the pretty suburbs from which they have taken their names and in which such spirits have no place, reputations like those of Sodom and Gomorrah; and by don't deserve it. Let "Lakeside" and "Woodlander" return to the discussion of home gardening and prize vegetables, for which they are better fitted.

There is entertainment—to the writers, at least,—in the allow flippancy of "Lakesider" and the putrid pessimism of "Woodlander," but a enlightenment. There is time for all things worth while, but there is no time for argument with triflers who seek to make a vase for barbarism. What's the use in talking to a person like "Woodlander," who says of the "good old days,"—which were the worst old days the world will ever see,—that 'there was none of the meek, 'turn the other cheek' spirit that lets graft run its course and corruption go unpunished?' Let "Woodlander" read history and the current news for his instruction. Let him read of the days when humanity was nothing but a bleeding, bruised pavement, over which the greedy and the powerful marched in horrid triumphs; when the common people were nothing but despised material for armies and vassalages. Let him read Mark Twain's tremendous satire, "Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," and reflect upon the stupid, humble oaf whose body and soul and every human possession, including wife and daughter, were the chattels of his baron. That oaf represented the common people of the "good old days"; and his numb and sluggish mind did not for centuries conceive the thought of resentment.

This debasement of humanity ran down even into Christian days, for this reason: for a long time the world looked upon Christianity simply as a means of getting to heaven, not as a means of living decently and comfortable in this world. Its splendid message, therefore, was distorted and its glorious light obscured. Hardly yet has the world realized that Christianity is not so much a recipe for pleasant living after death as it is a means of bringing happiness to this life.

Recognizing, however, the futility of reasoning with those who hold a brief for barbarism and irreligion, we hasten to put an emphatic period to the debate.

THE TUBERCULOUS COW.

It is to be hoped that the discussion over the respective rights of the state, the city and the milkman in the matter of tuberculous cows will not develop the fact that there is a twilight zone, between the functions of state and city, in which the owner of a tainted cow can continue to milk her and sell the milk to an unsuspecting public. The main consideration should not be the rights of the state, or the city or of the milkman, but the right of the public to a pure supply of milk. Even though it is disputed that milk from tuberculous cows may give contagion to human beings, and even though there may be a question as to the condition of any cow, in the interest of the public no chances should be taken. Somewhere, either in state or city, should be the power to see that the public gets the benefit of any such doubt.

JAIL FOR SPEED FIENDS.

Judge Winslow's announcement that hereafter he will impose jail sentences, not fines, upon automobile drivers convicted of reckless speeding, will be warmly approved by the public. Even at the risk of spoiling some of the fun of owning automobiles, the public should be protected, and no better way to protect it can be imagined than a strict adherence to Judge Winslow's policy. Automobile owners often seem to forget that the public got here and laid out the streets before the automobile was invented, and that the coming of this exhilarating means of locomotion for those who have money or credit took no rights away from the public.

Nine elephants ran wild in Danville, Ill. One Danville man has started an elephant running wild all over the country and it begins to look as though its keepers cannot recapture and pacify it.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

THE FLORIDA EVERGLADES.

To the Editor of the Herald:

Just a few words about the Florida Everglades. Upon my return from the Everglades last week my attention was called to an article in The Herald, warning people not to invest any money in the Everglade lands. I have made a personal investigation of this proposition and will say that the man who wrote that article either never saw the Everglades or had some other motive in view, whereby he would reap some benefit. There are a great many people here who have contracts for ten or twenty acres and have paid $50 or $100 on them, and upon reading that article decided to give up their contracts and lose what they had paid on them.

I think it a shame for a man to write anything like that and have these people drop their holdings in such a good thing as the Everglades. I am not selling land, but I have heart enough in me to sympathize with the poor, and will encourage all my friends and acquaintances to get some of this land. I have been there and know what I am talking about, when I say the man that has a contract for land in the glades has something that will make him big money in a short time. My advice is hold on to your contracts and get more if you can.

HUGO E. MODIN.

(Note—The article referred to did not warn people not to invest any money in the Everglades. It stated that there were some meritorious projects and some that were little better than swindles, and warned investors to thoroughly investigate before buying. —The Editor.)

THAT MISSIONARY WRY-NESS.

To the Editor of The Herald:

One of the most interesting things to me that has appeared in the Open Court in a long time was the letter published under the caption, "Why Is a Missionary," and I naturally found much of interest in The Herald's reply to that letter. Perhaps the truth lies between the extremes of opinion, advanced in those two articles, but this has been called a questioning age, and I fear I have been seriously bitten by the microbe that arouses the spirit of wanting to know.

Before I begin, however, on the really apropos part of this communication, I want to express a hope that my venture into the Open Court will not expose me to a fire of editorial satire and adjectival near-abuse. As I understand the purpose of the Open Court it is intended for free expressions of opinion.

Now, there are many people, even here in Duluth, who have opinions much like those of Mr. Lakesider, and much as it grieves me to have to confess it, some of us who live in Woodland find ourselves on the same side with him. But perhaps it won't hurt for both parts of the city to agree on something once in awhile.

But what appealed to me was this: In your editorial you speak of the wonderful progress made by civilization, which you appear to classify with christianity, and you contrast this with the conditions found in barbarous nations. We have, to be sure, many things that earlier nations had not—electric light, telephones, steam engines, and common councils. But we have no historical corner on civilization, for we find quite as great accomplishments in many ways among the ancient Greeks and Romans, in ancient Egypt and in other countries, wrought out long before christianity existed. Do you mean to imply that Edison, Fulton, and the other inventors whose work has regarded the race would not have made their discoveries had it not been for Christianity? If so, it seems to me that you claim too much.

Aside from these advantages that spring from the material creations of men I challenge you to show wherein we of today are better off than our barbarous ancestors. We have a social organization which is unlike any that have had, but is it any better? When crime against society was committed in those days it was punished summarily; today it often goes unpunished, if the legal advisor of the criminal is sharp enough to lay his finger on the technicality that will free its client. And once such a miscarriage of justice occurs, the matter is over, and the wrongdoer goes free. We have our councils and legislatures and congress or parliament, where they had one man the supreme head of the nation; but are we better off? If crooks and grafters get into power we let them stay there until they are beaten at the polls, and then thank goodness that they have gone.

Under the earlier system an official who showed himself so corrupt as to rouse popular indignation was quickly removed—and wasn't left in a position to work some new graft on the community, either. Under our system, whatever is done in the way of public work is managed by some underling, as a rule, far removed from the head. In earlier days those officials were personally responsible to the head of the state or tribe, and were made to feel and realize that responsibility.

We have, of course, scientific methods of doing things that our ancestors knew nothing about, but I do not believe that they are due to Christianity. Rather, they are the outcome of the race from its study of nature and natural forces, and I claim that their development might have been even more rapid under the earlier form of government than under ours, since any means of increasing the wealth of the people meant the increase of the wealth of the head of the nation. This would have led to the scientist's receiving support and encouragement in place of the mockery and abuse which now falls to his lot until he has proved his point a million times over.

As to the general happiness of the people that, if anything, was greater under the former conditions than it is now. There was no such thing as heart-breaking labor without hope of securing it. The answer was the anti-poverty, factory-built caste system—in everything it was the survival of the fittest. There was none of the meek 'turn-the-other-cheek' spirit that lets graft run its course and corruption go unpunished. It takes even strong people to get out and right them, and if such one did, the world condemned him as a crank. He was not encouraged to call in the police and stretch all over again. A peasant's life was worth about as much as an honest man's political chances were today, and whoever had pluck and brains enough to get to the top got there.

But I must stop. I'm on a subject that might easily keep me going all night, and I'll not bore you or my unknown friend Lakesider with any more of this. But I do want to say to him, through the Open Court, that I believe he has reason on his side, and that if we could trade off some of this present day condition for half the same amount of what we have been taught to call "barbarism," the world would be a heap sight better off and the millenium that much nearer.

Teach the heathen! Teach them what? In The Herald's account of the recent riots in China was the statement that all the foreign buildings in one town were destroyed, and it enumerated them as three missionary buildings, the Standard Oil company's tanks and the International Tobacco company's warehouses. And if truth were told there probably was a supply of liquor there somewhere, too. We teach the heathen about hell and the devil, and we knock down his gods and stamp on them, and when he bravely defies ours we consign him to eternal damnation. We tell him to submit to offense and cruelty, whereas he knows that that is but the way to make them breed the more. In short, we try to take away the real life he is leading and force upon him a miserable, sham existence that reeks with artificiality, is putrid with the maggots of corruption and rotting with deceptions that we haven't the courage to thrust out. Then we give him the telephone and telegraph (both controlled by a trust), the electric light (also controlled by a trust), the railroad (as good as controlled by a trust), scientific methods of doing harder work and more of it than he ever dreamed of (which he can employ if he has money enough to do so), and we set ourselves up on a high pedestal and tell him to look at us and be happy.

Yes, in spite of your spirited editorial of tonight, I feel inclined to ask you again, with Mr. Lakesider, "Why is a Missionary?"

PUDD'NHEAD WILSON'S MAXIMS.

(By Mark Twain.)

In the first place God made idiots; this was for practice. Then He made school boards.

In statesmanship get the formalities right; never mind about the moralities.

There isn't a parallel of latitude but thinks it would have been the equator if it had had its rights.

There is no character, howsoever good and fine, but it can be destroyed by ridicule, howsoever poor and witless. Observe the ass, for instance. His character is about perfect, he is the choicest spirit among all the humbler animals, yet see what ridicule has brought him to. Instead of feeling complimented when we are called an ass, we are left in doubt.

Tell the truth or trump—but get the trick.

Adam was human—this explains it all. He did not want the apple for the apple's sake, he wanted it only because it was forbidden. The mistake was in not forbidding the serpent; then he would have eaten the serpent.

Adam and Eve had many advantages, but the principal one was that they escaped teething.

There is this trouble about special providences, namely: There is so often a doubt as to which party was intended to be the beneficiary. In the case of the children, the bears and the prophet, the bears got more real satisfaction out of the episode than the prophet did, because they got the children.

Let us endeavor to so live that when we come to die, even the undertaker will be sorry.

Why is it we rejoice at a birth and grieve at a funeral? It is because we are not the person involved.

October: This is one of the few peculiar dangerous months to speculate in. Stocks in. The others are July, January, September, April, November, May, March, June, December, August and February.

When I reflect upon the number of disagreeable people who I know have gone to a better world, I am moved to lead a different life.

Even popularity can be overdone. In Rome, along at first, you are full of regrets that Michael Angelo died, but by and by you only regret that you didn't see him do it.

Nothing so needs reforming as other people's habits.

O Lyric Master!

Out of the great wise silence, brooding
and latent so long,
Burst on the world, O Master—sing us
the big man-song!

Have we not piled up cities, gutted
the iron hills,
Schooled with our dream of lightning and steam, giving them thought
and wills?

Have we not laughed at Distance, belting
the earth with rails?
Are we a herd of weaklings? Nay,
we are masterful males!

We are the poets of matter! Latent in
steel and stone,
Latent in engines and cities and ships,
see how our songs have grown!

Long have we hammered and chiseled,
hewn and foleted, until—
Lo, 'neath the wondering noon of the World the visible Epic of Will!

Was it not built as the Masters build,
lyric with pain and joy?
Say, is it less than the twin-built Rome,
less than the song-reared Troy?

Less than an Argive wrangle, warrior
and wife in a fuss?
Those you sang in the ancient time—
Oh what will you sing for us?

Breathless we halt in our labor; shout
us a song to cheer;
Something that's swift as a usher, keen
for the mark as a spear.

Full of the echoes of battle—souls crying
up from the dust!
Hungry we cried for our singers—our singers have flung us a crust!

Choked with the smoke of the battle,
staggering, weary with blows;
We cried for a gourd of music; they flung us the dew of a rose!

Gewgaw goblets they gave us, jeweled
and polished and fine,
And filled with the ears of a weakling;
Oh, God! for a gourd—and wine!

O big wise lyric Master, you who have seen us befool,
Molding the mind with our tears and blood into the things we willed—

Soon shall your brooding be over, the dream shall be widened, and then—
Thunderous out of the silence—hurl
us the Song of Men!

—John G. Neihardt.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Too many matchmakers spoil the romance.

A man can admire himself for the way his wife forgives his failings.

Life is full of pain, a fact even gentlemen hanged, as men get married.

When a girl has a married sister it's a sign she is going to try to run her love affairs for her.

A woman believes in love ahead of everything else, so that when it comes out behind she can still go on believing.

Forever and a Day.

I little know or care
If the blackbird on the bough
Be piping all the air
With his soft crescendo now;
For she is gone away
And when she went she took
The springtime in her look,
The peachblow on her cheek,
The laughter from the brook,
The blue from out the Maz—
And what she calls a week
Is forever and a day.

It's little that I mind
How the blossoms, pink and white,
Atoning touch of wind
Fall a-trembling with delight;
For in the leafy lane,
Beneath the garden boughs,
And through the silent house
One thing alone I seek,
Until she come again
The May is not the May,
And what she calls a week
Is forever and a day.
—Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

Disarmament.

Portland Telegram: We may build battle ships without limit as to displacement, tonnage or caliber and weight of guns but with the hatpin it is a case of disarmament.

Be Strong!

Be strong!
We are not here to play, to dream, to drift,
We have hard work to do, and loads to lift,
Shun not the struggle; face it. 'Tis God's gift.

Be strong!
Say not the days are evil—Who's to blame?
And fold the hands and acquiesce—O shame!
Stand up, speak out, and bravely, in God's name.

Be strong!
It matters not how deep intrenched the wrong,
How hard the battle goes, the day, how long,
Faint not, fight on; tomorrow comes the song.
—Maltbie D. Babcock.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1890.

•••Articles of incorporation of the Stone Iron company have been filed. The officers of the company are: George C. Stone, president; Joseph Sellwood, vice president; W. H. Hibbard, secretary and treasurer. These gentlemen and James B. Goggie constitute the board of directors. The company begins business May 1, with a capital of $500,000. A portion of the property to be developed is on the line of the Duluth & Iron Range railroad and is forty-seven miles north of Two Harbors, on the Mesabi range. The initial development has been done by M. Goggie.

•••Referee Hanks in the quo warrants proceedings in the case of the state against the officers of Park Point, has filed his findings. In this action the result hinged in the location of the mouth of the St. Louis river, whether at the entry or between Connors and Rices points, or at Grassy point. In the referee's decision the mouth of the river is placed at the entry between Minnesota and Wisconsin points, and is held that the town of Park Point is included within the limits and boundaries of the city of Duluth.

•••Hugh H. Price of Black River Falls, Wis., one of the youngest men who ever held a seat in congress, is in Duluth on lumber business, accompanied by F. H. Elmore.

•••A portrait of the late A. T. C. Pierson has been received by the Rose Croix commandery, Council of Kadosh. It will occupy a place on the walls of the new lodge room.

•••John D. Gill has gone to California to look up titles to important realty in this vicinity.

•••Col. George E. Welles, secretary of the board of trade, is expected back from Chicago next week. He has been there for medical treatment, and is much improved in health.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

This Country Needs It, Too.

Montevideo Leader: The enthusiasm with which Mr. Roosevelt is received everywhere he goes in the old world, is but an expression of the spirit of democracy that exists there as here. His presence there gives the Democracy of the East an opportunity to pay homage to the Democracy of the West. To those people he is the true representative of a truely free government, and that is the kind of government they need and are working for.

No Danger of That.

Swanville News: With the retirement of Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, the retreating to his Danville, Ill., home of "Uncle" Joe Cannon, the apparent defeat of Congressman James A. Tawney of the First district, Cal. Roosevelt home from the African jungles and Halley's comet navigating in unseen space for the next three-quarters of a century, newspapers are threatened to soon become dry as a tomb-stumstick on the day following Thanksgiving.

And Taft Did It.

Hutchinson Leader: "The income tax amendment," says an exchange, has thus far been ratified by Alabama, South Carolina, Illinois, Oklahoma and Kentucky, and been turned down by Virginia. There is a possibility that the proposition will be defeated. The matter of referring the question to the states was merely a subterfuge to prevent the last congress from passing an income tax law which might delay the paying of an income tax for several years even though enough states prove to be in favor of it. It requires only the adverse vote of the legislatures of twelve states to defeat the question.

Any Ticket to Get Results.

Princeton Union: An exchange remarks that the Socialist victory in Milwaukee is due to the fact that 7,000 Republicans and 4,000 Democrats voted the ticket. Why did they? That is the most important point. Because they were disgusted with the rotten municipal administration—the corrupt machine manipulated by the tools of the interests. Hence no one can blame them for desiring a change. We consider the Republicans and Democrats who voted for Seidl very sensible citizens.

Providence Never Misses Fire.

Greenville Herald Star: What we lose in fruits and vegetables, we stand to win back in an increased grain yield. This is our beautiful faith in Providence; She fires no blank cartridges.

Failed on Nerve.

Virginia Enterprise: The Payne-Aldrich tariff may be "the best ever," but President Taft failed on nerve when it came to carrying the news to Indiana.

What Do They Take Us For.

Mega Times: The people cannot be fooled all the time and the continued attempt by administrative leaders to compare us that the Payne-Aldrich tariff law is a fulfillment of campaign promises is an insult to the intelligence of American citizenship.

Only One Right Thing to Do.

Sauk Center Herald: Will some one kindly predict what Minnesota people are going to do about the tariff when their state convention meets? The question cannot be dodged. Will that lucky fellow Indiana's lead? Please ask something easy.

Work Versus Worry.

New York Weekly: It is a well-understood fact that it is not work that kills, but worry, and from this text some most sensible and profitable discourses have been preached during recent years. The conclusion of the whole matter is this: Brain work is conducive to health and longevity, while brain worry causes disease and shortens life. The truth of this statement, and its application to what we see around us, are evident enough; yet it is well that such subjects should be continually discussed. A life of intellectual labor, although severe, like that performed by the judges of our highest courts, or by scholars and persons devoted to literary pursuits, is unmixed with excitement, and followed with regularity, is not only a large life, but it is seen also to promote bodily health and long life on the other hand, mental cares attended with suppressed emotions and occupations which from their nature are subject to great vicissitudes of fortune and constant anxiety break down the lives of the strongest. Every one has seen a class of men whose early mental training was deficient, and to whom the writing of memoranda was irksome, engaged in middle life in great undertakings, and using the memory with a mass of complicated business accounts simply because they could more easily remember than write. Their power for memory for a certain kind of facts is often really astonishing, but the breakdown is at last too much, and they die before their time.

Speed the Day.

Park Rapids: Instead of one divided political party we now realize that there are two in this county. Democrats, who since 1896 have listened without effective come-back to the taunts of Republicans, may now sit back and watch the Republican split with delight of the fiendish variety. It was long coming, but it came. It still requires expert to comprehend that President Taft's hottest scrap is not directed at the Democrats, but at members of his own party; but gradually one gets accustomed to novelty, and then it is a pleasant to note what a change is taking place. Without any steering or jockeying, a new party is forming itself as surely as water seeks a level. It won't hold national conventions for some years yet, but it will make history when it does hold them. We won't go into details as to the new party's make-up, but when the sheep are separated flatly from the goats, Democrats of the Tom Ryan-August Belmont type and Republicans of the Aldrich-Cannon-Ballinger school will vote the same ticket. They will form the opposition.

A New Sin From Paris.

Chicago Evening Post: On Saturday Mr. Roosevelt gave us an eighth deadly sin—in Paris, appropriately enough—and the name of it is "tepidity."

"There is little use," he said, "for the being whose tepid soul knows nothing of the great and generous emotion of the men who ride the storm." And, again: "If a man can view his own country and all other countries upon the same level of tepid indifference, it is wise to distrust him."

Over against the strenuous life must must set the tepid life. One more harmless word has been plucked out of the dictionary by the colonel and put to work preaching the gospel of the Man of Action for all it is worth.

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Chicago Herald: "Why are you so dejected, old man? Has the stock market been going against you?"

"No, confound it, my daughter's gone and married a fellow who has to smoke a cigarette before he puts his trousers on in the morning."

New York Sun: Knicker—How large is their suburban place?

Bocker—They have folding beds for the flowers.

Life: "Look here, doctor, how much are you going to charge me for this operation?"

"Oh, you've got enough to worry you now without facing that."

St. Louis Times: "Jones always seems to be looking into the future."

"Yes. He bought a house on easy terms and a plan on the installment plan."

Chicago News: Little Willie—Say, pa, what is wordly wisdom?

Pa—Worldly wisdom, my son, is a perfect knowledge of the failings of our neighbors.

Pele Mele: Customer—I'm going to a masked ball, and I want something that will completely disguise me.

Costumer—Certainly sir. I will give you something nice.

Chicago Tribune: "Hello! Is this the information editor?"

"Yes."

"Who is president of Nicaragua?"

"Wait a minute, and I'll see."

"But I want to know who's president now—not who's going to be president a minute from now."

Princeton Tiger: "When a woman marries and then divorces her husband inside of a week what would you call it?"

"Taking his name in vain."

Detroit Free Press: "How many times have you been married?"

"Three, but—"

"Miriam," he interrupted, "I'm taking the census, not necrology."

The Optimist.

The census man is with us to harass us
With questions about marriage and divorce,
The comet speeding gayly,
Reeling off a million lays,
May quite quench us if it cares to
change its course;

Yet I notice that the dandelions are blooming
And a robin sang a song for me today.
So you see I have a measure
Both of treasure and of pleasure
To keep the rich and happy on the way;

The time to clean the house is hard
upon us,
I wonder who invented such a fashion!
Moy and broom will make us roam,
Far as possible from home,
Cold baked beans will beat our tempers to a passion.

Yet the sky is mighty blue and beaming softly,
And no longer need the overcoat be worn,
So the law of compensation
Keeps a-balancing creation
And there's never much excuse to be forlorn!

The lawn's in need of mowing and the ice bill
Casts off its swindling clothes and starts to grow,—
There's the annual vexation
About where to spend vacation
And the cost of living makes our earnings go.

Yet the lovers walk at evening in the starlight,
From their books I think they have a glimpse of heaven,
And the children can get out
In the air to run and shout,
So you see in every lump of loss
there's leaven!

Why, it's not so very long since we,
as youngsters,
Saw the shiny side to all that came along,
Made the most of common things—
Mud and sticks and grapevine
swings;
Throttled every sigh and turned it
out a song.

And it won't be very long till we, as children,
Leave the toys of life to deal with bigger dreams.
So I think it better far,
We should learn, while on this star,
That the shadows never quite so seems.
—Leigh Mitchell Hodges in North American.

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

NEWS AND VIEWS OF POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

Leaders in Duluth Republicanism have been giving considerable thought of late to the probable make-up of the county ticket this fall, and the trend of all the talk has been that the ranges must have better representation.

It is a fact that in the past there has been no attempt to deprive the ranges of adequate representation in this respect. The range communities are comparatively small and widely scattered, so that it has been practically impossible for the ranges effectively to make known just what they might want. The feeling seems to be that all the range towns need to do it to put forward for nomination men who are qualified for the places to which they aspire, and Duluth will be quick to demonstrate its desire and intent to work in complete harmony with that part of the county.

Range men now have two elective county offices, that of register of deeds and county superintendent of schools. It is suggested that at least two more places on the county ticket should be conceded to the ranges.

The Duluth leaders are determined that, so far as it lies in their power to prevent by persuasion, there will be no Republican in the field to oppose Judge Hughes' re-election to the district bench. Judge Hughes was appointed to the bench by the late Governor Johnson and he has done excellent work as a member of the judiciary.

The attitude of the local Republicans toward range candidates is the same now as it has been in the past, they say. Duluth wants to be fair, just and generous to its neighbors, for the interests of Duluth and of the range towns are so intimately related that what is bad for one or good for one will be bad for the other or good for the other in like measure. County officers should be men fitted to discharge the duties devolving upon them, and so long as they are so qualified the people don't care in what part of the county they may live.

In connection with the talk of county nominations, it is rumored that there may be a lively three-cornered fight for the office of county attorney. John B. Norton, the incumbent, who is serving his second term, has come forward as a candidate for renomination and re-election. Charles E. Adams, who was Norton's opponent for the nomination two years ago, is expected to announce his candidacy in the near future. James P. Boyle of Eveleth, who has been boomed for the place, may yet decide to get into the contest.

If this fight comes off, developments will be watched with much interest. All of the three possible contenders have important elements of strength and loyal friends who would work strenuously in their behalf. With two candidates residing in Duluth and the third on the range, it might be that the range man, with his personal following outside the city working for him and standing by him at the primaries, would carry off the prize, the Duluth vote being split by the two Duluth candidates.

There is not a very strong probability that Boyle will enter the race, however. He was in Duluth last week and, it is reported, told a close personal friend he had decided not to file. It's early in the game, though, and the range man may be induced to try for the place.

In the last election Adams gave Norton a very close run, the margin credited to Norton on the official canvas being only half a dozen votes. A recount was secured, and in one precinct, some sixty votes that should have been counted for Norton were found in Adams' tally. The contest was dropped at this stage.

There seems to be practically no possibility that George R. Laybourn will be opposed for the Republican nomination for senator from the Fifty-first district.

The latest development in the situation was an attempt to induce Watson S. Moore to enter the field as a county option candidate. Friends, who are interested in temperance legislation, labored with him without avail. He refused to consider the proposal.

Mr. Moore explained to his friends that business interests precluded the possibility of his filing for the nomination, and later in an interview he said that under no circumstances would he consider a proposal that he try for office.

A. G. McKnight did think of seeking the nomination some time ago, but he gave up the idea. Mr. McKnight also is a county option man. Z. D. Scott has been mentioned for the place, but he doesn't want it. Mr. Moore's refusal to run seems to finish the list.

No opposition to the return to the legislature of Senator Pugh has developed, nor is it expected.

There have been no positive developments in the Forty-ninth senatorial district, where P. R. Vall of Virginia will be a candidate for renomination and re-election. Dr. Weirick of Hibbing who has been expected to announce in formal terms that he is a candidate for the place, has not done so up to date, but it is confidently expected that he will get into the race. There is an undercurrent of sentiment detected here and there which portends trouble for Senator Vall if the Hibbing mayor takes the plunge, say some observers of things political. Indeed, there are many who frankly declare their belief that if Dr. Weirick will come out into the open at the proper time as a candidate he will win the nomination by a comfortable majority.

Comment on the suggested candidacy of Supt. A. J. McGuire of the Northeast Minnesota Experiment farm for the state senate is general in the Fifty-second district and the gist of it is that it's all right as a suggestion, but wouldn't do as a political fact.

It is felt that McGuire is needed where he is now, rather than in the legislature, and he feels that way about it himself. Of course, he probably would like to have a hand in molding legislation, because he knows what this part of the state needs, perhaps as thoroughly as does any man, but the Grand Rapids experimental farm is his only true love.

"Mr. McGuire would not get our vote," says the Itasca Iron News of Bovey," if he were running against a defunct candidate for Fergus Falls, instead of a man so well fitted for the work that Northern Minnesota is up against as is Senator Gunn. Mr. McGuire is too good a man for politics.

* * * He is peculiarly fitted as an agriculturist and Senator Gunn is peculiarly fitted for looking after the interests of Northern Minnesota at this time."

John N. Kirsch, formerly publisher of the Crookston Journal, and A. L. Berkland, who have formed a partnership and will launch a new paper at Crookston, are expected to mix in politics with a great deal of energy when they have their plant ready for use. Just where they will be at is not definitely known, but it seems that they negotiated with Postmaster Steenerson for the purchase of his recently acquired Press and were unable to reach a mutually satisfactory basis. Whether these negotiations had to do merely with the question of price is not made clear.

The least sign of hedging on the part of the Republican party in Minnesota when it comes to pass upon the Payne-Aldrich tariff law will result in disaster, declares the Foley Independent. This is the Republicans' year for hedging, however.

The Itasca County Independent prints this boost for two popular Duluth men who have been mentioned for important offices:

"With John Lind for governor and William E. McEwen for lieutenant governor, the Democrats have a winning team, and if the balance of their state ticket is chosen with as good judgment, it would not be surprising to see a goodly lunch of Democratic tenants in the big offices at the statehouse; and with Andrew Nelson as Democratic candidate for congress, there might be something doing in the Eighth congressional district."

And the Virginia Enterprise says:

"Andrew Nelson enjoys a broad acquaintance throughout the district, is recognized not only as a man of ability, but of sterling worth, as one whose word is good, and should he be given the call to lead the anti-Cannon hosts in the Eighth congressional district of Minnesota it is not improbable that Uncle Joe would find an active opponent in the seat now occupied by Mr. Miller, whose passive opposition has been very pronounced in the press reports, but whose vote has been recorded in several instances in favor of the capitalistic machine and all that went with it."

John R. Mehling, according to the Virginia Enterprise, is being talked of as a possible opponent of Sheriff Bates this year, as he has been before. "He would at least hold his own," remarks the Enterprise.

Best Treatment For Colds.

Most ordinary colds will yield to the simplest treatment," says the Chicago Tribune, "moderative laxatives, hot foot baths, a free prespiration and an avoidance of exposure to cold and wet after treatment is simple, it requires considerable trouble, and the one adopting it must remain in doors for a day or two, or a fresh cold is almost sure to be contracted, and in many instances pneumonia follows. Is it not better to pin your faith to an old reliable preparation like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, that is famous for its cures of colds and can always be depended upon? For sale by all druggists.

MILLIONAIRE KILLED BY BED.

Folding Structure Crushes Him in New York Boarding House.

New York, April 28.—Henry Willington Smith, millionaire paper manufacturer of Lee, Mass., and delegate to the Republican national convention in 1880, was crushed to death in a folding bed at a boarding house in this city. With him at the time was an elderly woman who was slightly injured, and who has subsequently disappeared. She was known at the boarding house as his wife, but investigation showed that Mrs. Smith had not left her home in Lee.

First reports of the accident gave the victim's name as William Smith of Waterbury, Conn., but a brother-in-law of Smith, who resides here, identified the body.

The undertaker who took the body from the house refused to say a word, declaring that he had been instructed by the family to observe absolute secrecy.

ONE HUNDRED THIRTY TONS OF DYNAMITE GO OFF.

Victoria, B. C., April 28.—A terrific explosion took place on a dynamite lighter in the Kobe, Japan, harbor, on April 7, according to news brought here today by the steamer Awa Maru. More than 15,000 buildings were damaged, two persons killed and eighty-three injured.

Several steamers were quickly moved when the dynamite-laden lighter was seen to be on fire. The explosion ignited 130 tons of dynamite and three other lighters, holding fifty tons more, were sunk by the upheaval, without exploding.

Increase in Advertising.

New York, April 28.—The report of the president of the Daily Newspaper club, comprising forty-five of the leading daily papers of the country, shows a decided increase in newspaper advertising. At the annual dinner and meeting of the club, held here last night, in the rooms of the Aldina association, the following ticket was elected: President, Louis Wiley, New York Times; vice presidents, C. C. Rosewater, Omaha Bee, and Bruce Haldeman, Louisville Courier Journal; treasurer, Bernard H. Ridder of New York Staats Zeitung; manager, Ernest Hampton.

CHAUFFEURS TO ORGANIZE CLUB

Hope to Protect Themselves and Also the General Public.

The chauffeurs of Duluth will organize a society for their protection and the interests of the public.

The meeting at which time the organization will be formed, has been called for Monday night at the Russel garage.

No driver under 20 years of age will be allowed to become a member of the Chauffeur's club. The club will try to protect reputable chauffeurs from the acts of irresponsible drivers, and in this way they hope also to safeguard the general public.

The club will investigate accidents, determine who is at fault, and if it be a member of their organization, he will be expelled. The club will be in part for the purpose of giving careful drivers a standing in the city.

It is planned to have cards printed which will read: "Keep to the right." Many do not, at this time, heed this part of the city ordinance.

WANTS NO BODY GUARD.

Mayor Seidel of Milwaukee Does Away With Functionary.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 28.—The custom of having a bodyguard for the mayor of Milwaukee was abolished on Tuesday. Mayor Emil Seidel concluded he does not need the protection of a special policeman.

Accordingly, Abraham Guequirre, who was the bodyguard of former Mayor Rose, will leave the office to do patrol duty on the west side.

"I have decided to dispense with the precence of a bodyguard," said the mayor. "I am no king and feel that I am fully protected. I retained the former bodyguard during the first week because there was quite a little work to do, but now that the rush is over, I find that I will no longer need the services of a policeman."

CORPORATION TAX FALLS BELOW ESTIMATE.

Washington, April 28.—Corporation tax receipts for this year are going to prove a disappointment to the treasury. The estimate now is that they will reach $22,000,000, as against $25,000,000 thought probable by Secretary MacVeagh in December, and still larger amounts anticipated by officials having the collection of the tax in charge. The minimum estimate is based on the character of returns on which assessments are now being made; it may be increased somewhat but not likely to any material extent.

Because of the popular interest in the tax collections, the treasury on May 1 will begin daily announcements of payments.

Assessments to date owing to the tax aggregate $19,145,476.

COULD FLY ACROSS OCEAN.

Wilbur Wright Comments on Paulhan's Aerial Work.

Dayton, Ohio, April 28.—When his attention was called to the phenomenal flight of Paulhan in England, Wilbur Wright expressed his pleasure at the showing made by the Frenchman, saying that, aside from Curtiss, he is probably the most skillful aviator in the world, and probably more daring than the other. The tests now being made, Mr. Wright thinks, should prove of considerable value in giving a line on the handling of heavier-than-air machines on a long flight, although he said that no reason now existed why a trans-oceanic flight would not be successful with the present development of the aeroplane.

FRENCH REVOLUTION IS CITED IN MEAT PROBE.

Savannah, Ga., April 28.—A grand jury was drawn in the district federal court here yesterday and charged by Judge Emory Speer with the duty of investigating the acts of the so-called beef trust through their representatives here. Judge Speer, in his charge, referred to the riots that preceded the French revolution, and said:

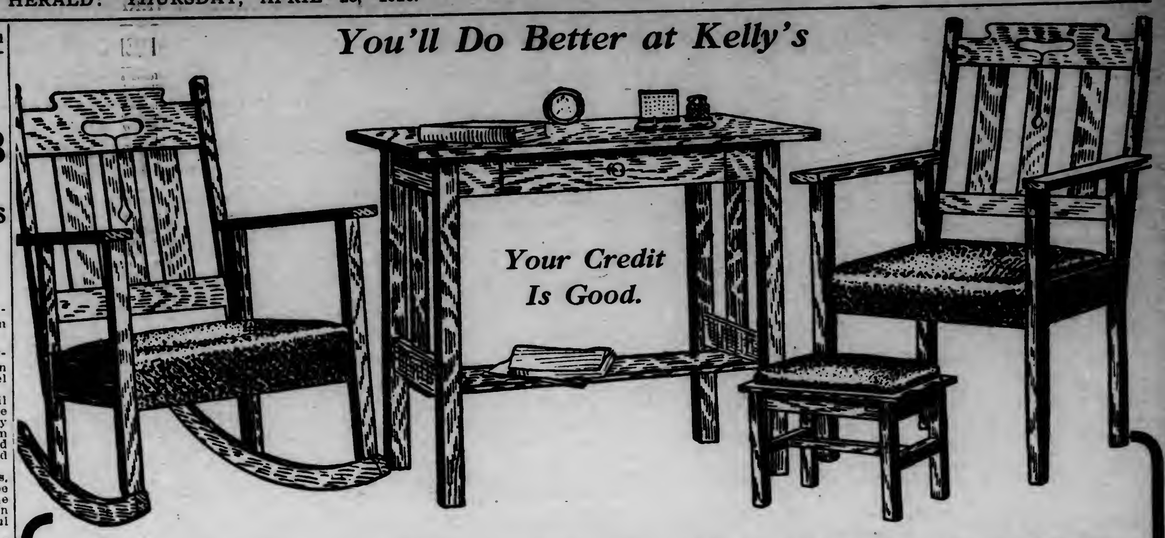
"Indeed, there seems to be no small degree of similitude between the meat riots, which have been taking place in the great cities of the country and the terrible scenes which led up to the Reign of Terror, and the incessant clanking of the guillotine."

Judge Speer referred to the law under which he was charging the jury, and concluded:

"Gentlemen, the government which disregards the necessities of the plain people is unworthy of existence. The cynical rich, whose jaded appetites must be enlivened by the matutinal cocktail before they begin to dawdle over the luscious breakfast, can have no conception of the keen hunger of the masses."

FATHER WANTS HIS FARM BACK.

Erick August Beckman, through an action filed yesterday with the clerk of the district court, is trying to regain possession of the farm he some time ago deeded to his daughter, Martha and her husband, John Jackson. Some time ago he gave them the farm with the understanding that they should furnish him clothing and food the rest of his life. The plaintiff claims that the young people neglect him and that the son-in-law is constantly trying to make trouble, shaking his fist in the plaintiff's face and threatening him harm. Beckman is 53 years old.



Bjornson Funeral May 3.

This is another link in the long chain of evidence to prove the reliability of this standard medicine for women.

This Week's Sunday School Lesson

WRITTEN FOR THE HERALD BY REV. J. S. KIRTLEY, D. D.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, MAY 1. Matt. xii, 1-14: Two Sabbath Incidents.

THE CONNECTION.

It was down in Judea, after a visit to Jerusalem. The Pharisees, anxious to find grounds for an accusation, brought the charge that He disregarded the traditional teaching of the elders in three things, especially—Sabbath regulations, fasting and the washing ceremonials. On this occasion they attack Him about His violation of their Sabbath regulations.

THE LESSON.

I.

The Law of Necessity, 1-8.

"At that season Jesus went on the Sabbath day through the grain fields; and His disciples were hungry and began to pluck ears and to eat. But the Pharisees, when they saw it, said unto Him, behold, thy disciples do that which it is not lawful to do upon the Sabbath. But He said unto them, have ye not read what David did, when he was hungry, and they that were with him; how he entered into the house of God, and ate the showbread, which it was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them that were with him, but only for the priests? Or have ye not read in the law, that on the abbath day the priests in the temple profane the Sabbath, and are guiltless? But I say unto you, that one greater than the temple is here. But if ye had known what this meaneth, I desire mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless. For the Son of man is Lord of the Sabbath."

1. CASUISTRY—They did not charge that Christ violated Moses' law, but only the regulations of their teachers concerning that law. With them the elders were really more powerful than Moses. Moses forbade work; they decided what was work and according to them, the plucking of grain and rubbing it out with the hand, as they walked through the wheat fields, was a kind of reaping and threshing—therefore work, therefore a violation of the Sabbath. They made two blunders. They called something work that was not work; they forgot that, even if it had been work, it was allowed by Moses, because it was a necessity of life itself. We may be glad for that vicious attack on Him, for it drew from Him new light on some old truths. Opposition was always opportunity with Him.

2. NECESSITY.—He did not show up their farcical interpretation of work, for they would have quoted their rabbis and opened a wrangle. He simply threw Himself back on what is fundamental in the law of Moses, namely, that work on the Sabbath is allowed in so far as it was necessary to save or sustain life, because life itself is the important thing rather than the ceremonial established in the interest of life. Jesus proved the point by the laws of Moses, by their own laws and out of their sacred history by two instances: When the priest at Nob allowed the fleeing, hungry David to eat the altar bread he violated the ceremonial law, but was approved by his own conscience, by the law of God, by the one who wrote the story, by the Jews ever since and by Jesus Himself, because life is more than days or arrangements. The other instance is that of the priest who violates the Sabbath law every time in order that others may keep the law. His busiest day was the Sabbath, but he worked that others might rest. These exceptions to the enforcement of the law were recognized as right and wise by all.

3. AUTHORITY.—Here He says a new thing, for He had made very little claim for Himself up to the present moment. But now He claims power over the day as the Son of Man. He announces the possession of "a unique manhood in which somehow all human nature is gathered up and which corresponds perfectly to the divine ideal of manhood," and that involves the possession of a divine nature, such as he often claimed afterwards. He was greater than the temple, because it was built for Him, its sacrifices were fulfilled in Him and He is the real temple, the meeting place of God and man, and therefore the law can be modified by Him. Moreover Jesus accuses them of violating that same law very flagrantly, for the purpose of it is to cultivate kindness and mercy and they had become heartless ceremonialists. Their's is the worst disobedience, because they have broken the law of love and life, that lies back of the ceremonials. There is biting irony in the question, twice asked, that implies they have not read their own Scriptures. They had not. They knew the letter but not the life of God's word. They knew nothing of the real Sabbath, as God intended it and as Jesus knew it.

He made the Sabbath and cannot only interpret it but can alter it if need be. He has never changed the institution, but has changed its arrangements. He has torn off the veils with which they obscured its meaning and he has put it on a day in which it can penetrate the truths which it is designed to carry. It carried certain truths—commemoration of God's finished work, anticipation of our finished work, co-operation in His work As a day of rest it teaches those truths and gives the opportunity to do good. On the first day of the week it tells of Christ's finished work for our recreation in holiness. One day of rest in seven is a physical, intellectual, moral and spiritual necessity of mankind and Jesus restores it to us in its purity and simplicity. He defeated those Pharisees with ample proof that they had violated the Sabbath and that He was master of that day.

II.

The Law of Mercy. 9-14.

"And He departed thence, and went into their synagogue; and behold, a man having a withered hand. And they asked Him, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath day? that they might accuse Him. And He said unto them, what man shall there be of you, that shall have one sheep, and if this fall into a pit on the Sabbath day, will he not lay hold on it and lift it out? How much, then, is a man of more value than a sheep! Wherefore it is lawful to do good on the Sabbath day. Then saith He to the man, stretch forth thy hand. And he stretched it forth, and it was restored whole as the other. But the Pharisees went out, and took counsel against Him how they might destroy Him."

1. THE ATTACK—It was a little later probably in Caparnaum, on the Sabbath. His old enemies may have brought the man with a withered hand into the synagogue to tempt Jesus into doing something that could, without fail, be construed into work, and then they had their case against Him made out. They could bring the heavy hand of the law down on Him with crushing effect. The charge was in the form of a question, which would play on the prejudices of the people and inflame them and lead Jesus to say an unlawful word or do an unlawful deed. But they were mistaken.

2. THE REPULSE—He did it in two ways. First was the argument of their own practice based on a deep sense of essential right and human kindness. The deep law of mercy required them to pull a sheep out of a ditch on the Sabbath; the same law is still more urgent in the case of a man in trouble. Love of man is, or should be, stronger than love of money or sheep. The other way of repulsing them was by healing the man in such a way that the sharpest eye could not see any work. No law against His speaking, nor against the man's stretching out his hand. That was all. All the man did was to stretch out his hand and Jesus gave him the power to do that. "The Sabbath was made for man," not for man to worship or destroy, but to use as the Lord of the Sabbath requires, in doing good to others and seeking a higher good for ourselves.

Jesus did us a service in the case of the Sabbath, for which we are to be eternally grateful. He rediscovered the real Sabbath that God gave; reaffirmed it, with all its sanctions; recovered it from its degradation as a sort of fetich; tore away the strange garb in which it had been degraded and clothed it in His own honored robe; dug out the old fetid, dead blood lying cold in its veins and made it throb with the energy of a new life, bearing its blessing of rest, commemoration, worship and anticipation. His very clearness, kindness and correctness inflame the deadly hostility of his enemies.

WHAT THE MASTERS SAY.

It was seriously argued that to walk upon the grass with nailed shoes was a violation of the Sabbath, because it was a kind of thrashing, and to catch a flea upon one's person was a violation, because it was a kind of hunting.—Abbott.

Food cooked inadvertently on the Sabbath day may be eaten. An egg laid on the Sabbath day was not to be removed from its place on that day. According to the school of Shammai, a man may add warm water to cold on the Sabbath day, but not cold to warm. The school of Hillel maintained that either was lawful. A donkey might go out on the Sabbath with a pack-saddle provided it had been attached to its back the day before, but it may not with a riding saddle, though it may have been on it from the day before, but Rabbi Shimon, the son of Gamaliel (Paul's teacher), maintained that it might go out with a riding saddle, provided it did not look as if it intended to carry loads.—Wright.

The Sabbath seems to have been enjoined upon our first parents as soon as they were created; it and the institution of marriage form the only relics that remain to us of the unfallen life in Paradise. Recent research shows that the Babylonians before the time of Abraham observed a week of seven days, ending with a rest day, which they strictly kept, and which the Assyrian writers call by the name Sabbath.—Broadus.

PERTINENT QUESTIONS.

1. How can we distinguish between God's laws and man's interpretations of them?

2. How may we enjoy the merciful adaptation of God's laws to our weakness without breaking the laws?

3. How are large Principles superior to small rules?

4. Is there any one particular in which Jesus is not worthy to be our master?

5. Can prejudice or superstitution find place in us when we are loyal to Jesus?

SORROWS OF THE HOTEL CLERK DOUBLED BY THE CENSUS MAN

"Have you been counted?"

If you haven't, then don't delay, but appeal to the hotel clerk.

He may be pleased, for hotel clerks are remarkable beings. (If they were not remarkable men they could not be hotel clerks.) The chances are, however, that he will exhibit some faint evidence of peevishness.

Life has been made a galling load for the hotel clerk by reason of the census. The industrious enumerators are not to blame, of course, but when an enumerator appears, say of a morning at 11 o'clock in the Spalding, the suave and bland genius who presides over the bell-that-makes-'em-hop seems to experience a sudden near-collapse. "There's a reason."

First came an enumerator with a great sheaf of blanks containing interrogations pertinent to the official demand for information concerning "transients." Instructions to the clerks made it mandatory that one copy of such questions should be placed in the hands of each guest between certain hours. That was just the beginning of the hotel clerk's experience with the census.

To each guest it was necessary to explain that in the event of the personal catechism being responded to elsewhere, his sole duty lay in subscribing to such allegation in the proper space therefor on the face of the paper. This explanation, in the vast majority of instances, meant the hoisting of the flood gates of inquiry on the part of the explainee. The ingenuity and the resourcefulness of the average guest for asking fool questions, said one hotel man, was beyond all prior belief.

In many cases, after the clerk had carefully gone over the entire range of elucidation, the very first question asked by the guest would indicate that not so much as an inkling of comprehension had penetrated the shell of his intellect.

When it came to the delicate task of persuading the women guests please to confide in Uncle Sam and the hotel clerk—honest, now!—just how old they were—!

Some things are too sad and heartrending to joke about.

However, one guest at the Spalding—a charming woman she was, too—capitulated at once to the smiling urbanity of her interrogator.

"I'm 41, and I don't care who knows it," she said.

But there were others. Just as charming, too, perhaps, but more reticent.

DECLINED BY INSURGENTS

Rayner's Invitation to Join Democrats Scorned By Dolliver.

Senator Bristow Flays Railroads and Administration Bill.

Washington, April 28.—The invitation extended by Senator Rayner to the insurgent senators to join the Democratic party was spurned by Senator Dolliver on behalf of the insurgents.

A lively tilt ensued when Senator Bailey of Texas advised the insurgents to remain in sympathy with regular Republicans if they desired to win in the coming campaign. Otherwise, he said, they should join the Democrats.

The session was concluded with a speech by Senator Bristow, who arraigned the present system of railroad rate making.

In the house the entire day was devoted to the consideration of bills relating to Indian lands.

For South Dakota Settlers.

One of these measures was amended on motion of Mr. Sabath of Illinois, so that in the disposition of the lands of the Rosebud reservation in South Dakota, citizens could make application for such lands at their homes without the necessity of going to the reservation. Mr. Sabath declared that last year $5,000,000 had been spent by disappointed home-seekers in their efforts to obtain public lands.

That the railroads are guilty of innumerable acts of discrimination—"high-handed acts of tyranny"—and also with corrupting legislation and with influencing the appointment of federal judges, were among the charges made by Senator Bristow.

Bristow Flays Railroads.

In his speech, which was in connection with the railroad bill, he entered upon an extensive condemnation of the present system of rate-making, citing many instances to show the ill effects of the plan employed.

Declaring that by these methods one man was enriched at the expense of another and that there was great discrimination as between cities, he asserted they should not be permitted to continue longer.

He laid down an axiom to the effect that "communities are charged the highest prices on that which they need the most," and gave figures on fresh meats and canned goods respectively, between Kansas City and New Orleans in one instance and Kansas City and Wichita in another. He showed the rates on canned goods to New Orleans to be 35 cents per hundred, whereas to Wichita it was 35 cents, notwithstanding the distance was only about one-fourth as great.

Tax on Necessities.

After presenting many other instances, Mr. Bristow said:

"The present system is intolerable. By it the railroads impose an unjust tax upon the necessities of the people. They strangle the natural growth of cities. They tax arbitrarily one region of the country for the benefit of another. They levy benefit upon the rich resources of one community that they may favor another. They have driven the independent American steamships from the inland seas and contributed largely in driving the American flag from the oceans. They have annihilated the great steamboat industry, which fifty years ago was the pride of the nation.

"But that is not all. In order to retain the power that has enabled them to exercise these high-handed acts of tyranny, they have used their enormous wealth to corrupt the legislatures, bribe conventions and control elections. They have sought to, and in some instances, I believe, have controlled the appointment of federal judges, that they might have undue influence with the courts.

Scores Administration Bill.

"And now, with amazing affrontery and an apparent confidence in their power, they are attempting by the enactment of this bill, not only to get out from under the future operations of the Sherman anti-trust law, but to secure legislative immunity from the crimes which they have committed against the statutes."

Object to Strong Medicines.

Many people object to taking the strong medicines prescribed by physicians for rheuamtism. There is no need of internal treatment in any case of muscular or chronic rheumatism, and more than nine out of every ten cases of the disease are of one or the other of these varieties. When there is no fever and little (if any) swelling, you may know that it is only necessary to apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely to get quick relief. Try it. For sale by all druggists.

GIRL OF 68 ELOPES WITH WIDOWER OF 75.

St. Louis, Mo., April 28.—Thomas A. Elliott, 75 years old, a millionaire banker and tobacco grower of Lafayette, Ky., and Miss Adeline Nedbetter, 68 years old, of Murphreesboro, Ky., eloped to St. Louis yesterday and were married. Before the ceremony each signed an ante nuptial agreement, waiving claims on the other's estate. The bride is said to be worth more than $1,000,000.

The couple had been sweethearts for fifteen years, they said, when applying for the license. Elliott is a widower and has several children.

Hammerstein Drops Opera.

New York, April 28.—Oscar Hammerstein has abandoned the field of grand opera. Through Samuel Untermeyer, his counsel, and his son, Arthur, he announced that he had capitulated to the exactions of the artistic temperament, which, aided and flattered by competition, now demanded salaries which, if paid, meant bankruptcy, and if refused, meant no performance. Both the Metropolitan Opera company faced deficits, he said, for the season just closed.

ATTORNEY GENERAL FINED FOR ASSAULT.

Welch, W. Va., April 28.—Attorney General Samuel W. Williams of Virginia was found guilty of assault upon Former Chief Justice Joseph M. Saunders of the supreme court of West Virginia. He was fined $100. Attorney General Williams and Judge Saunders had a dispute in a courtroom at Welch last autumn and it was charged that the attorney struck the former chief justice with an ink stand.

MAY HAVE TO IMPORT PAPER FROM CANADA.

Washington, April 28.—If the supply of paper produced in the United States continues to decrease during the remainder of the present year as it has during the last six months, this country will be obliged in the near future to import from Canada and other countries a constantly increasing amount of wood pulp and paper and to pay the greater price which is imposed by the tariff.

This is shown by the statistics prepared by Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations, as the request of the American Newspaper Publishers' association, from monthly reports made to him during the last eighteen months by the American Paper & Pulp association.

One Conductor Who Was Cured.

Mr. Willford Adams is his name, and he writes about it.—"Some time ago I was confined to my bed with chronic rheumatism. I used two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy with good effect, and the third bottle put me on my feet and I resumed work as conductor on the Leington, Ky., Street Railway. It gave me more relief than any medicine I had ever used, and it will do all you claim in cases of Rheumatism." Foley's Kidney Remedy cures rheumatism by eliminating the uric acid from the blood. For sale by all drugists.

North Dakota Man Appeals.

Cambridge, Mass., April 28.—An appeal to the supreme court from the decision of the probate court in throwing out the claims of a North Dakota ranchman for a share in the $750,000 estate of the late Daniel Rusell of Melrose, has been filed.

Taft Removes Alaska Officials.

Washington, April 28.—President Taft has directed the removal from office of Daniel A. Sutherland, United States marshal for the district of Alaska, and John J. Boyce, district attorney for the First division of Alaska. General incompetency was the charge against the marshal.

Japanese Village Buried.

Victoria, B. C., April 28.—More than 100 Japanese were killed on April 3, when an avalanche plunged down Sunagese hill, overwhelming the village of Nishomoyamura, Japan, and burying it and the adjacent valley for a long distance under 160 feet of snow and debris.

LANGFORD HAS A SHADE ON KETCHEL IN SHORT BOUT

Michigan Fighter the Weaker at the End of the Sixth Round.

Big Crowd Sees Fast Mill Between Leading Middleweights.

Philadelphia, April 28.—Sam Langford of Boston and Stanley Ketchel of Michigan met last night in the arena of the National Athletic club in a six-round bout and at the end there was little to choose between the men. If anything, Langford had a slight advantage.

After the first round, both men fought viciously, Ketchel playing for the colored man's body while the Boston man used a straight left varied occasionally with a right uppercut. It was one of these damaging blows which caught Ketchel flush on the nose near the close of the third round and started blood flowing in a stream. Langford thereafter played for the damaged organ, driving his long left straight to the face repeatedly. This attack seemed to unnerve Ketchel and he swung wildly at times, while Langford was always cool.

As the men rushed to a clinch just as the bell sounded for the close of the fourth round, Ketchel drove a vicious left into Langford's body and the colored fighter's eyes closed and his mouth opened. He was plainly hurt, but was it might have been a dangerous situation for him was averted by the bell. Ketchell pursed his usual tactics of forcing the fighting. There was not a moment during the battle that he was not right on top of Langford, never allowing him to get set. This was the part of wisdom, for Langford easily out-boxed Ketchel.

From the time that Langford started the blood flowing from the Michigan's man's nose until the final gong sounded, the colored fighter paid particular attention to the damaged organ. Both men missed many blows and the referee was forced to pull them apart nearly every time they rushed to a clinch. There was not a mark on either man as they emerged from the ring, but Langford appeared to be the fresher.

Representative Crowd.

The National Athletic club, where the fight took place, was packed to the doors long before the first bout, which was scheduled for 8:30 o'clock was put on. Not in the history of the club has there been such a representative assemblage of sporting men as that which surrounded the ring. Every large city from Chicago to Boston was represented. It was estimated that there was a gate of nearly $20,000. From New York there came a special train of six cars, while Pittsburg, Baltimore, Washington, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Boston and other large cities contributed their quota.

The principals were early on the scene. Ketchel, who came from Woodlawn Tuesday, spent the greater part of the day quietly in his room. In the early afternoon he took an automobile ride through Fairmount park and after a light supper retired to his room for a short nap. He came to the clubhouse a few minutes after 9 o'clock looking in the pink of condition.

Langford remained at his training quarters in Merchantville, N. J., until late in the afternoon, when, accompanied by George Cole and a retinue of seconds, he was whisked across the country to Philadelphia. The colored man, too, looked to be in perfect trim, and he said as much. George Cole, who had watched after Langford's training for a long time, said that Langford's condition was perfect. Jim Flynn, who came all the way from the coast to challenge the winner of last night's bout, sat close to the ringside. Before the main event he appeared in the ring and formally challenged the winner.

Langford was the first to appear in the ring. He was accompanied by "Young" Mississippi; George Byers and George Cole, his seconds. The colored fighter was given a warm reception.

He was followed a moment later by Ketchel, who entered the ring with Eddie Bunn, Jimmie Kelly and Nick Muller. Ketchell was cheered to the echo as he crawled through the ropes.

It was 10:23 when the men came into the ring. They waited until 10:29 for Referee McGuigan. Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, came into the ring and was introduced. The referee then called the men to the center of the ring and gave them their instructions.

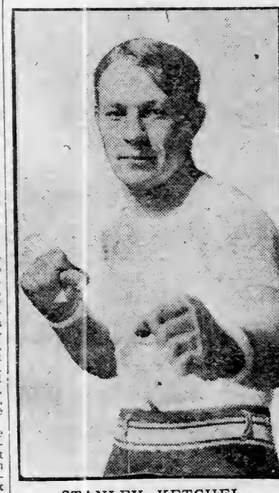
The Fight by Rounds.

Round 1—The men advanced cautiously. Ketchel was the first to lead with a light left for the wind. Langford missed left and right and Ketchel tapped the colored man on the head. They clinched and in the break, Langford landed a light left on the wind. Langford missed repeatedly. Ketchel was forcing the fighting. He landed a left on the wind and a right to the same place as the bell rang. Not a solid blow was struck.

Round 2—Both advanced quickly to the center. Langford tried a left for the head. In a hot mix-up Langford sent two good lefts to the wind and head. Ketchel drove a right to the head and again to the wind. Langford sent a left to the head. Each landed lefts to the head and Ketchel sent a right to the wind. Another mix-up and clinch and the referee had to pull the men apart. Ketchel landed a left to the wind as the bell rang. As in round 1, Ketchel did the forcing.

Round 3—Ketchel started the third round with a left lead to the head but was blocked. Langford jabbed two lefts to the face and then sent Ketchel's head back with a straight right. Both landed lefts on the wind. Langford jabbed his left to the mouth and drove a hard right to the wind and Ketchel sent a left to the face and they clinched. Ketchel sent Langford's head back with a hard left. Langford missed a left uppercut and Ketchel drove a hard left to the face. They clinched at the bell.

Langford Draws Blood.



Round 4—Up to this time Ketchel was doing all the forcing. He did not let the colored man get set. Ketchel led his left to the wind and they clinched. Langford sent two hard lefts to the jaw and Ketchel was more careful. Ketchel drove a hard right to the wind. Langford brought blood from Ketchel's nose with a stiff left. Langford chopped a hard left to the nose and the blood came from the injured member in a stream. Ketchel sent a hard right to the wind and Langford uppercut a hard one to the chin. This was Langford's round.

Round 5—Ketchel led with a light left to the face and then sent a hard right to the jaw. Langford again punched the damaged nose starting the blood afresh. Langford sent left to the face and Ketchel sent a right to the body. Both drove lefts to the face and Ketchel sent a hard right to the nose. Ketchel missed a hard uppercut and they clinched. Ketchel landed a right on the wind and Langford uppercut to the chin. Langford swung a right as the bell rang, but fell to the floor.

Round 6—Langford lifted Ketchel off the floor with an uppercut. Both drove hard lefts to the head and in a clinch Ketchel pounded Langford's stomach and Langford again started the blood flowing and he slugged Ketchel with a right to the wind. Ketchel was weak and Langford sent his head back repeatedly. Ketchel was weak on his legs and they clinched repeatedly. Langford played for the damaged nose and had Ketchel covered with blood when the bell rang.

BOXING BOUT IS POSTPONED

Jeffries Has Boil on His Back Lanced By Surgeon.

Ben Lomond, Cal., April 28.—Plainly in an anxious mood and gloomy because of the enforced postponement of a boxing bee with Joe Choynski, James J. Jeffries was taken in an automobile from his training camp to Santa Cruz yesterday for the purpose of having a boil on his back lanced.

Jeffries' old trouble has returned to him—the trouble that caused the postponement of his match with Munroe. While nothing serious is feared as a result of the eruption, it has been causing a great deal of worry around the camp for the last few days and the ex-champion himself has been in a feverish stnte of mind.

According to Manager Sam Berger, there is nothing to worry about. He explained Jeffries had been poulticing the sore spot for some time and that all that was necessary to effect a cure was the knife of a surgeon.

Jeffries had planned to box a warm set-to with Choynski and Armstrong and a number of visitors were on hand to see the work-out. Berger entered the gymnasium just before the program began and made his announcement. Notwithstanding his trouble, Jeffries was on the road for his usual ten-mile walk this morning. He also skipped the rope for half an hour.

AS SEEN FROM THE SIDE LINES

(BY BRUCE.)

"Take Me Seriously."

That is the plea of the smaller people.

They want to be taken so seriously. Why?

Going down through history, quite a few of the small ones have been taken quite seriously.

There was little "Nap." Poor little chap he was barely over the five-foot mark. But how large he loomed that dark day in the Paris streets, when a cool head and capable hand was needed. "Bony" was dreadfully small—oh, but gee!

Coming down to more modern history, there is the case of wee Willie Keeler.

When this chap started to play baseball the fans laughed in ghoulish glee. He held a bat that was so small it resembled those bats the kindly druggist keeps for father's little sons.

But when Willie met the pellet, there was work for the fielders. True he was quite small, but he had such a way. He was the most scientific batter the game has yet produced. He got along well, did Wee Willie, as he was such a little chap, childlike almost.

Then there was Charlie Daley, once of dear John Harvard fame. Charley was so small, honestly, that the top of his wise little head would not protrude itself above the stooping line of scrimmage.

Here again the unfeeling ones laughed when Charles trotted upon the field. The laugh came early and died an early death. Charles was the one bright spot upon some of the Harvard football teams. He was the greatest quarterback of his time, and, as stated, he could almost wear a good-sized walnut for a helmet.

Take us seriously, please Mister?

We might say something about Johnny Hayes—but we had better not.

If John had quit after that London run—but then, what's the use.

There have been others. There is Evers, Bush, Tommy Leach, all of the greatest of the present day baseball players. There was Duffy and Archie Hahn, the sprinters. There are a few others we know—but no fair.

Getting Thoroughly Acquainted.

Now that the Minny league baseball writers' family is thoroughly united, it is amusing to think over the times of the past, when we scarcely knew each other. All of the family are on speaking terms at the present time.

Carl Hanton and Harry Rood have established a correspondence, though last season they scarcely knew of the existence of the other. Then there is William Beach Smith. William and Carl are also upon terms of intimate acquaintance at the present time.

Then there is Old Man Ingram of the La Crosse Tribune. "Dal" has roamed into the conference once or twice, and he is also one of the gang. Dalgren and Kid Speer of the Eau Claire Leader are firm friends and sworn companions, since the heart-to-heart talks that have been the result of the journalistic conferences.

It makes it more pleasant all round. When the scribes meet at the dinner John Elliott has planned for the close of next season, it will be less formal and the spirit of the gathering will be had just that much sooner.

To Carl Hanton must be given much of the credit for introducing the boys. Carl is one of the best lettle presenters in the business. Since he has done so much in getting the slaves of the typewriter together, it would be a fitting little courtesy on the part of fat Jack Elliott to make Carl the official toastmaster of the evening in September.

Carl would have ample opportunity in getting Uncle Joe Killian to response to the toast "Stealing home." Otto Koepping may give a short travelogue and Harry Rood might respond to the toast "In My Official Capacity." Ray Speer might give a dissertation upon the old testament and William Beach Smith might write some original verse for the occasion.

A. W. Kuehnow has promised to sing. Mr. J. Minor, the dignified sporting editor of the News Tribune, has volunteered a recitation.

Mr. Elliott has a fine young program in prospect.

Ketchel Came Back.

Last night's showing of Stanley Ketchel is a great source of gratification to many of those who were fearful lest the white boy would be beaten within the time limit of the six rounds.

The showing was that of a man in good physical condition, though a longer siege of training would have probably fitted the Michigan boy for even a better showing. Let it be said, however, that he did more last night than was generally expected by a large number of judges of fighters.

A long fight will be the inevitable result of the encounter last night. That is the only way the abilities of the two men can be decided. On the showing of the two men last night, Langford would be the favorite, with a lot of money ready to be wagered on the white man. Langford was the stronger at the finish last night, but Ketchel could have been in somewhat better condition.

In a long fight the odds might favor the white boy. In condition Ketchel has always showed that he is a great distance fighter. The same cannot be said of Langford. They say he tires perceptibly after ten or more rounds have been tolled off. Right there is where Steve might cop.

In the battle of last night, Langford showed he was the better boxer, as has been generally predicted. Yet once that terrible Ketchel wallop made its presence forcibly felt, judging from the account of the fight. The stomach is generally the weak part of the smokes, and catching Sam here, Steve had him sick and wobbling, apparently, for a moment.

Those who imagined that Ketchel feared the Semegambian, were unburdened of this ingrowing idea. He carried the fight to Samuel Adams all the time, and in fact did the forcing throughout. Ketchel is not afraid of any of them, and in a long battle his nerve may take the heart out of the negro, for the men of the black race have never displayed any too much of it at important moments in big battles.

The Cub's Asset.

Harry McIntyre, the pitcher Chicago secured from Brooklyn, has ever had something on the Pirates of smoky Pittsburg. Yesterday the pitcher whom Chance has sought for so long, beat the champions. This asset will count much for the Cubs the present season.

It was a great game and is an augury of the fierce fight that will be waged between these two teams. With McIntyre and Kling with the Cubs, the odds will be slightly in favor of the Chicago team.

To Sign for Fight.

San Francisco, Cal., April 28.—Joe Thomas and Billy Papke will sign articles today for a twenty-five round fight at Coffreth's arena, May 14. The fight will be for 50 per cent of the gate receipts.

"GREAT TEAM," SAYS DARBY TO HERALD CORRESPONDENT

THE IRISH ORATOR,
Patrick Henry O'Brien, Captain of the Duluth White Sox.

South Bend, Ind., April 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Manager Darby O'Brien, with twenty-one men on his hands, is disgusted and discouraged over the weather he has found in Indiana. Although on tour for exhibition games for two weeks, he has so far been able to play only three games. He was unusually disappointed on account of the inability to play the South Bend Central league team, because of the heavy snow storm which followed the club into town on its arrival from Warsaw, Ind.

While O'Brien is discouraged over the weather, he is unusually optimistic over the outlook for the season for Duluth. "We will have a fast team in the Minnesota-Wisconsin league," he stated before leaving South Bend, "and there is no reason why we should not be able to land another pennant. Compared with last year's club, we will be somewhat stronger, several now men having been added to the club which will enable us to show the fans up our way some mighty fast ball."

O'Brien is unusually well pleased over the showing made by Catchers Bozinski and Anderson. Both are big men, with strong whips and able to hit the ball.

"I have great faith in this pair of catchers," he stated to The Herald correspondent, "and I have also great expectations in my pitching staff. Our new men—Kenney and Howard—look more than promising, and there is a chance that they will develop so fast that they will be in higher company when the season comes to a close. Dauss, Marion, Cummings and Klingebiel, of last year's team, are all in prime condition, and it is needless to state that they will perform as well as they did last year.

"In Kozier of Cleveland, who will play first, Duluth fans will see another Ness. Taylor will be better than ever for the reason that since having joined the team he has taken off thirty pounds."

According to Manager O'Brien the lineup of the Duluth team for the season will be as follows:

Pitchers—Dauss, Marion, Kenney, Cummings, Howard, Klingebiel.
Catchers—Bozinski and Anderson.
First base—Kozier.
Second base—O'Brien.
Shortstop—Hodges or Sterling.
Third base—Sweeney.
Right field—Anderson.
Center field—Neelon.
Left field—Taylor.

O'Brien and his proteges left South Bend Monday for Rockford, Ill., where five games are scheduled. This series will be the last before the team returns home. While at Rockford seven men will be dropped from the squad, O'Brien having concluded to take only fourteen with him to Duluth.

The deal for the purchase of Pitcher Byrne from South Bend did not go through, O'Brien deciding to hold off until he saw how his two new men would show up. He has the promise of Manager Wheeler of South Bend, however, that in case he needs another twirler he can have Byrne.

Ed Sterling, the infielder, puts in his winter months doing a stunt on the vaudeville stage, last season being with the Rays in a sketch called "King Casey."

DAUSS WILL REPORT SOON

George Dauss, one of the star twirlers of the Minnesota-Wisconsin league last season, has wired A. W. Kuehnow that he is ready to report to the team. The telegram came from Indianapolis. Dauss has been bothered with a sore arm and for that reason has not reported.

Mr. Kuehnow has wired transportation to the player and he will be with the White Sox within a few days. The coming of Dauss will fill out the strong pitching staff.

KEOGH RETAINS WORLD'S POOL CHAMPIONSHIP.

Y., April 28.—The pool championship of the world was retained by Jerome Keogh of Rochester, who won the final block of his contest with Clarence Safford of Chicago last night, the final score being Keogh 600; Safford 493. CREW TAKES LONG JAUNT Clad in Sweaters and Rowing Suits Oarsmen Run Through Chill Winds.

Big Squad of Promising Candidates Working Hard for Positions.

More evidence was given last evening of the enthusiasm of the candidates who are trying for the crew of the Duluth Boat club. Though the weather last evening was of that rude brand that makes a man hug the fire or something equally attractive, more than enough candidates to fill out the eight were on hand.

The water was so rough that it was found advisable not to take the shell out. However Coach Peyton did not let the evening pass without sending his charges through some work. The men stripped down to sweaters and running trunks, and were sent out for a two-mile run.

The bunch ran down the point, over sand heaps, with the air filled with chill spray and flying sand. When the candidates came lagging in behind statuesque "Cy" Forgette, they were tired. The men secured more benefit than they would have received in getting out on the water and being benumbed by the splashing spray.

The night before there were two eights and two fours out, the biggest crowd of candidates that has been on the water for years. The enthusiasm is growing and this, too, when the weather has been of the kind that would discourage any but the most enthusiastic oarsmen.

From now on, an attempt will be made to get the lineup of the first eight something like it will be at the Kenora regatta. It is expected that Jack Hector will be out beginning with the first of the month. The big fellow has been kept away from practice for the past two weeks, but has promised to join the crew.

With Hector back there will be five old men in the boat. With the wealth of candidates on hand, Coach Peyton should fill out a very strong team. There is the chance that "Big Bill" Crawford will try for the crew when he returns from the university.

Ver Wiebe looks like a comer. The Harvard football man ran about four miles last night, just to see what Park Point looked like. Kent and Nelson are out every night, and Lathrop, who rowed with the crew part of last season, is heavier and stronger than the present season. Killorin is making a strong fight for a place in the boat.

The candidates will be put through a hard practice this evening. It is getting to the time when hard and serious work must be started. The men have been cautioned about observing the first principles of training. Scales have been taken down to the sober notch and close tab kept on the weight of the men.

From what the men have told Peyton, the present crew will be heavier than the eight giants who won second place at St. Paul last July. Mapp will be replaced by a heavier man, and Deighton will also have a heavier successor.

"Teaching the men the rhythm of the stroke, the quicker catch and the quicker "shoot," is the Herculean task that John Paul Jones Peyton has set himself to, and in the next two and a half months some of the candidates will know what calloused hands and aching limbs mean, if the few samples of the policy of the coach shown so far are carried through the next two months.

KUEHNOW IS CONFIDENT

Returns From Training Trip With Good Reports of Duluth Squad.

A. W. Kuehnow, secretary and treasurer of the Duluth Baseball club, returned today from Rockford, Ill., where the Duluth aggregation of pennant chasers is at the present time.

Mr. Kuehnow says the squad has eighteen members. Young Dauss and Redlin and a good many of the others have been let go. The men that are with the squad at the present time, are the pick of the large number of players signed by O'Brien last year and early last winter.

Neelon, Taylor and Anderson are pretty sure of outfield positions, according to Mr. Kuehnow. The infield is more unsettled. Kozier will probably land the first base job, while O'Brien will play second. For short Sterling, Hodges and Daggett are fighting it out. Sweeney looks the goods for third.

"Al" stated that Howard, the big pitcher looked very good. Kenney has shown ability in the few opportunities he has had to show anything. With Marion and George Dauss the hurling hill brigade looks strong.

"Yesterday was one of the few opportunities the squad has had to work out," said Mr. Kuehnow. "The boys worked out in the city park of Rockford, Kozier hit a ball out of the park, a distance of about a block and a half. I believe we are going to have a strong team and Darby is of the same opinion. The boys will be home in a few days.

"Darby sends his regards to all the Duluth fans and says he will be awfully glad to get here. Both Darby and I are confident we have a team that will win the pennant."

HIGH SCHOOL TEAM DEFEATS BUSINESS COLLEGE.

The lineup of yesterday's game:

Business college—Johnson, pitcher; Bragalia, Page, catcher; Gunderson, first base; Carmelson, second base; Lind, shortstop; Itaumer, third base; Larson, right field; Sippola, center field; Horton, left field.

NO THOUGHT OF LEAVING

Leather Workers Say They Will Stand By International Organization.

Will Meet Employers Only If Their Demands Are Granted.

"We have never had any intention of withdrawing from the International Brotherhood of Leather workers on Horse Goods," said Philip Acker, secretary and treasurer of the Duluth local, this morning, in reference to a published story to the effect that the Duluth strikers were contemplating a withdrawal from the international organization.

"We have had but one desertion from our ranks and, with that exception, we are just as strong and just as determined to stand up for our rights as we were the day we quit work. We will treat with the employers on just one basis—that is an unqualified accession to our demands."

The Duluth local held a meeting this morning and, acording to the reports made afterwards, there was no talk of withdrawing from the union or giving in. The men are standing together to the finish.

"The stories that have been circulated to the effect that we are weakening are injuring us in the eyes of the public and we want to correct them," said Mr. Acker. "We are going to call a special meeting of the trades assembly tomorrow night to explain to the union men of Duluth that we do not intend to desert our cause and that we want their support."

The statement to the effect that the men pay 25 cents a month dues and that 20 cents of it goes to the international organization is also denied by the Duluth men. They say that their dues are 25 cents a week and that the most of it does not go to the support of the international organization. The report that the men were treating with their employers was given to The Herald by a man high up in labor circles, and in close touch with the strike conditions.

SHOULD NOT BUY "UNSEEN"

People Purchasing Florida Lands Should Make Selections Personally.

G. L. Richards, owner of the National Employment company of this city, has received a letter from a very prominent man in Florida, in relation to the land situation in the Everglades, in which many Duluthians are interested.

The letter was written in response to a request as to the condition there. The advice in the letter is that while there are many fine pieces of land there, if the land is purchased by drawing, nine inches as much of the land is, one is just as likely to get a sand bank as a piece of land suitable for cultivation.

The advice in the letter is that all Duluthians interested in getting a piece of land there, should make the trip to Florida before buying. The letter says some of the land is very good and some absolutely worthless, as far as growing anything is concerned. Therefore the need for selecting the land personally is pointed out.

Knowing that a number of Duluth people were interested in the land that is being placed on the market, Mr. Richards solicited the information.

Axel Seppa Wants $25,000 Damages for Alleged Injuries.

The case of Axel Seppa against the Oliver Iron Mining company for $25,000 for injuries alleged to have been sustained at the Hull-Rust mine at Hibbing in January of the present year is on before Judge Cant of the district court.

Seppa claims that he was employed at the mine as a laborer. The blasting crew was doing some work and there were explosions every few minutes. He was hit by a heavy piece of ore, he claims. As a result he sustained a fracture of the skull.

BOOK EVERY FACTORY MANAGER SHOULD READ.

"Safeguards," a book by David Van Schanck, and published by the Aetna Life Insurance company, telling of modern methods of manufacturing, and the up to the minute machinery being installed all over the country so that accidents may become fewer, has been received by Miss Jean Poirier, state factory inspector.

The book is printed on heavy gloss paper, is beautifully illustrated, and tells something of the work for better methods in factories, so that the danger to life will not be so great.

Miss Poirier, who is interested greatly in this work, says the book is one every factory manager should read. It can be had for the asking, and will be sent those making application by letter to the Aetna company's general office at Hartford, Conn.

OLD LANDMARK IS BLOWN DOWN

One of the old landmarks at Ironton was destroyed last night, when the high wind blew down an old frame building belonging to Joseph Sellwood.

The structure, in its day, had been used for both store and residence purposes. It had also often served a church during the pioneer days in that section of the city just beyond West Duluth.

DEATH ONLY SURE WAY

Isolating Tuberculous Cows Claimed to Be of Little Avail.

Health Department Handicapped in Fight for Pure Milk.

Dr. H. E. Webster, health commissioner, relies upon the moral force of an overwhelming public opinion to support him in the efforts which he is making to give Duluth a pure milk supply without taint of tuberculosis.

Dr. Webster says he is doing his best to insure the city milk which will not endanger the public or the babies. He fully realizes the great importance of the question, recognizing fully the fact that it is one of the first things which insures the good health of the community.

But in working out his plan he has clashed with the state regulations upon the handling, testing and condemnation of tuberculous cows. The state regulations decree that the tuberculous test shall show a reaction to a temperature of 105 degrees, the state authorities claiming that their experience has shown them that in most cases a cow is free from the disease unless that is the case.

Dr. Webster firmly maintains that no arbitrary set rule can be applied to determine whether or not a cow has the cow owned by I. Levine at Fourth street. Further investigation shows that the inspector did not order the cow killed, although he condemned it. Dr. Webster says that he and the men know what authority they have and do not exceed that authority. It appears that Inspector Owens claimed that the cow had tuberculosis and that Dr. McKay said it had not. To settle the dispute the cow was killed and a post mortem held. The examination showed that the cow did not have tuberculosis. But before the cow was killed Inspector Owens voluntarily agreed to pay for the cow, which cost him $10, as the owner got $40 from the beef, which netted him $50 for the animal.

Dr. Webster says that he knows he is handicapped as matters now stand. He has had considerable correspondence with the state authorities and has told them that despite their stand, he shall do his duty as he sees it to insure a pure milk supply for Duluth.

Only Sure Way.

The general belief is that the only way in which the situation can be handled to absolutely insure that the milk will not be tainted by the product of a tubercular cow is to kill it. The city cannot do that. Under the state law that test must be made by a graduate veterinarian, who has power to order the cow killed after he has condemned it for tuberculosis, in which event the owner of the cow is reimbursed from the state treasury.

Little can really be accomplished by isolating the cow as there is no way in which that cow can be watched. They are liable to be found anywhere, inside or outside the city. A man cannot be deputized and paid to keep watch of the cow day and night. Whether tagged or not by the city inspector it would be an easy matter for a milkman so inclined, to milk that cow and turn its milk in with that of the rest of his herd.

Dr. Webster declared this morning that where the inspector finds a tubercular cow in the herd and the milk man shows a disposition to continue selling milk from that cow, he will publish the name of that milkman, warning the people that he has a tubercular cow in his herd, emphasizing the fact that they are endangering their health if they purchase milk from him. While the inspector was there that man might show every disposition to do what is right, isolate his cow and keep it isolated, it is claimed. But when the inspector was gone he could milk that cow whether it was in with the herd or not. All he would have to do would to dump that milk in with the rest.

The health commissioner has great faith in the ability of Inspector Owens to detect tuberculosis in cows, and is certain that he knows his business. He says that he graduated from the Wisconsin Agricultural school, where he spent two years making a study of dairying and tuberculosis. He states that he would rather take his test than that which could be made by many graduate veterinarians.

The difficulty between the city and the state arises from the fact that Inspector Owens is not a graduate veterinarian, and the state regulations will not recognize any tests for tuberculosis that are not made by a graduate veterinarian, no matter how competent the man making the tests may be.

The subject is of great importance to all the people of the state as well as the residents of Duluth. They want to be sure that no cows with tuberculosis are in the herds which are furnishing the city's milk supply. Considerable attention is being paid to the question and it is hoped that the local situation will be clarified to the satisfaction of the public as well as that of the authorities in a short time.

COPPERS HAVE SHARP DECLINE

Bears Hold Sway and Express Prevailing Sentiment in Market.

The copper market today experienced sharp declines until toward the close, when the market became oversold and rallied slightly. Nearly all issues suffered as a result of the day's downturn.

A bear raid on some of the leaders, notably Amalgamated, was met with considerable opposition around bottom levels. Tired holders liquidated and the market ran into a lot of stop-loss orders which aided the short sellers in their manipulations.

The metal situation is in the dumps. The April output of the Butte mines will exceed 25,000,000 pounds. The curtailment agreement has fallen through and the mines will soon be producing heavily again. This will bring about a readjustment on the principle of the survival of the fittest.

Trading here was dull. Butte Alex Scott, full paid, sold at $6.25; Cordova, full paid, at 95 cents; Greene Cananea at $8.50; Shattuck at $25 and $25.12½; Butte & Sperior at $2; Calument & Corbin at 75 and 76 cents; Sierra at $3.12½ to $3.18¾; North American at $2.62½ to $2.50 to $2.68¾.

Amalgamated declined from $71.25 to $68.62½ and rallied to $70. Steel common advanced from $81.75 to $82.25 and dropped to $79.37½, recovering to $80.12½ and selling off at the close to $80. The preferred declined from $119.50 to $116.75 and rallied to $117. Superior & Pittsburg sold at $12.50 to $12, Butte Coalition at $21 to $20.25, Calumet & Arizona at $60 to $62 and back to $61. Ojibway was erratic and the values seemed fictitious. The stock sold at $7.50 to $6 to $7. Giroux sold at $7.50 to $7.12½ to $7.50 and Greene at $8.50 to $8.75 to $8.37½ to $8.50. Lake sold at $51 to $49.75 and up to $52.25, declining to $51.62½ at the close. North Butte sold at $33 and up ¾ point, then down to $32.12½, up to $33 and at the close $32.50 at the close. Anaconda dropped from $43 to $40.75 and advanced to $41.25.

LABORERS ARE SCARCE

Employment Agents Cannot Fill Large Orders for Men.

Wage Scales Increased By Railroads and Logging Companies.

Duluth employment agents say there is a scarcity of labor all over the Northwest. In Duluth at the present time there is almost a labor famine that is holding up operations in the saw mills and lumber camps and is also delaying the starting of railroad work.

Employment agents here account for the shortage in labor from the fact that all sorts of industries are opening up after a period of comparative quiet. This is especially true of railroad work.

For two years, or since the panic of 1907, the railroads of the Nortwest have done little repairing, ballasting or building. The coming spring is seeing the beginning of a more liberal plan upon the part of the railroads. They are planning repairing, ballasting and the construction of sidings and switches.

The railroads are looking for men and cannot find them. As a consequence the wages for common labor have advanced to $2.25 a day. The railroads are offering free fare and other attractions, but cannot secure the number of men they want.

The policy of shutting off as much work as possible on Sunday has resulted, it is reported here, in the leaving of a number of laborers, who do not like the fact that they have been prohibited from earning the extra time pay that was given for Sunday work. It is reported here today that the policy upon the part of the range roads and the Omaha has resulted in a number of men seeking other places of employment.

Many of the lumber camps are woefully short of men. One company at the present time has an order in for 500 men. The order was placed with the National Employment company of this city, but the men have not been found. They cannot be secured in the city, though, like the railroads, the lumber companies have raised the wage scale in the hope of getting men.

Some of the labor employment men here are inclined to believe there will be a serious labor shortage. This prediction is peculiarly true of this immediate section of the Northwest.

Orders have been received here for men from as far away as Arizona, with full fare prepaid. Unless more men can be secured, it is stated here that large projects will be held up.

HEINZE LOANS AIRED IN COURT

District Attorney Says Bank Was Reduced to Gambling Institution.

New York, April 28.—The trial of F. Augustus Heinze settled down at the opening of today's session to putting into the record facts and figures regarding various loans approved by the defendant while he was president of the Mercantile National bank. The government charges Heinze with misapplication of the bank's funds and overcertification in an effort to promote speculation in United Copper through his brother's firm, Otto Heinze & Co.

United States District Attorney Wise made a scathing opening address. He referred to Heinze's operations as "slim-flam" and "bunco games," while he charged that the Mercantile National bank had been reduced to the level of a gambling institution.

HELMER CASE BEING HEARD

Charged With Manslaughter Owing to Mrs. Monroe's Death.

Herbert Helmer, charged with manslaughter on account of the death of Mrs. Hannah Monroe, who was killed by being struck by an automobile driven by Helmer last Thursday, is having a preliminary hearing in municipal court this afternoon.

Helmer is represented by Alford & Hunt and Harvey Clapp. John H. Norton, county attorney, is appearing for the state.

Bert Holcomb, who has an office on Lake avenue near the alley, was the first witness. He said he saw the car go by and watched it for a distance of twenty-five feet. He didn't see the accident, but went to the scene immediately after it happened and saw the woman lying on the pavement.

Dr. F. F. Clark, who performed the autopsy on the body of Mrs. Monroe, testified that three ribs were broken and one of them had penetrated the lungs. Death was due to the shock and to hemorrhages.

I. Freimuth, owner of the car, said it is a six-cylinder Peerless. Helmer had been in his employ about one week at the time of the accident. Mr. Freimuth said that he had given the boy no orders to take the car down town, and did not know that it was in use on the day of the accident.

The state has about twelve witnesses to call at the preliminary hearing.

KERN IS LIKELY TO BE INDORSED

Indiana Democrats Vote for Him in Spite of His Protests.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 28.—The following are the candidates for indorsement for United States senator before the state Democratic convention here:

G. V. Menzies, Mount Vernon; Robert W. Miers, Bloomington; Joseph H. Shea, Seymour; L. Ert Slack, Franklin; John H. Lamb, Terre Haute; Thomas Taggart, Indianapolis; John W. Kern, Indianapolis; Lawrence Becker, Hammond; Daniel W. Simms, Lafayette; Edward G. Hoffman, Fort Wayne, and John A. Adair, Portland; and Samuel Ralston of Lebanon.

As the balloting proceeded, Mr. Kern was easily a leader, and though he declared from the platform that he would decline the nomination, he was given an ovation and the next ballot showed a again for him that indicated that he would be the choice of the convention.

WOMEN IN THE FIELD.

Black and White: Some generations ago there was a strong prejudice against women riding to hounds at all. The appearance of a habit in the hunting field at one time would have caused almost as much sensation as an up to date suffragette in the ballot box today.

Addison loathed the idea of "Diana pacing to the meet," and Thomson the poet eranestly besought "the British fair" to remain unsullied by "such horrid joy," which in his view made them "roughen to the sense, and all the winning softness lose." Yet the day has long since passed when it was really considered outre for a woman to hunt.

GREAT CITIES AND BIG ONES.

American City: A city can be great without being big, and if one-half of the energy expended by chambers of commerce and boards of trade in booming their cities were devoted to bettering them the results would be more satisfactory, even from a business standpoint. There are already a number of relatively or actually small American cities to which people of means are moving by choice because they are desirable places to live in or in which to bring up children. Civic virtue is becoming an asset that the shrewd business man will not long overlook.

Horoscope in Her Possession Forecasted Trouble in April.

Mrs. Manette Raab, wife of E. L. Raab, who died in St. Mary's hospital yesterday morning as the result of swallowing a quantity of bi-cichloride of mercury tablets in her husband's room at the St. Louis hotel the day before, was a woman of much sympathetic, poetic feeling. Indeed, it is believed she was so carried away by the force of her own feelings that her mind became obscured to some extent, and this theory may account in part for the tragedy that ended her life.

Besides being a poetess of real merit, Mrs. Raab was a believer in the occult. She regularly received each year a horoscope of the following twelve months of her life and was known to put great faith in this seer's purported glimpses into the future.

Mrs. Anna E. Raab, 806 East Twelfth street, mother of E. L. Raab, is critically ill, and it is believed that the shock of the tragedy in which her daughter-in-law figured is responsible for her condition.

An example of Mrs. Raab's artistic work, found among her effects is appended:

"After Midnight, Cometh Dawn."

"The years come and the years go,
And the leaves of life keep falling;
And across the sunless rivers flow,
With accents soft and whispers low,
The friends long lost are calling,
While autumn his red glory wears,
And clouds oppress the sky like cares—
But the old griefs die and new joys are born—
And after the midnight cometh morn.

"The years wake and the years sleep,
And the past is full of sorrow;
The thoughtless laughs and the thoughtful weeps,
And each the fruit of his follies reaps,
For today is the fate of tomorrow—
And now love tempts us to forget
The old, and old friends love us yet.
So the old griefs die and the new joys are born,
And after the midnight cometh the morn.

"The years live and the years die,
And all they touch they sadden;
But still the heart can time defy,
And hope still with purple flush our sky—
And sober friendship gladden,
And well as we have loved before
In autumn we can love once more—
For the old griefs die and new joys are born,
And after the midnight cometh the morn."

Mrs. Raab had written many poems, but the one that was given the highest tribute of admiration accorded any of her work was one called "The Master's Touch." This poem was published about two years ago in the Hesperian, a literary quarterly published at St. Louis by Dr. A. M. De Menil, who was a cousin of Mrs. Raab and is a distinguished and prominent citizen of the Missouri metropolis.

Warned by Seer.

The horoscope sent by a New York seer to Mrs. Raab for this year is an interesting document and it shows evidences of having been much handled, indicating that the unfortunate woman found it extremely interesting.

"The 'annual' reading is not a life or character reading, but is intended as a guide from month to month, pointing out the good and the evil periods indicated so that you may act in accordance with planetary law and not drift blindly," is one of the sentences in the introductory paragraph.

After telling the patron that the planetary indications portend a year that will be a beneficial one, mentally, physically and spiritually, the seer says that in the spring intense mental excitement should be guarded against, "more particularly during March and April."

Later, the horscope reads: "During the early spring months quarrels and disputes should be avoided, legal matters guarded against, and a tendency to change which is indicated should be overcome, as changes at this time are not advisable."

The "indications" for the months of this year up to this time are given as follows:

"January—The early part of the month some pleasurable experiences are indicated and about the middle of the month some gain through friends. The seventeenth brings disturbing correspondence which, however, will later adjust itself to your satisfaction.

"February—Show few vibrations. The twentieth tends to trouble through overconfidence in friends, which should be guarded against.

"March—The sun in good aspect to your solar sign the latter part of the month produces a better vibration. This is a good month for social and business matters. New acquaintances made this month will be of benefit to you and help advance your interests.

"April—This month produces conflicting indications. Avoid disputes with elderly people or relatives, especially during the first week. Be careful of any letters or papers you may be called upon to sign or write about the sixteenth and twenty-ninth, and do not place too much confidence in reports you may hear about this time, as these are influenced by jealousy and will not harm you."

Mrs. Raab's maiden name was Manette Capatian and she was a native of St. Louis, Mo. The Capatian family was one of the earliest in that city and many members of it have risen to distinction. Her brother, Chouteau A. Capatian, who is a resident of Los Angeles, has wired to Mr. Raab that he will be here next Monday. A sister of the dead woman, Mrs. E. J. Williams, also is a resident of Los Angeles.

For many years Mrs. Raab had been interested in poetry and she frequently wrote poems that are treasured now in the homes of friends. She had traveled widely in this country and once made a tour of old Mexico. Recently she made a trip to New York.

Plans for the funeral are merely tentative, but it is probable that Mrs. Raab will be buried at St. Louis.

It is understood that before she died in the hospital she willed Mr. Raab all her possessions, including a draft for over $1,000, the cash she had with her, and her jewels.

When a physician visited her in the apartments of her husband shortly after she had taken the fatal dose of poison she refused to be aided. Every effort was made to force milk and hot water down her throat, but she simply gritted her teeth with the statement, "It will soon be all over." It is said that at no time did she express regret for her rash act.

MARINE NEWS

STEAMER PEAVY IS ON A SHOAL

Boat Is in No Danger---No Serious Accidents During Storm.

Dispatches from down the Lakes convey the information that most of the boats out in the storm that raged the upper lakes Friday and Saturday, have been heard from. So far no serious accidents have been reported.

The steamer George W. Peavy of the Wolvin line of this city went ashore at the Seneca shoal in the fog of Sunday night. The Peavy is equipped with wireless apparatus and a message has been received here stating that the boat is in no danger.

The Peavy was bound from Duluth to Buffalo with a cargo of grain. Reports of the Peavy state that the boat is out a foot forward. However, she is in no serious danger.

The tug Zenith left Chicago yesterday bound for Duluth. Aside from the thrilling experience undergone by the members of the crew, no damage has resulted to the tug. The tug will pick her barge up at Holland and continue the trip that was so suddenly interrupted Friday.

Reports from Chicago state that the severity of the storm carried the fuel on deck into the engine room, filling the crank pit with the loose coal. The steamer Iowa is on the beach. The barge Constitution has been towed into Marquette.

FEW CHARTERS MADE FOR GRAIN

Congestion in the East Prevents Heavy Shipments From Duluth.

With the grain chartering rate at 1 cent, an unusually low rate, by the way, there is no immediate prospect that there will be an increase The rate on grain cargoes is the same out of Chicago, which shows the scarcity of the demand for grain bottoms

One reason given here for the scarcity of grain charters is the heavy congestion of both wheat and flour in the East Until this congestion is cleaned up, more or less, it is believed there will be little demand for grain charters.

The same congested condition of the flour market is having its effect on the local package freight situation.

At the present time there is a very small amount of Eastern business in sight, although the railroad officials here have stated that they can see good prospects. The large amount of flour in the East naturally provents a heavy shipment of flour from this port.

Coal and ore continue to be the only lines of lake freight that have shown any activity.

BIG BLOCKADE ABOVE THE LOCKS

Down-Bound Fleet Held Up at Soo---Opening Early Next Week.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., April 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—As was expected, the boats which reached the Head of the Lakes and have been loaded, have reached the Soo above the locks and a big blockade has resulted.

It is expected that the boats above will soon outnumber those below the locks. The rainy weather of the past few days has delayed the work of widening the canal and it is feared that the opening cannot take place before Monday or Tuesday.

JUNIATA COMING ON FIRST TRIP OF YEAR.

The steamer Juniata of the Anchor line is expected here tomorrow on her first trip of the present season. The big Anchor line passenger boat is not at the present time running on a passenger schedule, but is carrying freight.

The Juniata passed the Soo yesterday with but little delay, according to the running chart in the local Anchor line office. This fact leads the Duluth officials to believe that the blockade at the Soo has been cleared somewhat.

VICTOR GRAND OPERA RECORDS OUT FOR MAY.

Every previous achievement of the Victor in the recording of masterpieces of grand opera must yield in importance to the splendid series of Faust records just issued, in which the greatest of all operatic scenes is completed in superb fashion by Caruso, Farrar, Mme. Gilbert and Journet.

The first in order of these new records is the "Ballad of the King of Thule" which Miss Farrar sings with surpassing loveliness of voice, and in the dreamy sentimental style which it requires. Next are the two records of the quartet which are magnificently sung, followed by a record of the highly dramatic "Invocation Mephistopheles" by Journet. Then comes the exquisite duet, in two parts, by Geraldine Farrar and Enrico Caruso; and the finale to the garden scene, "See! She Opens the Window!" is sung by Geraldine Farrar and Marcel Journet.

The Victor has secured the services of another famous grand opera artist, Riccardo Martin, who enjoys the distinction of being the first American tenor to be engaged for leading roles at the Metropolitan opera house, and two records are now presented in the May Victor list.

One of the most important engagements the Victor has made in the securing of popular comedy stars, is that of Nora Bayes and Jack Norworth, who, with their inimitable foolery and clean fun, their admirable imitations and clever and witty songs, have become in a very short time two of the greatest favorites on the American stage. Miss Bayes sings "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?" which she sang into success in the "Jolly Bachelors" production. Mr. Norworth presents a delightful bit of foolery, written by himself, which is a parody on certain familiar college ditties.

The La Scala orchestra of Milan, Italy, plays the famous prelude from Lohengrin, one of the most beautiful of all Wagner's compositions.

Other solo numbers and ensemble selections are included in the fine list of the May records that are now ready for the public.

By Alderman Hector:
Resolved, That the Board of Public Works is hereby directed to select some suitable site in a street, alley or avenue on the hillside in the central portion of the city for the location of the portable stone crusher, and cause said stone crusher to be placed at said location for the purpose of crushing rock for street repairs or other purpose, it being the idea of this council that such stone can be furnished in this manner with a down-hill haul to the central parts of the city at a cheaper price than the city is required to pay for such stone, and that at the same time the rock will be removed from places where such removal will materially assist in the improvement of the street.
Alderman Hector moved the adoption of the resolution, and it was declared adopted by a unanimous yea vote of all present, on roll call.
Passed April 25, 1910.
Approved April 27, 1910.

WHEAT HAS A DECLINE

Slight Recession on Little Trading in Dull and Featureless Market.

Flax Prices Stronger on Buying By Shorts Covering.

Duluth Board of Trade, April 28.—Wheat declined today in a dull and featureless market. May lost ⅞c and July was 1c off. September declined ⅞c. May opened at $1.07⅝ asked, sold at $1.07⅜, $1.07¼, $1.07⅛, $1.07, $1.07¼, $1.07, and at the close was $1.07 bid. July opened at $1.08½ asked, sold at $1.08¼, $1.08½, $1.08, $1.07½, $1.07¾, $1.07⅜ and closed $1.07½ bid. September sold at 99½c and closed at that figure.

Flax was stronger on short covering. May was bid at $2.36 and the opening advanced ½c without trading, sold at $2.38, $2.37½ and $2.39½, closing at $2.39½ bid. July was $2.29 bid and sold ½c up, then at $2.31½, $2.30 and $2.33½, the close. September sold at $1.75 and $1.78, closing $1.78 bid. October was $1.65 bid and $1.65½ bid, without trading, selling at $1.70 at the close.

Cash wheat closed on a parity with May. Oats sold at ¾c off. Traders are not impressed by the character of crop-scare news. Durum closed 1⅛c off and rye 1c off at 70@73c. Barley was unchanged.

Light receipts in the Northwest stimulated the cash situation today and gave considerable strength to an otherwise featureless market. The demand is chiefly from the mills, as the elevators are only taking low grades under pressure. The mills paid a premium today for wheat on track, that was said to have been as high as 1c over May for choice lots.

The farmer is a factor in determining values. Deliveries to elevators are small and, with only a few cars of wheat arriving here, mills were disposed to pay premiums for the stuff, as it can be unloaded quickly, without the payment of incidental charges which attach to grain in store. The flour trade shows a slight improvement, but is far from satisfactory.

The market opened fairly steady, although cables were lower. After an initial flurry of short covering at the opening, values declined fractionally and held firm. There was little pressure on the market after the opening hours. Around mid-day trading was quiet, and the market was listless. The price movement was inclined to slight irregularity.

The weather indications are for warmer temperatures in the Southwest. A few days of sunshine in that region will be a potent factor in determining whether or not the damage to the winter wheat plant has been serious. There has been plenty of rain east of the Missouri river but practically none west of it except scattered showers two or three weeks ago. Receipts in the Southwest are light and cash markets are firmer. The Kansas official report was regarded as bullish by the foreigner but at home it did not cause so much concern. The bulls overplayed their hands, the bears think, too soon.

The pit element was bearish and played for another break. Remembrance of the closing strength on two or three days of this week, however, induced caution in their movements. The stubborn attitude of the market was due more to the disposition of the bears to wait until the markets displayed indications of a trend either way, rather than to technical strength.

Russian offers were liberal abroad, cables said, and although sentiment was bullish at the opening on account of the Kansas report, the market declined under pressure of large offers from the leading exporting countries.

The Northwestern Miller said: "The Minneapolis flour output last week increased 340,000 bbl. This makes the output for the week ending April 23, 187,175 bbl against 259,250 bbl and 257,775 a year ago. This week two more mills are in operation, so that the output should show a fair increase over the corresponding week of 1909. The advance of 4½c in the market last week induced considerable flour buying. There were mills which experienced no increase in sales during the week. At present business is quiet with all. While certain mills report shipment directions as coming freely, mills do not make it fast enough."

George P. Erb of Sanborn, N. D., manager of the farmers' elevator at that place, was on the floor today. He said there are indications that considerable durum seed is rotting in the ground. Not much durum is raised near Sanborn, but in the chief durum producing counties this condition has been noted. How serious it is will not be known until later. There will be a slight increase in corn and wheat near Sanborn, said Mr. Erb. Flax and oats will be the same as last year.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Advances Sharply After Rather Weak Opening.

Chicago, April 28.—Drouth in the West and Southwest today emphasized the effects for wheat trades of the unexpectedly poor outlook shown yesterday by the official state crop report from Kansas. The result was a sharp advance in the price of wheat here today after an uncertain and rather weak opening. The downward tendency at the start was ascribed to weakness at Liverpool at the close of yesterday's market there. Offerings in the Chicago pit soon dried up while the market showed a descending tendency. The rebound on dry weather talk quickly followed. Prices opened unchanged to ⅛c lower with September at $1.00⅜@1.00¼ and advanced to $1.00¾.

A decided dip suddenly ensued and was attributed to selling of wheat by the local crowd on the bulge. September fell off to 99⅜@99½c, and after many fluctuations closed nervous at 99¾@99⅞c, a net loss of ½@⅝c.

Corn opened easier on selling by influential houses, but the strength of wheat temporarily helped the market. September opened unchanged to ¼c lower at 63@63¼c and sold at 63c.

There was general liquidation in corn. September after touching 62⅜c, closed steady at 62½@@62⅝c, a net loss of ⅝@@¾c.

Oats started lower on good weather and crop reports and recovered on purchases by shorts. September opened ⅛c lower at 38⅜c, sold at 38¼@38⅜c and rallied to 38½c.

As a result of higher prices for live hogs, prices for provisions opened somewhat firmer but eased off under increased offerings and slow demand. September pork opened 5@7½c up at $21.65 to $21.67½ and declined to $21.60. Fluctuations in lard and ribs were similar but more narrow.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Wheat Pit Shows Nervous and Uncertain Character.

Minneapolis, Minn., April 28.—The wheat market today was of an uncertain and nervous character. May opened ¼c below yesterday's closing figure and after fluctuating in a range of 1c from the high to low, closed ¼@⅜c below the opening. Crop reports from the Southwest were bullish. Foreign markets were generally easier. Local elevator stocks of wheat decreased 375,000 bu for five days. Local wheat and flour shipments so far this week are 378,716 bu in excess of the wheat receipts. Cotton Market.

New York, April 28.—Cotton opened steady at a decline of 3@9 points, in response to indifferent cables, a favorable opinion of the weather map and a renewal of yesterday's selling movement. There seemed to be a good demand for the new crop months on the ground that the coming crop now promises, at the best, to be a late one, but the old crop was weak under liquidation and bear pressure encouraged by the preparations for enormous deliveries on May and the whole market was very nervous and unsettled in consequence.

CONTRIBUTIONS STILL COMING

Duluth's Fund for Fighting White Plague Is Still Growing.

The response of the people of Duluth to the appeal of the anti-tuberculosis committee's appeal for funds to finance the work of the organization for the next year continues to be generous and enthusiastic.

Half a hundred names were added to the list of contributors by noon today and more were coming in steadily with every mail. The amount needed by the committee is $3,000.

These names were added to the list today:

Contributions of $10—Linnea branch, No. 1, Harriet C. Barnes, George D. Swift, Thomas Thompson company, W. Prince, John Gonska and A. C. Volk.

Contributions of $5—Dr. E. L. Tuohy, E. A. Silberstein, Mrs. John J. Tidd, Benn Grimm, J. B. Van Vliet, H. B. Paull, Robert Krojanker, Charles D. Brewer, H. W. Hodgeon, Phil S. Helmick, Warren Mendennall and A. J. Watson, Jr.

Contributions of $3—A. C. Majo.

Contributions of $2—Martin Kennely and J. G. Arnold.

Contributions of $1—L. E. Beiberman, John G. Ross, Emma Schiender, Ida E. Van Stone, F. W. Robitaille, Harry Merritt, J. D. Haynes, A. G. Messer, Arthur A. Michaud, Charles Barta, E. G. Morse, M. J. Salter, Lucien A. Barnes and George E. Lynott.

Revised figures on the contributions reported yesterday make the total to that time $329.50. The total with today's recorded contributions added is $465.50. If the money continues to come in as fast as it is coming now, the committee will be adequately supplied with funds to carry on its work to the best advantage and many persons will be saved from the dread white plague.

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

Influential Selling of Steel and Higher Rate for Call Loans.

Close Irregular and Very Much Unsettled After Slight Rally.

New York, April 28.—The stock market was still under pressure in the opening dealings today, with declines in all but a handful of stocks. Running sales of 8,000 shares of United States Steel were made 81¾ and 81½ compared with yesterday's closing price of 82. Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred and Brooklyn Transit declined 1⅛, Southern Pacific, Consolidated Gas and American Cotton Oil large fractions.

Buying by the shorts caused a fractional rally immediately after the opening, but as soon as this demand was satisfied, prices broke to a lower level than before. Losses reaching a point were steady, numerous and included a large proportion of the active speculative favorites. United States Steel declined to 81⅜. Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha yielded 4 points, Pressed Steel Car 2¾, North American 2⅜, Northern Pacific 1¾, Wabash preferred, Interborough-Metropolitan preferred, and Pacific Mail 1⅝ and Amalgamated Copper 1⅜. The market was steadier at 11 o'clock and dull, and a little above the lowest.

Speculators for the advance were thoroughly discouraged over the evidence of influential selling of United States Steel, following the advance in the dividend rate. The banks gave testimony to the diminished money supply through gold exports, by a renewal rate at 4 per cent on call loans. There was revived an anxiety over crop conditions. Losses of a point or mere were universal before noon. Illinois Central lost 2½, Northern Pacific, and Allis-Chalmers preferred 2¼, Reading 2⅛, Union Pacific, Amalgamated Copper, National Lead, American Smelting and United States Rubber 2, American Woolen 3½ and the list generally 1@1½. United States Steel touched 80⅝. Rock Island preferred rose 2. Bonds were heavy.

The market closed irregular and very much unsettled. Rallies of 1 to 1¾c, the latter in Union Pacific, accompanied the covering of shorts. There was a break of 2¾c in Norfolk & Western on the declaration of only the regular dividend. American Hide & Leather preferred fell 3½ and Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis 4. Part of the rally was lost after the demand at the recovered level left off.

BATTLE OF THE GAUGES.

Railroad Tracks of Many Different Widths in United States.

The American standard railroad gauge of today was predetermined by the tramways in the English coal mines, which were made to conform to the width of the common road wagons.

When George Stephenson chose a track for his first locomotives, he naturally adopted the gauge of four feet eight and one-half inches to which he had been accustomed in the Newcastle collieries.

With the building of the first railroads in America, came the importation of English locomotives, some of which were from Stephenson's shops, and the result was a general introduction of the English gauge as the standard in this country, particularly in New England and New York, and in the sections of the West where railroad construction was financed by Boston or New York capitalists.

Except in Texas the prevailing gauge throughout the South was five feet. In the middle states there was a confusion of gauges. At least seven different widths of track could be found within the single State of Pennsylvania, says Moody's Magazine, and six of these ranged with fractional variations between standard gauge and four feet ten inches. The same condition existed in Ohio.

Many of the most prominent lines were originally constructed with other than standard track. The Erie and the Albany and Susquehanna had a gauge of six feet, as did the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western. The Galena & Chicago Union (now the Chicago & Northwestern) also adopted the six-foot gauge, but after forty miles had been constructed the track was relaid at standard width.

The Missouri Pacific had a gauge of five feet six inches; the Chesapeake & Ohio, five feet; the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, four feet ten inches; the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, four feet, nine and one-half inches; and the Pennsylvania, four feet nine inches.

It was once thought that railroads of a gauge of three feet, or three feet, six inches, were particularly adapted to regions where construction costs are necessarily heavy and traffic light. Experience soon demonstrated, however, that they are lacking in operating efficiency, and they are everywhere disappearing. Within a few years the Central Vermont has relaid the track of one of its narrow gauge branches, and the Southern Pacific has only recently converted its Oakland-San Jose line into a standard road.

Shippers avoided sending their goods over routes where they would have to be reloaded, and the process of transferring freight was extremely costly to the railroads, absorbing a large share of the profits. Some companies laid a third rail so as to accomodate cars of standard gauge. Others shifted loaded cars by means of cranes from one set of trucks to another, and the Vermont Central furnished cars with trucks which could be adjusted to either standard or narrow gauge track.

Asa Whitney, prominent in the '40s as projector of a railroad to the Pacific, proposed to construct a road with a track six feet wide, and Hartwell Carver, in an attempt to outbid Whitney, offered to build a track with a gauge of eight, or even ten feet, upon which should be run cars 200 feet in length. When the construction of the Pacific railroad was undertaken the Central Pacific was started with a five-foot track, while the Union Pacific was begun as a standard road.

The original Pacific railroad bill left to the president the determination of the gauge, and Lincoln decided upon five feet, but congress reversed this ruling and adopted the standard gauge.

WHEAT HAS A DECLINE

Slight Recession on Little Trading in Dull and Featureless Market.

Flax Prices Stronger on Buying By Shorts Covering.

Duluth Board of Trade, April 28.—Wheat declined today in a dull and featureless market. May lost ⅞c and July was 1c off. September declined ⅜c. May opened at $1.07⅝ asked, sold at $1.07½, $1.07¼, $1.07⅛, $1.07, $1.07¼, $1.07, and at the close was $1.07 bid. July opened at $1.08½ asked, sold at $1.08¼, $1.08⅛, $1.08, $1.07¾, $1.07⅞, $1.07⅝ and closed $1.07½ bid. September sold at 99½c and closed at that figure.

Flax was stronger on short covering. May was bid at $2.36 and the opening advanced ½c without trading, sold at $2.38, $2.37½ and $2.39½, closing at $2.39½ bid. July was $2.29 bid and sold ⅛c up, then at $2.31½, $2.30 and $2.33½, the close. September sold at $1.75 and $1.78, closing $1.78 bid. October was $1.65 bid and $1.65½ bid, without trading selling at $1.70 at the close.

Cash wheat closed on a parity with May, oats sold at ⅝c off. Traders are not impressed by the character of cropscare news. Durum closed 1¼c off and rye 1c off at 70@73c. Barley was unchanged.

Light receipts in the Northwest stimulated the cash situation today and gave considerable strength to an otherwise featureless market. The demand is chiefly from the mills, as the elevators are only taking low grades under pressure. The mills paid a premium today for wheat on track that was said to have been as high as 1c over May for choice lots.

The farmer is a factor in determining values. Deliveries to elevators are small and with only a few cars of wheat arriving here, mills were disposed to pay premiums for the stuff, as it can be released quickly without the payment of incidental charges [illegible] to grain in store. The flour trade shows a slight improvement but is far from satisfactory.

The market opened fairly steady [illegible] lower. After an [illegible] of short covering at the [illegible] fractionally [illegible]. There was little pressure [illegible] market after the opening [illegible] trading was [illegible] and the market was listless. The [illegible] was designed to [illegible].

The weather indications are for [illegible] in the Southwest. A few days of sunshine in that region will be a potent factor in determining whether or not the damage to the winter wheat plant has been serious. There has been plenty of rain east of the Mississippi river but practically none west of it except scattered showers two or three weeks ago. Receipts in the Southwest are light and cash markets are firmer. The Kansas official report was regarded as bullish by the foreigner but at home it did not cause so much concern. The bulls over-played their hands [illegible] bears think [illegible].

The pit element was bearish and [illegible] for another break. Remembrance of the closing strength on two or three days of this week, however, [illegible] caution in their movements. The [illegible] attitude of the market was due more to the disposition of the bears to wait until the markets displayed indications of a trend either way rather than to technical strength. Russian offers were liberal abroad, [illegible] and although sentiment was bullish at the opening on account of the Kansas report, the market declined under pressure of large offers from the leading exporting countries.

This week two more mills are in operation, so that the output should show a fair increase over the corresponding week of 1909. The advance of 4½c in the market last week induced considerable flour buying. There were mills which experienced no increase in sales during the week. At present business is quiet with all. There will be a slight increase in corn and wheat near Sanborn, said Mr. Erb. Flax and oats will be the same as last year.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Advances Sharply After Rather Weak Opening.

Chicago, April 28.—Drouth in the West and Southwest today emphasized the effects for wheat trades of the unexpectedly poor outlook shown yesterday by the official state crop report from Kansas. The result was a sharp advance in the price of wheat here today after an uncertain and rather weak opening. The downward tendency at the start was ascribed to weakness at Liverpool at the close of yesterday's market there. Offerings in the Chicago pit soon dried up while the market showed a descending tendency. The rebound on dry weather talk quickly followed. Prices opened unchanged to ¼c lower with September at $1.00⅝@1.00¼ and advanced to $1.00¾.

A decided dip suddenly ensued and was attributed to selling of wheat by the local crowd on the bulge. September fell off to 99⅝@99¾c and after many fluctuations closed nervous at 99¾@99⅞c, a net loss of ⅛@⅜c.

Corn opened easier on selling by influential houses, but the strength of wheat temporarily helped the market. September opened unchanged to ¼c lower at 62@63¼, and sold at 63c.

There was general liquidation in corn. September after touching 62⅞c, closed steady at 62⅝@62⅞c, a net loss of ⅛@⅜c.

Oats started lower on good weather and crop reports and recovered on purchases by shorts. September opened ⅛c lower at 38⅛c, sold at 38¼@38⅜c and rallied to 38½c.

As a result of higher prices for live hogs, prices for provisions opened somewhat firmer but eased off under increased offerings and slow demand. September pork opened 5@7½c up at $21.67 to $21.67½ and declined to $21.60. Fluctuations in lard and ribs were similar but more narrow.

Cotton Market.

New York, April 28.—Cotton opened steady at a decline of 3@9 points, in response to indifferent cables, a favorable opinion of the weather map and a renewal of yesterday's selling movement. There seemed to be a good demand for the new crop months on the ground that the coming crop now promises, at the best, to be a late one, but the old crop was weak under liquidation and bear pressure encouraged by the preparations for enormous deliveries on May and the whole market was very nervous and unsettled in consequence.

CONTRIBUTIONS STILL COMING

Duluth's Fund for Fighting White Plague Is Still Growing.

The response of the people of Duluth to the appeal of the anti-tuberculosis committee's appeal for funds to finance the work of the organization for the next year continues to be generous and enthusiastic.

Half a hundred names were added to the list of contributors by noon today and more were coming in steadily with every mail. The amount needed by the committee is $3,000.

These names were added to the list today:

Contributions of $10—Linnea branch, No. 1, Harriet C. Barnes, George D. Swift, Thomas Thompson company, W. Prince, John Gonska and A. C. Volk.

Contributions of $5—Dr. E. L. Tuohy, E. A. Silberstein, Mrs. John J. Tidd, Benn Grimm, J. B. Van Vliet, H. B. Paull, Robert Krojanker, Charles D. Brewer, H. W. Hodgeon, Phil S. Helmick, Warren Mendennall and A. J. Watson, Jr.

Contributions of $3—A. C. Majo.

Contributions of $2—Martin Kennely and J. G. Arnold.

Contributions of $1—L. E. Beiherman, John G. Ross, Emma Schiender, Ida E. Van Stone, F. W. Robitaille, Harry Merritt, J. D. Haynes, A. G. Messer, Arthur A. Michaud, Charles Barta, E. G. Morse, M. J. Salter, Lucien A. Barnes and George E. Lynott.

Revised figures on the contributions reported yesterday make the total to that time $329.50. The total with today's recorded contributions added is $465.50. If the money continues to come in as fast as it is coming now, the committee will be adequately supplied with funds to carry on its work to the best advantage and many persons will be saved from the dread white plague.

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

Influential Selling of Steel and Higher Rate for Call Loans.

Close Irregular and Very Much Unsettled After Slight Rally.

New York, April 28.—The stock market was still under pressure in the opening dealings today, with declines in all but a handful of stocks. Running sales of 8,000 shares of United States Steel were made 81¾ and 81½ compared with yesterday's closing price of 82. Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred and Brooklyn Transit declined 1⅛, Southern Pacific, Consolidated Gas and American Cotton Oil large fractions.

Buying by the shorts caused a fractional rally immediately after the opening, but as soon as this demand was satisfied, prices broke to a lower level than before. Losses reaching a point were steady, numerous and included a large proportion of the active speculative favorites. United States Steel declined to 81⅜. Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha yielded 4 points, Pressed Steel Car 2¾, North American 2⅞, Northern Pacific 1¾, Wabash preferred, Interborough-Metropolitan preferred, and Pacific Mail 1⅝ and Amalgamated Copper 1⅜. The market was steadier at 11 o'clock and dull, and a little above the lowest.

Speculators for the advance were thoroughly discouraged over the evidence of influential selling of United States Steel, following the advance in the dividend rate. The banks gave testimony to the diminished money supply through gold exports, by a renewal rate at 4 per cent on call loans. There was revived an anxiety over crop conditions. Losses of a point or more were universal before noon. Illinois Central lost 2⅛, Northern Pacific, and Allis-Chalmers preferred 2¼, Reading 2⅛, Union Pacific, Amalgamated Copper, National Lead, American Smelting and United States Rubber 2, American Woolen 3½ and the list generally 1@1½. United States Steel touched 80⅝. Rock Island preferred rose 2. Bonds were heavy.

The market closed irregular and very much unsettled. Rallies of 1 to 1⅝c, the latter in Union Pacific, accompanied the covering of shorts. There was a break of 2¾c in Norfolk & Western on the declaration of only the regular dividend. American Hide & Leather preferred fell 3½ and Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis 4. Part of the rally was lost after the demand at the recovered level fell off.

BATTLE OF THE GAUGES.

Railroad Tracks of Many Different Widths in United States.

The American standard railroad gauge of today was predetermined by the tramways in the English coal mines, which were made to conform to the width of the common road wagons.

When George Stephenson chose a track for his first locomotives, he naturally adopted the gauge of four feet eight and one-half inches to which he had been accustomed in the Newcastle collieries.

With the building of the first railroads in America, came the importation of English locomotives, some of which were from Stephenson's shops, and the result was a general introduction of the English gauge as the standard in this country, particularly in New England and New York, and in the sections of the West where railroad construction was financed by Boston or New York capitalists.

Except in Texas the prevailing gauge throughout the South was five feet. In the middle states there was a confusion of gauges. At least seven differents widths of track could be found within the single State of Pennsylvania, says Moody's Magazine, and six of these ranged with fractional variations between standard gauge and four feet ten inches. The same condition existed in Ohio.

Many of the most prominent lines were originally constructed with other than standard track. The Erie and the Albany and Susquehanna had a gauge of six feet, as did the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western. The Galena & Chicago Union (now the Chicago & Northwestern) also adopted the six-foot gauge, but after forty miles had been constructed the track was relaid at standard width.

The Missouri Pacific had a gauge of five feet six inches; the Chesapeake & Ohio, five feet; the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, four feet ten inches; the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, four feet, nine and one-half inches; and the Pennsylvania, four feet nine inches.

It was once thought that railroads of a gauge of three feet, or three feet, six inches, were particularly adapted to regions where construction costs are necessarily heavy and traffic light. Experience soon demonstrated, however, that they are lacking in operating efficiency, and they are everywhere disappearing. Within a few years the Central Vermont has relaid the track of one of its narrow gauge branches, and the Southern Pacific has only recently converted its Oakland-San Jose line into a standard road.

Shippers avoided sending their goods over routes where they would have to be reloaded, and the process of transferring freight was extremely costly to the railroads, absorbing a large share of the profits. Some companies laid a third rail so as to accomodate cars of standard gauge. Others shifted loaded cars by means of cranes from one set of trucks to another, and the Vermont Central furnished cars with trucks which could be adjusted to either standard or narrow gauge track.

Asa Whitney, prominent in the '40s as projector of a railroad to the Pacific, proposed to construct a road with a track six feet wide, and Hartwell Carver, in an attempt to outbid Whitney, offered to build a track with a gauge of eight, or even ten feet, upon which should be run cars 200 feet in length. When the construction of the Pacific railroad was undertaken the Central Pacific was started with a five-foot track, while the Union Pacific was begun as a standard road.

The original Pacific railroad bill left to the president the determination of the gauge, and Lincoln decided upon five feet, but congress reversed this ruling and adopted the standard gauge.
